LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Souris.

SIR, Having lately had occasion to remain over at Souris for a few days, I beg to enclose you my impressions of the place; and in connection therewith, I cannot help remarking that "could we see ourselves as others see us" it would free many a blunder free us" and foolish notion. That Souris has many natural advantages, and that it might be one of the healthiest and prettiest summer resorts on P. E. Island goes without saying; but that its people have contrived to make it the ugliest, the filthiest, and the nastiest place in North America, is equally undeniable. They do not appear to have ever found out that such things as paint and whitewash are sometimes used; and they seem to have no conception whatever of the uses for which the streets were intended. Cows in all stages of convalescence, and of all colors and kinds, roam at large on the streets or sun themselves on the sidewalks, while pigs of all grades and sizes wallow in the gutterways. Incredible as it may appear, the streets are actually used as receptacles for barn-yard manure heaps and the scrapings of back yards. In some places wooden boxes are erected in which this offal is deposited, but in other places even this precaution is not taken, and a manure heap actually extends nearly half-way across the street leading to the Presbyterian Church, while the liquid portion of the mass oozes slowly down one street and across another. Most of the people who live on Chapel Street empty all their slops before their front doors. There is one house situated on this street, near a cooper's shop, which seems to surpass all its competitors in the slop business. The street in front of this house is nearly always in a boggy condition, and it is said that the stench arising from it in warm weather is frequently intolerable to those who have not lost all sense of smell. The street leading along the shore, from what is called the Point to Morrow's corner, would be beautiful and pleasant in summer as a promenade and carriage-way were it kept in any kind of decent repair. Notwithstanding the fact that there is a large amount of traffic on this street, no attempt has ever been made to macadamize it, and in wet weather it is often impassable. Little wooden bridges cross it in several places, and they are generally from three to five inches higher than the roadway on either side. But worse than all, every kind of refuse from broken bottles, old shoes, discarded hoop skirts, to dead cats, is deposited along the shore side of this street, part of the stuff falling over the bank and being washed away by the tides, and part remaining on the street rot and molder away in the course of time. There are already some very nice residences on this street and more are in course of erection; therefore let us hope that some little attention will be paid to this particular locality in future.

In driving through the country I have noticed that the farmers frequently shift their cattle pens from one part of a field to another, for the purpose, I presume, of equally fertilizing all portions of the land. Last fall the Knight estate moved one of their tenements from where it formerly stood to a clean place leaving the old cellar unfilled. In the immediate vicinity of this cellar there are several water closets and three or four old barns in which cattle have been housed during the winter; the land around it is also very low and a considerable quantity of water accumulates after every rain. I leave the rest to be imagined. What deadly pestilence will break out here next summer it is impossible to say. I was told there was a board of health in Souris and that the members thereof were still alive. It took the pen of a Dickens to describe the horrors of the Eden to which young Martin Chuzzlewit was alluded; but it would take the pen of a greater than Dickens to do justice to the Eden called Souris. That some faithful epidemic does not break out there and decimate the whole Island must be owing to its healthful situation, and the strong disinfecting sea breezes that continually blow over it. It is a sad commentary on our humanity that we cannot stand the nastiness of the human in bulk, and of all the places I have ever seen to which this saying might be applied, Souris takes the lead.

Yours truly,
TRAVELLER.

Ch'town, April 27th, 1887.

The "Pioneer's" Story—False.

SIR,—In looking over Wednesday's EXAMINER, I observe that you have copied from the last Pioneer a paragraph headed "Whiskey changed into Bricks," wherein a story is told of a resident of Lot 7 who purchased a case of whiskey from Dr. Saunders of Summerside, but who, upon its arrival found that the whiskey had been deftly manipulated into bricks by an ardent temperance woman who had intercepted it en route. There is very little point in the story, and the joke is not against me, but it is nevertheless intended as a thrust at me, and is designed to convey the impression that my Vendor's License is but a veil to cover an extensive wholesale and retail trade. Of nothing that appears in the Pioneer do I take any notice; it is beneath the contempt of all fair-minded men. But when I find the Pioneer quoted by a journal of standing like THE EXAMINER, the affair assumes a different aspect. The whole story as originated by the miserable sheet is false. I never in my life sold a case of whiskey, nor yet of bricks, to a resident of Lot 7, and I shall pay the sum of one hundred dollars to the party who will produce evidence of the name or names of the parties who purchased such from me. I do a legitimate business, in which I am protected by the law; and did I exceed the law's restrictions, would be amenable to its penalties. I am very sure, sir, that you could not have been aware of the reputation of the Pioneer for seurrility and falsehood, else you would have paused before quoting anything from its columns.

Yours respectfully,
CHARLES B. SAUNDERS.

British Trade Outlook.

So far as the board of trade returns indicate, the opening of the jubilee year has been favorable and in the great metal trades, which are to some extent the pulse of the body industrial, there is a healthy revival. But Game, Harrison & Lerner's London export Price Current of the 14th inst., notes among the most significant features of the day, the very decided agitation that has set in among certain sections of the community for a veiled form of protection. This movement has taken strong hold of the millers, the National Association of British and Irish millers going so far as to appoint a committee to fully investigate the existing state of things. Behind the British millers, lies the great body of agriculturists, who are just now suffering severe depression. In some quarters it has been hinted that to prevent agriculture proper quite dying out, a system of bounties might be inaugurated by the government as a compromise between free trade and protection. Even a general revival of trade cannot, however, restore prosperity to the wheat and cattle raisers of the United Kingdom, as against the competition of the United States and Canada.

Rev. Father Dowd.

THE Montreal Star reports: "The congregation of St. Patrick's Church have arranged for the celebration of the jubilee of their beloved pastor, Rev. Father Dowd, the celebration embracing a musical festival, a religious oration and a banquet. What are the Protestants going to do on this occasion? Rev. Father Dowd has been a respected resident of the city for forty years. His moderate course on more than one occasion has prevented religious strife. His sound advice has always been in favor of law and order. He has endeavored himself, not only to the members of his congregation and Roman Catholics generally, but to his fellow citizens of different persuasions for his sterling qualities as a man. Such being the case, we think that the Protestants of the city should join their Roman Catholic fellow citizens in doing honor to the much-respected pastor of St. Patrick's on the occasion of his jubilee. Protestants, too, should join in the banquet, even as Roman Catholics joined in the testimonial to Rev. Dr. Stevenson."

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Bosche's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Samples bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind. mar17 eod & wky

UNATTRACTIVE women are made pallid and unattractive by functional irregularities which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" will infallibly cure. Thousands of testimonials. By druggists. s a w
