CHAPTER X.

AN OLD ENMITY.

I rode slowly, and but a few paces before reining up my horse. Although I was under the impression that it would be useless remaining, and that an interview with Isolina was impossible, for that day at least, I could not divest myself of the desire to linger a little longer near the spot. Perhaps she might appear again upon the azotea; if but for a moment; if but to wave her hand, and wait me an adieu; if but—

When a short distance separated me from the walls, I drew up, and turning in the saddle, glanced back to the parapet. A face was there, where hers had been; but oh, the contrast between her lovely features and those that now met my gaze! Hyperion to the Satyr! Not that the face now before me was ugly or ill-favored. There are some, and women too, who would have termed it handsome: to my eyes it was hideous! Let me confess that its hideousness, or more properly its cause, rested in the moral, rather than the physical expression; perhaps, too, a little of it might have been found in my own heart. Under other circumstances, I might not have criticised that face so harshly. All the world did not think as I about the face of Rafael Ijorra—for it was he who was gazing at me over the parapet.

Our eyes met; and that first glance stamped the relationship between us—hostility for life! Not a word passed, and yet the looks of each told the other, in the plainest language, "I am your foe." Had he sworn it in wild oaths, in all the bitter hyperbole of insult, neither of us would have felt it more profound or keen.

I shall not stay to analyze this feeling of sudden and unexpressed hostility, though the philosophy of it is simple enough. You too have experienced it—perhaps more than once in your life, without being exactly able to explain it. I am not in that dilemma: I could explain it easily enough; but it scarcely merits an explanation. Suffice to say, that while gazing upon the face of that man, I entertained in it all its strength.

I have called it an unexpressed hostility. Therein I have spoken without thought; it was fully expressed by both of us, though not in words. Words are but weak symbols of a passion, compared with the passion itself, exhibited in the clenched hand, the lips compressed, the flashing eye, the clouded cheek, the quick play of the muscles—weak symbols are words compared with signs like these. No words passed between Ijorra and myself; none were needed. Each read in the other a rival—a rival in love a competitor for the heart of a lovely woman, the loveliest in Mexico! It is needless to say that, under such an aspect, each hated the other at sight.

In the face of Ijorra I read more: he saw before me a man of bad heart and brutal nature. His large, and to speak the truth, beautiful eyes, had in them an animal expression. They were not without intelligence, but so much the worse, for that intelligence expressed ferocity and bad faith. His beauty was the beauty of the jaguar. He had the air of an accomplished man, accustomed to conquest in the field of love—heartless, reckless, false. O mystery of our nature, there are those who love such men!

In Ijorra's face I read more: he knew my secret! The significant glance of his eye told me so. He knew why I was lingering there. The satiric smile upon his lip attested it. He saw my efforts to obtain an interview, and confident in his own position, held my failure but lightly a something only to amuse him. I could tell all this by the sardonic sneer that sat upon his features.

As we continued to gaze, neither moving his eyes from the other, this sneer became too oppressive to be silently borne. I could no longer stand such a satirical reading of my thoughts. The insult was as marked as words could have made it; and I was about to have recourse to words to reply, when the clatter of a horse's hoofs caused me to turn my eyes in an opposite direction. A horseman was coming up the hill, in a direct line with the pastures. I saw it was one of the lieutenants—Holingsworth.

A few more stretches of his horse brought the lieutenant upon the ground where he pulled up directly in front of me.

"Captain Warfield!" said he, speaking in an official tone, "the cattle are collected; shall we proceed?"

He proceeded no further with that sentence; his eye, chance directed, was carried up to the azotea, and rested upon the face of Ijorra. He started in his saddle, as if a serpent had stung him; his hollow eyes shot prominently out, glaring wildly from their sockets, while the muscles of his throat and jaws twitched in convulsive action! For a moment, the desperate passion seemed to stifle his breathing, and while thus silent the expression of his eyes puzzled me. It was of frantic joy, and it became that face where I had never observed a smile. But the strange look was soon explained—it was not friendship, but the joy of anticipated vengeance! Breaking into a wild laugh he shrieked out, "Rafael Ijorra, by the eternal God!"

This awful and emphatic recognition produced its effect. I saw that Ijorra knew the man who addressed him. His dark countenance turned suddenly pale, and then became mottled with livid spots, while his eyes scintillated and rolled about in the unsteady glances of terror. He made no reply beyond the ejaculation "Demonio!" which seemed involuntarily to escape him. He appeared unable to reply; surprise and fright held him spell-bound and speechless!

"Traitor! villain! murderer!" shrieked Holingsworth, "we've met at last; now for a squaring of our accounts!" and in the next instant the muzzle of his rifle was pointing to the notch in the parapet—pointing to the face of Ijorra!

Mr. John Dillon, M. P., is to be released from prison.

Sir Evelyn Wood's name is mentioned for Governor of Natal.

The national memorial statue to Daniel O'Connell has been completed. It will be erected in Sackville street, Dublin.

Mr. Milner, of the "Chignecto Post," has been appointed Collector of Customs at Sackville, in room of the present collector, who is superannuated.

Mr. Bliss, of the Customs Department, son of the late Rev. C. P. Bliss, has been ordained at Kingston, Ont., a perpetual deacon under the canon passed at the last Provincial Synod. It is said this is the first time this ceremony has been performed in the English Church for centuries past.

In the close of his lecture on Ingersoll, Mr. George R. Wendling says effectively: "The most notorious outlaw known in the criminal annals of the West—Frank Rande—stood a few months ago at the bar of his cell in St. Louis, the very impersonation of every crime, and with the air of a braggart said to preachers, priests and policemen, to throngs of men and women—I am a Bob Ingersoll man—and every man and woman in the land believed him!"

The following is the reply which Prince Bismarck returned to an address telegraphed to him by the Association of German students after the announcement of the result of elections: "I thank you most heartily for your telegram. I am neither surprised nor discouraged by the Berlin elections. Chronic diseases require time and patients to effect a cure. I am happy to find evidence in your address that the Association of German students is, like myself, animated by a firm confidence in the future." Whatever he may feel, the Chancellor does not show any sign of diminished hope or resolution to carry his aims ultimately to accomplishment.

Application will be made to the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, at its next session, for an act to incorporate a company under the name of the "Nova Scotia Railway Company, Limited," with full powers to acquire wholly or in part, by purchase or otherwise, the existing lines of railway (excepting the Intercolonial Railway) whether finished or not, in Nova Scotia, or any one or more of them, and the appurtenances. 2. The construction, completion, repair and equipment of existing partially completed lines of railway in Nova Scotia. 3. The construction of a line of railway in the Island of Cape Breton and lines connecting with the Government railway in the County of Pictou and the County of Halifax. 4. The establishment, maintenance and operation of ferries and steamboat service between Nova Scotia proper and the Island of Cape Breton, between Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, between New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and between Nova Scotia and the United States of America. 5. The construction, purchasing, leasing or hiring of steamboats, ferry boats, railways, coaches and conveyances, and lines of telegraph in connection with said railways hereinbefore mentioned, and the working and operation of the same for hire. 6. The maintenance and operation of all the lines of railway hereinbefore mentioned, whether now constructed or hereafter to be constructed.

That the Chinaman is capable of adopting our customs and civilization to the fullest extent is shown by the fact that a Chinese student at Marietta College, in Ohio, has committed suicide because a pretty servant girl at his boarding house refused to accept a queue with a man attached to it as her lover, and so decidedly rejected his addresses.

It is understood that the Government have decided to ask Parliament to reduce the duty on unhulled rice seventeen and a half per cent., when imported directly from the country of growth for the purpose of establishing rice mills in the Dominion and a direct trade between the East Indies and Canada.

The trial of Guiteau is characterized "a vainglorious, not far removed from a national disgrace."
