permanent or ... if ... ters. When we arrive there, you like us, you shall take the oath, be supplied with a horse and arms, and then become one of us.

'The oath!' said Bryan.

'Aye. No man can unite with the Blue Brotherhood without first taking the oath.'

'And its obligations——'

'Are all explained before the initiation,' hastily rejoined Captain Drake, 'we do nothing in the dark.'

'May I ask with whom you were engaged last night?'

'Oh! a marauding gang of Tories. The cowardly and unprincipled devils have been robbing the farmers below us, on the north bank of the river, of their cattle. These they were driving through the woods for the support of St. Leger's army, who are marching from Canada to infest old Fort Stanwix.'

'And you drove them off?'

'Yes. We were informed of their doings, and headed them at this place. But a few are left to tell of their defeat.'

Immediately after the breakfast, the soldiers proceeded to collect the cattle. This was a work of much perplexity, and it was nearly noon before the drove and the troopers started for the camp.

This camp was situated some ten miles or thereabouts above the scene of the cattle fight, in an open space of ground fronting the river. The barracks were composed of two stone buildings that had been used as farm houses before the breaking out of the war, and a long range of log stables had been appended to them by the troopers themselves. The cleared lands in the immediate vicinity were devoted to gardening purposes, for the use of the soldiers, and was by them most carefully tilled in the proper season.

When the Blue Brotherhood arrived at their own camp, the cattle were secured, and the horses placed in the stable. After these matters had been arranged, Bryan was conducted into the house, or fortress, as Captain Drake called it, and here he was most agreeably surprised at the order and neatness that everywhere met his eye.

The rooms were clean and inviting, the beds spacious and conveniently arranged and all the utensils necessary for the maintenance of such an establishment, in their proper places and in order.

'Here are our quarters,' said Captain Drake. 'Except when on duty, we reside here. If you choose to take on with us, to night shall be set apart for your initiation.'

'The sooner the better,' replied Bryan delighted with all he saw, and anxious to commence his new duties.

'Well, then your uniform must be prepared at once. You see that our dress is but a little peculiar, yet by it we distinguish one another. We have a customer at hand who will speedily fit you out.'

And Bryan was presented to an old man who made and repaired the clothing of the Brotherhood.

The uniform was a simple affair, yet it was far from uncomely. It consisted merely of a deep blouse, or short hunting shirt, of bright blue, worn over the usual clothing, a blue cap, closely fitting the head, ornamented with a cockade of thin silver.

Bryan waited for the coming night with the greatest impatience. So ardent had his desire to be a soldier become, that he thought the hours were lengthened into days, and that the sun would never set. The Captain and the soldiers endeavored to entertain him, but although he listened to their conversation with seeming interest, his heart was filled with a painful impatience.

'Will the night never come?' he would ask himself.

The longest day must pass away, and the night came at length, to the great relief of Bryan.

As soon as the supper was disposed of and the barrack lamps lighted, the Blue Brotherhood assembled in the large room in which they partook of their food. In the centre of the congregation was a table, upon which was the roll of the company, the constitution and by laws of the association, and a Bible.

Before this table Bryan was seated, and the Captain, after silence had been secured proceeded to explain to the youth, the nature and obligations of the oath and compact.

The Blue Brotherhood bound themselves to an armed organization until the independence of the Colonies was acknowledged by Great Britain, or until they were disabled by wounds or natural infirmities, and rendered unfit for duty.

They were independent, and under the control of no leaders but those of their own selection.

The oath bound them to aid and assist one another in all cases, and under all circumstances. It also stipulated that they should stand by their colors until ordered to retreat, and to regard all the proceedings, designs and intentions of the troop as secret, and not to be disclosed, except to an initiated brother.

Bryan cheerfully took the oath, signed the muster roll, and with three vociferous cheers the whole company hailed him as one of the Brothers. Captain Drake then presented him with a complete list of the arms necessary for his arms to weild, and with the uniform, which was already completed.

'To-morrow,' he added, 'you may select a horse for yourself from several that we have in our stables.'

Again the company uttered a succession of cheers, and shook the new soldier cordially by the hand.

When the ceremony was over, Bryan was conducted to his own room, and a bed and a mess assigned to him.

His wishes were realized. He was a soldier in the cause of his country.

How he desired to see Peter Schnapps, and Carl Knipper, his true-hearted confidants, to inform them of the singular good fortune that had attended his wandering footsteps.

In his dreams that night Bryan Blonday visited Van Kempen's Castle at the head of the troop.

In the bright light of the morning he prayed that his dream might be realized ere a long time.

After the morning was over he visited the stables to select for himself a steed. He immediately made choice of a large and spirited grey, whose broad chest and strong limbs promised both speed and bottom. All the old soldiers who had accompanied him commended his choice.

Bryan was now a perfect soldier. All his appointments were complete.

All that was necessary to complete his happiness was an opportunity to put his skill to the test.

This the Captain had determined to afford him, for as soon as he returned from the stables he addressed him.

'Now, Master Blonday, as you are one of us, I design to place you in immediate service, and where your information and knowledge of the country can avail us much.'

'I shall be delighted with active employment,' replied Bryan.

'A few miles below the Van Kempen's settlement,' continued the Captain, 'some friends of our cause have collected a quantity of supplies, which we shall need presently, for appearances seem to indicate that we shall soon be called to active duties in the region of Fort Stanwix. I desire to place a small party under your control, and send you for the stores.'

'I will cheerfully undertake the mission.'

'Are the Tories armed and astir in that region?'

'They are not.'

'Then a small party will be sufficient.'

'Without a doubt.'

'And you are acquainted with the country?'

'Intimately.'

'Then you shall depart to-morrow. During the day I will select your party.'

Bryan was delighted. If he could not obtain an interview with Viola Fordham in his absence, he could enjoy the happiness of passing her vicinity, and that, at least was some consolation. He expressed a thousand thanks to the Captain for his confidence.

The remainder of the day passed quickly and pleasantly to the young soldier. He had but few arrangements to make for his expected march, and his leisure hours he devoted to trying the speed and docility of his horse, and to the use of his weapons.

When the night approached, he sought his couch at an early hour, anxious for his march upon the morrow.

He was destined to a disappointment, for the rain descended in torrents when he arose, and precluded the possibility of a start. It continued to pour throughout the day and night, and Captain Drake deemed it advisable to postpone the expedition for a week, in order that the swollen streams across which the expedition would be obliged to pass, might have time to empty their surplus waters.

Bryan submitted to the new arrangement with a good grace and when, at last the day of their departure did arrive, he felt that the delay had increased his enjoyment.

Some twenty of the most experienced soldiers were selected to accompany him, and when they were ready for their departure, the Captain said:

'Perhaps, as you pass so near your home, you will desire to visit it. Should you conclude to do so, you had better go alone, or the presence of so many of you may excite the ire of good Hans Van Kempen, and be productive of difficulty.'

'I will be discreet,' said Bryan, rejoicing at the permission to visit his friends.

'And do not forget to give my compliments to Peter Schnapps good luck to his house?'

'I will not forget,' said Bryan.

And with a light heart and bright anticipations he moved off upon his journey.

How frequently are our expectations but the reverse of the realities that occur to us.

The march through the fragrant woods was delightful. As they rode along the companions of the young man amused him with the history of their numerous battles since the war, and he in turn unfolded to them his own slender stock of personal history.

In this manner the first day passed away, and they encamped at an early hour, a few miles below the spot where the encounter with the Tories had taken place.

'To morrow night!' mentally exclaimed Bryan, as he rolled himself up in his blanket, 'I shall revisit my home.'

What a hold that bright spot, home, has upon our purest affections.

Which have been extensively used in Great Britain and the United States the past eight years for which they claim the undermentioned advantages over those in ordinary use the proof of which may be seen in their constantly increasing business during the past eight years.

1st THAT from the perfect construction of the lenses, they assist and preserve the sight, rendering frequent changes unnecessary.

2nd THAT they confer a brilliancy and distinctness of vision, with an amount of ease and comfort not hitherto enjoyed by spectacle wearers.

3rd THAT the material from which the Lenses are ground is manufactured specially for optic purposes, and is pure hard and brilliant, and not liable to become scratched.

4th. THAT the frames in which they are set, whether gold, silver or steel, are of the finest qualities and finish, and guaranteed perfect in every respect.

They are the only Spectacles that preserve as well as assist the sight. And are cheapest, because the best, always lasting many years without change being necessary.

The Most Reliable Friend!

Holloway's Ointment,

Its Searching & Healing Properties are known and recognized throughout the World.

The number of years this invaluable Ointment has stood the test of public opinion, (and the longer known the better appreciated) is a testimony of itself more convincing than anything that could be written in praise of its truly wonderful healing properties. In the cure of bad legs, bad breasts, sores, wounds, and ulcers, its effect is marvellous. For ring-worm, scald-head, scrofula, and diseases of the scalp generally, there is no remedy to be compared to it. When assiduously rubbed upon the skin (previously well bathed in warm water this Ointment is quickly absorbed into the system, and cleanses, in its passage, every part to which it is applied.

Glandular Swellings, Mumps Bronchitis, Quinsey, Sore Throats and Diptheria.

In any of the above diseases, immediate and permanent relief is obtained by effectually rubbing this detergent Ointment, twice a day, upon the neck, chest and back. Its acts upon the very mainsprings of life; for through the glands pass all new matter required for the body's reparation and all old particles detrimental to its preservation. The Ointment used conjointly with Holloway's Pills, will act so searchingly and certainly as to effect cures in the most hopeless cases.

Rheumatism, Lumbago, Contracted and Stiff Joints.

Many thousands of martyrs from the above complaints have found life almost unsupportable; yet if Holloway's Ointment be briskly and perseveringly rubbed upon the parts affected, ease may be safely guaranteed, especially if the pores of the skin be previously opened by fomentations with warm water. The gross humors require expulsion from the system; it is therefore necessary to have recourse to Holloway's admirable Pills, which, by purifying and strengthening the system, greatly assist the operation of the Ointment and facilitate and confirm the cure.

Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, and Ulcerations of all kinds.

There is no medicinal preparation in the world which may be so thoroughly relied upon, in the treatment of the above ailments, as Holloway's Ointment. Nothing can be so simple or safe as the manner in which it is applied, or its action on the body, both locally and constitutionally. The Ointment, rubbed around the part affected, enters the pores just as salt enters meat. It quickly penetrates to the source of the evil and drives it from the system.

Erysipelas and Scrofulous Sores

In all irritations of the skin, sores, ulcers, burns or scrofulous enlargements of any kind, Holloway's Ointment presents a ready and easy means of cure. It manifests a peculiar power in restraining inflammation, removing stagnation, cooling the heated blood, and checking all acrimonious and unhealthy discharge.

Diseases attendant on Childhood.

Diseases incident to early life fall more under the management of the mother than the medicine man. Holloway's Ointment should therefore be regarded by her as a "Household Treasure," as it never fails in bringing out the rash in measles and scarlatina; and for the removal of all skin diseases its effect is miraculous. In cases of whooping cough and croup, this invaluable Ointment should be rubbed twice a day upon the throat and chest, and the youngest invalid will derive therefrom the most soothing relief. Two or three of Holloway's famous Pills, reduced to a powder, will augment the curative powers of the Unguent.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:

Bad Legs	Corns (soft)	Rheumatism
Bad Breasts	Cancers	Scald Heads
Burns	Contracted and Stiff Joints	Sore Nipples
Bunions	Elephantiasis	Sore Throats
Bite of Moschetoes and Sand Flies	Fistulas	Skin Diseases
	Gout	Scurvy
Coco bay	Glandular Swellings	Sore Heads
Chiego-foot		Tumours
Chilblains	Lumbago	Ulcers
Chapped Hands	Piles	Wounds
		Yaws

Vegetable Ambrosia, FOR GRAY HAIR.

This is the AMBROSIA that Ring made.

This is the Cure that lay
In the AMBROSIA that Ring made.

This is the Man who was bald and gray,
Who now has raven locks, they say.
He used the Cure that lay
In the AMBROSIA that Ring made.

This is the Maiden, handsome and gay,
Who married the man once bald and gray,
Who now has raven locks, they say.
He used the AMBROSIA that Ring made.

This is the Parson, who, by the way,
Married the maiden, handsome and gay,
To the man once bald and gray,
But who now has raven locks, they say,
Because he used the Cure that lay
In the AMBROSIA that Ring made.

This is the Bell that rings away
To arouse the people sad and gay
Unto this fact, which here does lay—
If you would not be bald or gray,
Use the AMBROSIA that Ring made.
