BERNARD - In loving memory of a dear husband and father William Bernard Sr. who passed away Dec. 27, 1964. Your face is ever before us. Your voice we can never forget. You smile we'll remember forever. The comfort of your presence was a joy and blessing. Thinking of the thoughtful things you have said and done. And loving you a little more. For each and every one. The sorrow that you had to make Alone the path you trod is remembered by who you love you.

As you rest in peace with God. Lovingly remembered by wife Rena, Jackie and daughter-in-law Mildred.

BERNARD - In loving memory of our dear father, William Bernard Sr. who passed away on Friday, Dec. 27, 1964. Deep in our hearts lies a picture Of a father who has gone to rest. In memory's frame we shall keep him. What is a home without a father. All things this world may send us. But when we lost our father We lost our dearest friend. Remembered by daughters Helen, Wanda, Pearl and Margaret.

McNINIS - In loving memory of a dear brother and uncle, Charles McInnis, who passed away December 26, 1964. We little knew when we woke that morning. The sorrow the day would bring. God gave us strength, to take it. And courage to live the way. But what it meant to lose you o Charlie. No one will ever know. I sadly missed by sister, Bertha, Helen, Margaret, Alice and nephew, Bob (Montreal).

ly ever there enough milk to be used for drinking purposes during the barren period of winter. Getting back to Mr. Dewar's account: The cow was to subsist on straw and turnips and was quite often fed with alfalfa. It was to be lifted in spring by a special arrangement of sling and block and tackle, because it was allowed to become too weak to arise on her own.

Anything good in the line of hay, oats or meal was held for fattening steers, or horses and young colts raised for sale. Her seed lot in summer was not much better for the check out milkable existence in competing for the necessities of life against the grass croppers like horses and sheep.

"With the introduction of winter dairying which had its inception in New Perth in the fall of 1883, the dairy cow stepped boldly into the world of the well-managed herd rights and obtained them."

BETTER PRACTICES. The late Mr. Dewar, who recalled 'some of the unwise practices in farming which have since been corrected and improved. This took him back to "the days of the early settlement of agriculture which covered the shipment of oats to Britain. It was not until the late 1800s that our farmers for shipping their farms across the Atlantic, and the products of our virgin soil. Our natural market in the United States, had disappeared by the absorption of the Washington Territory into the United States. It was a material success in the restoration of friendly relations with the United States. Nations speaking the same language and having the same ideas. "In the line of markets the dear old Mother Country has always been a good standby. Dewar wrote in 1922. "It was a commercial venture that suited our ship-building industry. The farmers were pawns as far as their interests were concerned."

Another interesting reference to the long ago in Dewar's pamphlet recalls the manner in which the dairy cow was treated in the early days of settlement. "Up to that time the dairy cow was the only forgotten member of the farm household. She was expected to be dry and unproductive in winter unless she was kept in a state of a loose stripper" for family use.

The stripper was a cow whose milk production period was prolonged, because she was not allowed to dry. The cow was then her scanty supply of milk was shared with a neighbour, or a cow was kept in a state of a loose stripper" for family use.

"Of late we have been giving thought to the conservation of field and forest which have always been and always will be a part of our life, and any system is doomed that fails to contribute to the top soil inches of our soil."
