

Ch'ship Fight Goes Today; Experts Pick Clay To Win

By JACK HAND.
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Cassius Clay, self-admitted king of the world, rules a string of victories to retain his heavyweight boxing title tonight against 33-year-old Floyd Patterson, the only man to win and lose the crown twice.

Fearful of another quick knockout after seeing three of the last four title matches end in the first round, most boxing people make Clay a cinch. The odds-makers along the garish, neon-lit strip where gambling is legal quote prices that average out to 3-to-1 in man-to-man wagering. They give even money that it won't go 15 rounds.

However, the same experts rated Patterson a sure thing at 4-to-1 against Ingemar Johansson in 1959 and quoted 7-to-1 on Sonny Liston over Clay in the Miami Beach, Fla., bout in 1954 that ended with Liston quitting in his corner, claiming a damaged shoulder.

A sellout crowd of 8,300 will pay more than $300,000 to see the 15-round match at convention centre slated for 10:30 p.m., EST.

Many more will watch the closed-circuit version to be beamed to 225 locations in the United States, Canada, and to the British Isles by the Early Bird satellite. The fight also will be carried on American Broadcasting Company network radio.

MAY HIT $750,000
Fred Brooks, president of sports vision, the closed-circuit company with 1,000,000 seats to fill, estimated Clay's 40 per cent of everything may hit $750,000 and Patterson's 20 per cent may reach $375,000.

Patterson hopes to erase the memory of those two humiliating first-round knockouts by Sonny Liston, the second of which was scored in this same ring in 1963. As Patterson puts it, he is crusading to "take the title away from that organization (Black Muslims) and give it back to the world."

Most people prefer to disregard the crusading aspects of this match and concentrate on the boxing ability of the 23-year-old Clay, who insists on being called by his muslim name of Muhammad Ali, and the experience of the erratic ex-champion.

Those who are inclined to give Patterson a shot point to Clay's close fight with Doug Jones on the way up in 1963 and the fact he wanted to climb out of the ring after the fourth round of his first fight with Liston. They recall Clay has fought only twice in 24 months. The punch that knocked out Liston in the first round last May 25 at Lewiston, Me., still is the subject of debate.

These factors and Patterson's ability to punch as attested in his 22 knockouts in a 43-4 worst career are marshalled in his defence.

CLAY HAS SPEED
But the majority, about 3/4 to 1 in a pre-fight poll of boxing writers, think the six-foot-three Clay has the speed, skill and punch to take advantage of Patterson's weak chin. They point to Patterson's numerous knockdowns and his three knockout defeats, two by Liston and one by Johansson. Clay is unbeaten in 21 pro starts and has 17 knockouts.

Patterson has had five fights since the Liston debacle. He stopped Sante Amonti in eight, knocked out Charley Powell in six, won over George Chuvalo of Toronto in 12 grueling rounds and stopped Top Herring in three.

It was the Chuvalo fight in Madison Square Garden last Feb. 1 that re-established Floyd as a contender. However, Ernie Terrell whipped Chuvalo more conclusively in a defence of his World Boxing Association title in Toronto last month.

They recall Clay has fought only twice in 24 months. The punch that knocked out Liston

WBA withdrew recognition from Clay because of a return-bout contract with Liston and bestowed the crown on Terrell after an elimination win.

Although Nevada is a WBA state and Jim Deskin, executive secretary of the Nevada commission is WBA president, this is being billed as a world championship fight in every gambling casino in town.

MUST POST BONDS
The two fighters are supposed to post bonds that they will make their next bout against Terrell, currently under fire by the California commission for alleged gang control.

Two judges and a referee will handle the bout. Scoring will be on the five-point must system by which the winner of a round must get five points and the loser four or less. There will be an automatic eight-count in effect but the rule about the fight ending after three knock-downs in the same round has been waived.

The fighters will wear eight-ounce gloves and the referee has been instructed to insist that a boxer scoring a knockdown go to a neutral corner.

The ring officials will be announced at ring time. The weigh-in will be held at 2 p.m., EST. Clay expects to come in at about 205 pounds. Patterson is shooting at 192.

ELIMINATE WARBLE FLIES

Complete eradication of Warble Flies in P.E.I. is possible because—Warbles do not fly across water. Warbles do not fly more than a mile in any one direction.

This means that P.E.I. could easily become free of warble flies and with a minimum of effort be kept Warble Fly free!
"Tests show that grub free cattle can gain up to one-half pound more per day than grub infested animals."
