

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

SEPTEMBER 10, 1892.

The Exhibitions—1892.

We are now within measurable distance of the fall exhibitions. The Provincial Exhibition, 1892, will be opened on the 27th inst. It is time to begin to prepare for the entries which must all be made on or before the 24th. We need not enlarge upon the educational value of these exhibitions or their value as advertisements of the products of the Province.

The Kingfisher.

The cruiser Kingfisher, the latest addition to the Canadian Navy, arrived here yesterday afternoon from East Point, where she has been stationed for the last week or ten days, and left again this morning for Gaspe. The Kingfisher is of the celebrated Burgess design, and was built by Joseph McGill, of Shelburne, N. S., the builder of the handsome cruiser, Agnes Macdonald. She is a splendid-looking craft, reflecting the greatest credit alike upon the builder and the Government. The Kingfisher was launched on the 10th May last. She is 107 tons register. Her dimensions are 95 feet water line by 23 feet 7 inches beam, 10 feet depth of hold, and 11 1/2 feet on top. She is schooner rigged. Her foremast is 72 feet and her mainmast 82 feet. She carries 1,750 yards of canvas, there being 600 yards in the mainmast alone. She is finished and furnished throughout in the most approved style. Everything about her is scrupulously neat and clean. Her after cabin is finished in cherry and the forward cabin in pine. The Kingfisher made 10 1/2 knots by the wind at the inspection four days ago, but with a free sheet she could easily make 14 knots. She carries a crew of 16, one 6-pounder gun, and a good supply of rifles and revolvers.

Personal.

Superintendent Unsworth went east to-day. Mr. J. Heber Haslam, of the C. P. R., was registered at the Hotel Davies last evening. Mr. W. A. Brennan, of the Summerside Journal, was registered at the Hotel Davies. Mr. H. W. Anderson, locomotive foreman, P. E. Island Railway, returned home last evening. Bishop Medley, Metropolitan Bishop of Canada, died at Fredericton yesterday and is being interred at the age of 88. At the Quebec Hotel last evening there were registered: S. C. Wells, Sackville; Jas. Levy, Hamilton; C. P. Geary, Montreal. The estate of Hon. Honore Mercier, ex-Premier of Quebec, is offered for sale by tender for the benefit of his creditors. Dr. Handraban, who has been removed from the City Hotel Building, Great George Street, to his residence, Rochford Square. Mr. J. A. Lawson and Mrs. Lawson, of Charlottetown, were registered at the New Victoria Hotel, St. John, on Thursday, on their way to Boston. Mr. John McLean, an experienced miner, returned last evening after a visit to the Montana Silver Mine. He reports good prospects there. The many friends of Prof. Andrews (Mount Allison University) in this city, will be pleased to notice that he preaches to-morrow in the Methodist Church. Miss Bartlett arrived here last evening. She has accepted a position in the Bible Society, N. B. She will be present at the Railway meeting to-morrow. The Archbishop of Canterbury and primate of all England was one of the worshippers in a Scotch Presbyterian church on a recent Sunday morning—the Methlick parish church, Aberdeen. Changes have been made in the composing room of the Boston Herald, as a result of which Forem an Quinn loses his situation. Mr. Quinn was a native of Halifax. His salary was $75 a week. Rev. W. B. King, formerly of Charlottetown and latterly of St. Luke's Church, Halifax, preached his first sermon to his new charge in Christ Church, Cambridge, Mass., on Sunday morning. There was a large congregation. The first victim of the present cholera outbreak furnished by this continent is a nurse in the New York quarantine hospital, Adelaide Merr's name goes to swell a long list of the hospital sisterhood who have furnished to the ranks of the world's quiet heroes. There were registered at the Hotel Davies last evening: H. E. Lyons, New York; M. E. Maloney, Quebec; W. J. Warren, London, Eng.; W. C. McDonald, Montreal; H. B. Potter, Esq.; Captain Spain, S. S. Acadia; M. J. Johnson, Halifax; Mrs. Smith, Boston; D. R. Hinson, Halifax. Honore Greeley's illegible writing was productive of many errors, which were generally discovered in "proof," but on one occasion when he wrote, "This true, 'tis pity; and pity 'tis, 'tis true," it appeared in the Tribune: "This five, 'tis fifty; yes, 'tis fifty-two."

Gen. Godfrey, the colored pugilist, was the principal actor in a sparring contest in Halifax on Thursday evening. The wind-up was to have been between Godfrey and Gunner White, of the Royal Artillery. In the military authorities would not allow White to spar with Godfrey on the ground that the latter was a professional. Godfrey sparred with a local man named Scoullon instead. A CHANGE.—The practice of granting special recognition by the Dominion Government to sailors for heroic conduct in saving life has recently been considered by the Government, and it has been decided that such grant will hereafter be made only on recommendation of the Royal Humane Society, or the funds of which the Canadian Government will hereafter contribute $250 annually.

A GREAT SPEECH.

Sir John Thompson at Petrolia.

THE CONSERVATIVE PICNIC.

Sir John Thompson, who was the first speaker, received a tremendous ovation. He recalled the history of the party during the 40 years, when it was led by a chieftain greater in ability, greater in genius and greater in the hold which he had on the hearts of his countrymen than any other statesman British North America has ever produced. Little more than a year ago that chieftain closed the record of his glorious career. Notwithstanding the great influence which he exercised on the destinies of his party, and notwithstanding the great loss which his party sustained on his death, the speaker believed that that party was now more than ever established in the confidence of the people of this country. (Applause.) He reviewed the history of events since the last general election, when the two great political parties of the country engaged in the struggle over a trade policy for the country. The issue of the contest was that the party led by Sir John Macdonald was returned to power with a majority of about 30. To-day that party counts a MAJORITY OF OVER SEVENTY.

(Applause.) The increase of strength was due to the sober second thought of the people of the country. At the close of the general elections their opponents had declared that the Liberal-Conservative had carried the country by means of corruption at the polls, and some 70 petitions were presented to the courts in the hope that the verdict of the country would be reversed. The result was that those who went out looking for wool came back shorn. (Laughter and applause.) Not only were seats taken from them by one county of the country, but upwards of 15 constituencies reversed their votes. The all-important point, however, was that at the time when Canada had spoken the second time upon the trade question, the United States also spoke on the question of Unrestricted Reciprocity, in terms so disgraceful that no honorable Canadian could or would accept terms which involved the surrender of their commercial independence, and every idea which the Liberal-Conservative Government had struggled for during 50 years. He asked the present to glance at the position which their opponents occupied to-day. What policy had they to present in contrast with that which the Conservative party had been upholding? They all knew that the Opposition started out a few years ago with the policy of free trade. Finding that impossible, they turned to commercial union, and they afterwards abandoned that for unrestricted reciprocity, and after a while they drifted on to free trade with direct taxation, and now the Liberals were ABOUT TO HOLD A CONVENTION to see whether they could not discover a policy for the future. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) A Voice—"And annexation." Sir John Thompson—"There was a little talk about annexation, and took a good long time to get it out of their heads, and they were loyal men. It was not so with the Liberal-Conservative party. This party was loyal, so was the Ministry. (Cheers.) They had had it thrown in their faces in a peculiar way by their Prime Minister, Sir John Abbott, whose life he hoped would long be preserved for his country—(cheers)—had signed an annexation manifesto. This was simply an error of youthful policy. (Hear, hear.) It would be a proud day for the Liberals and their party when they had left their annexation utterances 40 years behind them. (Hear, hear.) The Liberals could not help their changing policy. They did not present to the people from time to time a policy because they believed it to be a sound one for the country, but they presented it in order that it might help them to get into office. If one did not do they tried another. (Hear, hear.) Down in the province from which he came the old seaman said that the dolphin when dying ASSUMED DIFFERENT COLORS, and before he died he assumed a thousand hues. He (Sir John) supposed this to be the fate of the Liberal party in the country. In the convention which is to take place they would see the Liberals take on another color. (Laughter.) The Conservatives stood by the old policy—(hear, hear)—and he was proud to know that within the past few days, in a patriotic speech delivered by the leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, that gentleman had uttered a text which stated exactly the description of the policy which the Liberal-Conservative party had been impressing on the country for the last 14 years. Mr. Laurier had said in that speech: "We must become producers in this country or else become servants of other people." This was the keynote of the National Policy pronounced by the late Sir John Macdonald in 1878, and it was only in 1892 that Mr. Laurier had realized the truth of it. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) The great object of the National Policy and the whole policy of the Liberal-Conservative party was TO BUILD UP THIS COUNTRY, its material interests and its industries, in order that its industries might give work to the people of this country who desire to work, and also give home markets to our farmers and to producers of every kind in this country. (Cheers.) The opponents of the Liberal-Conservative party had declared with astounding impudence that this policy had been an utter failure, and they pointed to the fact that our people were still leaving for the United States. The Government could not control movements of a country's population. There were hundreds of our fellow-countrymen who were preferred to try their fortunes in the centre of industry in the United States, but the Government were able to show by the record of the census that the industries of this country were affording employment for 367,000 of our people—(hear, hear)—and that in the last ten years the number of people employed in those industries had increased by 112,000 persons, or at the rate of 12,000 persons a year. (Cheers.) The wages paid to the employees in those industries throughout the country had increased from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 a year, and yet their opponents declare in face of these facts that the national policy had failed and that the people were being driven out of the country. He asked those present if that policy were abandoned would not the great body of that 367,000 people have to seek employment in the United States? (Cheers.) He did not know any better answer to the objections to the National Policy than Mr. Laurier's own declaration that, not being able to be producers in our own country, we would have to become servants of the people of a foreign country. (Cheers.) This fact could not be better exemplified than in Petrolia. (Hear, hear.) Yet they were to do that the National Policy was a failure. (Laughter.) (To be continued.)

Written for The Examiner. Whittier.

Garnered the golden sheaves; A mellow sun shines a'or; The high heaped granary floor; Faint russet tints the leaves. Full earthy lay him down! Gaily's withering laurels fall As Heav'nly voices call To wear that nobler crown. All that is mortal rest! Rich Autumn's richest bloom Bright-wreath his honor to us; His soul hath joined the blest. Oh Christian poet! thine Down earth's most lowly ways, Through life's most gloomy days, To radiate dawn divine. Fair, sympathetic soul! Loud-voiced in scorn of wrong; Sweet-toned in Freedom's song; Clear-eyed toward the goal. What though thy lyre may never Resound to touch of Time; Replete with strains sublime Thy tones shall peal for ever. Whilst pure, loftier thought Shall o'er thy ashes rise; Thou! Life beyond the skies; Thou! Life not lived for nought Mrs. MacLeod.
