Dartmouth Expanding As One Result Of New Bridge

DARTMOUTH, N. S. (CP)—When the Halifax-Dartmouth bridge was completed, predicted the prophets, this town, with unlimited area for expansion, would become the guest room of Halifax.

The bridge has been open less than a year. But already Halifax is overflowing into this town of 20,000. Last year, $4,289,000 worth of building permits were issued here, an increase of 25 per cent over 1953. And more than half of these were for residential construction.

Halifax, a heavily populated peninsula, has nowhere to stretch; Dartmouth, just a mile away across the long-graceful bridge, is half the province behind it and soiling in the way. New streets are being snaked into woodlands every day.

The value of residential construction last year was $2,709,455; commercial construction included $1,096,000 and the remaining $483,700 was for schools and churches.

NEW BUILDINGS

Permits issued during the year called for the construction of 380 new buildings.

Already Dartmouth has branched into the industrial field with its suburbs supporting a huge oil refinery, an aircraft company and scores of smaller plants. Now, with the town gaining population from its big neighbor, it is reaching towards city status.

Rental units made the biggest gains with 135 living units being constructed at a cost of $735,000. Commercial construction included 11 new buildings—one of them a $600,000 shopping centre.

But while commercial construction shows increases, it is mainly as a place to live that Dartmouth is finding itself. And realtors are still having field days with suburban Dartmouth property.

Alberta Waging War On Disease-Carrying Rats

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's warfare with "warfarin" is halting the advance—and slowly eliminating—the rat, the disease-carrying, destructive rodent in 1950 began invading the province from its eastern neighbor, Saskatchewan.

Prior to 1950 Alberta was the only known rat-free area in North America.

In the first phase of the province's control campaign, bait with arsenic as its basic ingredient was used. At the same time the agricultural department experimented with warfarin, a new poison developed in the United States. Its success since 1953 has led officials to hope that rats will be exterminated.

The campaign against the Norway rat is being waged along a 24-mile and 250-mile-long area that includes 40 townships on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border from a point south of Medicine Hat north to Lloydminster.

Officials report that since August, 1953, no rat colonies have been found west of the 6,000-square-mile region where extensive control measures have been carried out.

The first rat colony in Alberta was found on a farm in the Alaskan district, four miles west of the Saskatchewan border and about 200 miles southeast of Edmonton. It was quickly exterminated.

In early 1951 the threat increased. Surveys showed that by the spring of 1952 there were 39 colonies on farms between Empress and Consort, a distance of 70 miles.

The Norway rat officially was declared a pest and it became the legal responsibility of any person in the province to destroy rats on his premises.

Another move was the appointment of full-time local pest control officers, of which there now are 200. The cost is shared equally by the municipalities and the province, which also maintains two control supervisors and pays cost of administering and directing the over-all program, including the free distribution of authorized poisons.

Th full-scale counter-attack was mounted in June 1952, when N. L. Poulin, a pest exterminator from St. Boniface, Man., started a year-long "rat-proofing" job. Mr. Poulin and his 16-man crew placed more than 140,000 pounds of special rat contact under more than 8,000 buildings where rats were or could become established. The powder, used arsenic as its basic ingredient.

When the campaign was completed in July, 1953, more than 4,800 square miles in the danger zone had been "rat-proofed."

Tests with warfarin proved so successful, the government undertook the second phase of its campaign in the fall of 1953 by distributing the poison with instructions for use, to all farmers and property owners in the danger zone.

The poison, which kills painlessly by breaking down the coagulating agents in the blood, causing internal bleeding, is set out in baits made up of cornmeal and rolled oats.

A water-soluble form of warfarin also is used and along with the solid form provides a deadly "one-two" punch. In using the two forms of warfarin, officials said it is essential that no other food or water be available for the rats.

Officials said other poisons have been used against the rat, but because of its efficiency, ease of handling and comparative safety—it normally is not harmful to humans or livestock—warfarin is the basic weapon.

They now say they think the rat can be exterminated from its foothold in Alberta. As examples, they cite farms, in the border area where, following thorough clean-up and poisoning campaigns, no evidence of rats has been found for as long as two years.

W.C.T.U. NOTES

Considering the different habits to which a person might become addicted, I feel there are three definite angles to be thought of: 1. What effect do they have on the individual? 2. What effect do they have on his family—environment and heredity? 3. What effect do they have on the public?

Everyone has influence, either for good or for bad. No one lives alone, regardless of the walk of life that he may pursue. Influence is like our shadow—it follows us.

Some of the more common habits, such as drinking and smoking, are not only injurious to mental well-being, but are a great physical handicap. Smoking, without a doubt, has been proved to cause many cases of cancer of the lungs. It is estimated that smokers develop cancer of the lungs at least ten times as often as do nonsmokers.

Those who drink may be very efficient, but they could be much more so without drinking. Some think it smart to drink; others feel that they should keep up with the crowd, but never think that they themselves may become addicts. The first drink or the first cigarette is the one that starts toward addiction. Young people especially should have courage to stand up for their convictions; they will be our leaders later; they will be I have never felt it necessary to make a reasonable success in my profession.

It has been a great joy to know that our three sons, who are all physicians, and two daughters, who have both majored in the sciences, do not drink or smoke. My own feeling is that the two habits, drinking and smoking, could well be left off for the good of our present and future generations and to the benefit of our great American way of living.

No word of praise or approbation as to the accomplishments of the rearing of any family should be given without due credit to the mother, and ours is no exception. "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

ATTENTION MONTAGUE RESIDENTS

The Mayor and Town Council wish to thank the many residents who are trying to protect the light pavement.

But there are others who are defying the town by driving through streets which are blocked off, an offense carrying a penalty of a $50.00 fine. Prosecution is proceeding which is most regrettable.

Furthermore if this pavement is destroyed there is no possible chance of same being replaced.

We request the co-operation of all concerned.

Anti-Clotting Drugs Used For Brain Strokes

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Some persons have several such strokes a day, or several a week. Without treatment, many die within a short time when a severe stroke hits.

CLOTS STROKE UP

These strokes apparently come because blood clots are building up in either the basilar artery, supplying the brainstem with blood, or the carotid artery which runs up through the side of the neck.

Autopsy studies showed that fatal clots in these arteries have a layered appearance, as though they had been built up gradually in layers.
