THINK OF IT!

There's not a house in all the Town
Where nothing needs repairing;
Broken by having tumbled down,
Or from continual wearing.
Why lay such things aside, or worse
Use them with constant trouble?
To do the like is but to nurse
Your cares, or make them double.
Get them repaired, you'll find it pays,
No matter what the line;
And as the ancient proverb says,
A stitch will save you nine.
Bring in your jobbing, great or small,
(You'll surely never rue it),
And if it can be fixed at all
'Tis WALTER DOULL can do it.

Wedding Bells.

A very pleasant event took place at the residence of James Palmer, Esq., of Ozondyke, on Wednesday evening, the 9th inst., on which occasion Miss Mary Palmer and Mr. Henry Howard, of Cornwall, were happily united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. W. Daniel. Shortly before seven o'clock could be heard the strains of the wedding march beautifully and skillfully executed by Miss Lucy Palmer, sister of the bride, and the bridal party took their places. The bride was exquisitely attired in white with a bridal veil and looked very charming indeed. She was attended by Miss Edith Palmer, her sister, who also looked very fine in a costume of white; and the groom, as might be expected, looking very happy, was supported by Mr. R. Nutting Taylor, of Charlottetown. After sitting down to a sumptuous repast, Colonel Irving, of Charlottetown, was called on to propose a toast to the bride and groom, which he did in his usual able and happy style. The wedding presents were costly and numerous, showing the high esteem in which both parties are held. Quite a number of guests were present, and after a very pleasant evening the bridal party took their departure for Cornwall.

Literary Notes.

The number of Harper's Young People issued October 25th ends the thirteenth yearly volume of that unrivalled publication for boys and girls.
The fourteenth yearly volume of Harper's Young People will begin with the number for November 1st. Several novel and important features are announced for the new year, including a new "Mate" story by Kirk Munroe, a series of articles on "How to Get On in Life," by William Matthews; papers on the "Wonderful West," by Julian Ralph; articles on the "Romance of Commerce," by J. Macdonald Oxley; a series of Patriotic Papers by well-known writers; and an unusual variety of short stories and sketches for boys and girls, humorous tales, plays for young players, practical articles on practical subjects, etc. Harper's Young People is acknowledged as the leading juvenile periodical of the world.

One of the most notable publications of the year is the illustrated edition of George William Curtis's Prute and I, which Harper & Brothers have ready for immediate issue. The story itself was first published more than a quarter of a century ago, and has long been recognized as an American classic. It is now issued in a form befitting its universal literary excellence. The new edition contains one hundred illustrations, from drawings by Albert E. Sterner. The introduction is a fac simile reproduction of Mr. Curtis's manuscript, and the printing and binding are all that could be desired. A limited edition of Prute and I of the work is also published, bound in vellum and containing an etched frontispiece by Mr. Sterner.

Push and Pull.

(From Harper's Bazar.)
The old proverb that all things come to him who waits advances a very pretty and pleasant theory, but its literal interpretation makes it capable of great misconception, for if it is in one sense true, its reverse is equally true. Nothing comes to him who waits and does no more. There is nothing in the world that is of any value that has not to be struggled for; and those who sit down and fold their hands, expecting fate and fortune to bring them what they most desire, will meet with the disappointment they deserve.
We have to be governed very largely by the analogies of nature whenever we venture into the realm of the possibilities and the unknown, and there is no analogy in nature of something being given for nothing. The seed has to push through the ground to find the sun; the tree has to draw its sap up from unseen sources to whirl forth its buds; the bud itself has to force its way through obstacles of bark and fibre; the bird has to build its nest with careful endeavor and many journeys ere it feels the little wing beneath its breast; the gold has to be mined, the precious stone dug from the matrix, the diamond has to undergo fierce processes of grinding and scouring before its facets shine like living light. Struggle is the rule of life; were it otherwise, it would seem as though we might all of us have been put upon the planet in conditions of luxury and ease and eminence that would require no effort on our part, and leave us free for all the enjoyment the world affords. But what soft, untempered, worthless metal we should be in such case. It is the fire that tempers the steel, it is the hammer that welds it, the grinding, whirling stone that brings it to an edge.
In running for a race, in seeking any athletic distinction, it is training that strips the muscle of all demoralizing encumbrance, and lets that muscle strive for all it is worth; and training, discipline, effort are the steps to success of any sort that amounts to much. That which is gained without effort comes to us in a spirit of indolence hardly better than that of the dormouse in his sleep, and mentally and morally the recipient is hurt rather than helped by it. Struggle brightens, hardens, rounds and perfects the nature. We are born of it; the very world's famous line "They also serve who only stand and wait," refers to no such waiting as inglorious quiescence would imply, but to a waiting which is effort. If the hardest struggle of an impatient spirit. For the familiar line is true enough, "The waiting time, my brother, 'Is the hardest time of all."

My Lady Spunster's Attitude toward the Marriage Question.

From Harper's Bazar.
The healthiest attitude for the single woman to assume toward the marriage question is also the happiest. She may and should consider that a true, pure love is the greatest earthly blessing that the Creator has bestowed on her sex—the one gift not lost in Paradise. But to think constantly and with discontent of this one blessing, when for any cause it is either delayed or denied, is the surest possible way to unfit one's self for giving or receiving happiness.
Frankly grant to yourself and to your friends, if you like, that some day you hope to meet a man whom you can love and respect, but let discussion and discussion more unwomanly and revolting than a cold calculation of possibilities, taking an inventory of the eligible man in one's circle of acquaintance, or deliberately planning to attract or win another by assuming to be what one is not, can hardly be imagined. What true woman could for a moment enjoy that affection which she had deliberately plotted to win by deceit or misrepresentation?

Having acknowledged her natural desire for the common lot of her sex, the single sister goes bravely and happily on her way, taking up the duty that is nearest and living a perfectly natural life, wasting no time in laying plots, in idle complaining or wicked envy. To the married friend who boasts of her home and family she accords fullest liberty, but claims that she also has great cause for happiness and freedom in golden opportunities. Her vacation days are not dependent on the school calendar or the demands of any man's business cares. She is free to elect where she will go, who shall be her companion, and how long she will stay. The sail or excursion party from which her married sister is debarred by an untoward attack of measles or whooping cough in the nursery is possible to her. Her dresses may be light or dark, high or low, grave or gay.
She has no quarrel to settle with the neighbor's children, no piles of little trussers and stockings to mend. She may sit down in her easy chair when evening comes with a volume of Scott or Browning. She would like the little faces at her hearth, the little homely cares, much better than Scott or Browning very likely; but since she has them not, she has a right to be happy in the way that nature suggests themselves to a woman living alone.

If marriage never comes, if her heart never responds to any demand for its affection, she may without bitterness assert that for her a single life has been best, since it is the one which she has chosen. She may sit down in her easy chair when evening comes with a volume of Scott or Browning. She would like the little faces at her hearth, the little homely cares, much better than Scott or Browning very likely; but since she has them not, she has a right to be happy in the way that nature suggests themselves to a woman living alone.

No Trace of the Bodies.

The St. John Telegraph says: Mr. Daniel J. Bruce arrived home yesterday from Campbellton, where he had been summoned by reason of the recent accident by which his brother, Mr. M. M. Bruce, was drowned. Mr. Bruce says that when he arrived at Campbellton searching parties at once went out on the river to look for the bodies of the three men. Thousand numbers of canoes and boats spent several days in the search no traces beyond the up-turned canoe which was found on the first day, was discovered. About four miles from Campbellton on the Quebec shore, a boat was found which says that on the night the accident is supposed to have taken place she heard voices out on the water shouting. There were three distinct voices and she heard them for half an hour. It is believed that these cries were those of the unfortunate men, who were doomed probably at this point, where the river flows very rapidly. Mr. Bruce will likely remove to Campbellton and carry on his brother's business.

Theological Schools and Their Influence.

From Harper's Weekly.
Schools devoted to the training of clergymen have a bearing upon the national welfare. The clergyman is not only a citizen, but a trainer of citizens. Moral and social questions pertain to his sphere, and although he may not treat these abstractly, yet in the concrete form in which they appear he has much to do with their solution. Even where he cannot solve, his counsels may teach patience and an earnest striving for a peaceful adjustment. Most of all it falls to him to keep the many members of the social organism in sympathy with one another. Were clerical demagogues prevalent in the United States, its power to harm society would be beyond calculation. But the country still looks to clergymen to promote kindly tempers, a scrupulous regard for the rights of all, even the weakest, and does not look in vain.

Delay is Dangerous.

When the kidneys are out of order delay is dangerous. Any disease may follow and become so well established that months of suffering will follow. A gentle tonic like Doid's Kidney Pills is always acceptable to the kidneys and protects them from disease. They are a kidney food.
