THE BURGLAR'S HAT.

'And where is Mr. Hodson to be found?' 'Well, he lives up by Chelsea. I know his store; but I do not know what street it is in. However, you can easily find it by looking in the directory. 'Thank you, that is sufficient.' Mr. Hodson fortunately was at home when I called. He acknowledged the transaction of the 'hat,' but he had not got it. He had sold it to—he did not know who. 'But you have some knowledge of the man surely. Did you never see him before? have you never seen him since?' 'Oh, yes! I used to see him pass my store almost every day. I had that hat in my hand one morning, brushing it up a bit, and he came up and asked me if it was for sale. I had no particular fancy for it, so I said, 'Yes, for half-a-dollar; and he bought it at once.' 'Of course it fitted him? Have you seen him with it on?' 'Yes, but not lately. I think it must be a fortnight since I saw him.' 'And you don't know where to find him?' 'I do not; but there's a neighbor there who I think does,' pointing to a public house nearly opposite. 'But who am I to ask about?' 'Ah! I did not think of that. Well, I don't know his name, but I think I can describe him.' We crossed over together to the porter-house, and called for some ale. The grocer put certain leading questions to the host, which caused the latter to recognize the worthy of whom we were in search. 'Yes, I know. He had not been here for a week or so, but came last night. Said he had been laid up. Wanted to sell me a gold ring. I did not buy it; but he left it with me to try and sell it for him. There it is.' 'This, said I, 'is a lady's ring. I know a young lady I think it will suit. I will bring her to look at it. Do you know the owner's name?' 'His companions call him Bob Lester. I don't know where he lives, but I dare say he will be here this evening.' 'Will you send him over to me?' said the grocer. 'Certainly. Perhaps you may do a little business together.' 'Not unlikely. Send him over.' I was not sure that I might take the grocer into my confidence; so I thought I might work the oracle by means of the ring. I wanted the servant of the murdered old lady to see this ring. Perhaps she might recognize it. I brought her up immediately to the porter-house. When the ring was shown to her she at once identified it as having belonged to her late mistress. It now seemed highly probable that Bob Lester was one of the gang who had robbed and murdered the old lady. The price the keeper of the porter-house was instructed to ask for the ring was eight dollars. I wanted to negotiate with the owner, if possible; so I made an offer of seven dollars, and was to call in the evening for an answer. I arranged with the grocer to negotiate for the ring, for I did not deem it advisable to show myself in the matter at present. I would remain in his store while he made the bargain, and brought the owner over to me to conclude it. According to appointment, I was at the grocer's at seven o'clock. He went over to the porter-house while I waited in his store. An hour passed away and he did not return, and I began to grow fidgety, when my attention was attracted by a crowd in the street following a drunken man in charge of two policemen. At the same moment the grocer came in laughing. 'There he goes. That's our man who has the ring to dispose of. He came into the porter-house quite drunk, and made such a disturbance that he is going to be locked up.' I quickly followed him to the station. Arrived there I made such a communication to the captain in charge as induced him to have the man searched. In his pocket we found a small canvas bag containing a few trinkets, a key to a Hobbs lock, and a quantity of duplicates. A key of a room door was also found in another pocket. I had no doubt these articles were the proceeds of the robbery at which I had figured, but I could not identify this man as one of the three I had encountered. In fact, from the momentary glance I had of two of them, there was scarcely time to recognize their features. Of the other I saw enough to enable me to identify him in the event of meeting with him. At the station I left instructions that if any one called to see the drunken man he should be detained. I then proceeded to the residence of the murdered lady. Her servant was able to identify all the articles found in the drunkard's pocket, and the Hobbs key was found to fit a writing desk among the lady's property. Late in the evening I made a visit to the station. There I found a man who, coming to look after his friend, the drunkard that was locked up, had agreed to my instructions, been detained. Upon seeing him I had little doubt that he was the man whose face I had seen on the occasion of my encounter with the murderers and thieves. Next morning, on being taken before the magistrate, they were both charged with the robbery and murder, and remanded for a week. I had not previously been able to ascertain where these men lived; but they were recognised in court by several parties, and their whereabouts easily discovered. Upon searching the lodgings of the man first arrested, a complete set of housebreaking implements was found, and the way I fell in with him was rather singular. I was standing one Sunday evening at the bar of a certain porter-house near the Park, taking a quiet glass of ale, and 'looking on,' when a buxom little maid-servant came in for her supper beer, with a jug in one hand and a deer-key in the other. She told the bar-tender how miserable she felt, all alone in the big house, as the family had gone out for the day, and they would not return until very late. There were two men drinking sherry-cobblers at the bar at the same time, who overheard what the tattling girl had said; and as she left the porter-house they quickly followed and spoke to her. Not liking their appearance, and thinking they meant no good, I asked the bar-tender if he knew what house the girl had come from. He told me it was No. — in the same street. I finished my ale and went out to see what was going on. As I approached the house, but on the opposite side, I saw the girl in earnest conversation with the men, and after a time they all went into the house together. I remained in front of the house watching. After the lapse of about half an hour I saw the front door opened and shut again; but no one came out. Shortly after this I saw a light in the second floor, and the shadow of a man moving about the room. I at once understood what was going on; and I immediately returned to the porter-house, and requested that a messenger should be sent (quietly) to the station-house for assistance. It speedily arrived. In the course of half an hour the street door, at which we were stationed, was cautiously opened, and a man, with a large parcel in his hand, was about to pass out, when he suddenly found himself pounced upon and walked off to the station. We left an officer at the door of the house. Upon searching our prisoners we found enough of jewelry, plate, and other valuables in his pocket to stock a small shop. Among other articles was a purse made of a woman's hair; and as it was the only one of the kind I had ever seen, I particularly remarked it. It only contained a bent gold coin which probably you never saw, as none have been in circulation for the last forty years. Having looked up our prisoner, we returned to the house. All appeared quiet there. After waiting some time, it occurred to me that the other fellow might be murdering the girl, or worse; so I gave a loud double knock and ring. After a longer delay than appeared to me necessary the door was opened by the girl. I inquired if her master was at home. She replied that he was not—that there was no body in the house but herself. 'Where,' I asked, 'are the men you let in with you when you fetched your beer?' 'I let no men in,' she replied, greatly confused; 'they are gone.' 'One is gone, but there's one inside now, and he's after no good.' 'How can you say so? I'm sure—' 'I'm sure the house has been robbed. We are policemen, and must search the house.' 'What do you mean? I don't understand you.' 'We'll soon explain everything.' We entered the house, and proceeded to the kitchen in search of the other rascal, but he was nowhere to be seen. We had a long search for him, and at last found him in a small closet. We quickly conveyed him to the station. When searched, nothing was found upon him but a silver spoon. I did not at all associate these men with the murder of the old lady; but I happened to mention the story of the capture to her servant, and when I spoke of the hair purse and the gold piece, she exclaimed,— 'Why, that must belong to poor missus. She had such a purse, and has shown it to me many a time. I could swear to it if I could see it.' 'You shall see it.' When, on the Monday morning I visited the fellows I had arrested on the Sunday night, I fancied the face of the one upon whom the purse was found looked familiar to me. Come to furnish up my memory, I at length arrived at the conclusion that he was the one upon whom I fetched so unluckily a blow. I asked a surgeon to examine his head, to see if there were any marks of a recent wound. The result of his examination was quite conclusive and satisfactory. I had no doubt of my man, and certain evidence produced at the trial confirmed it. The three villains, upon very good circumstantial evidence, were all found guilty, and suffered the extreme penalty of the law. I doubt if they would have been detected had it not been for the BURGLAR'S HAT. Chicago, in 1830, was a fur station, with only four white inhabitants! In 1834, when the town had nearly 2,000 inhabitants, the male population turned out to kill a bear, and before their return had shot 40 wolves. The place was a great rendezvous for savages until 1835, when the Pottawatomies were carted off by the Mississippi. It seemed almost uninhabited by white men, being for the greater part of the time under water and knee-deep in mud, a God-forsaken spot, repulsive to every human sense. Yet so great were the advantages for trade offered by its location, that now after the lapse of only thirty-two years, it has a population of 250,000; a passenger or railway train reaches or leaves the city every fifteen minutes of the twenty-four hours; nearly 1,000 vessels, employing 10,000 sailors, ply between it and other lake ports. It exported last year over 53,000,000 bushels of grain. Its flour mills produce about 1,000 barrels of flour every working day; in the season of three months it has converted 904,649 hogs into pork; receives and sends away about 1000 cattle each working day, and sold last year 614,000,000 feet of lumber. Meantime the city has been lifted bodily out of the quag-mire, and made as handsome as it is flourishing. The lake has been tunneled for pure water, and the river is to be tunneled for railways. Improvements of all kinds are projected on the grandest scale, and the city promises to become one of the handsomest in the world. Ten years ago a few individuals in New York commenced to import small numbers of English sparrows, in the hope that they would multiply, and check the increase of caterpillars and insects, which were destroying many kinds of trees and shrubs. The number imported was not large, and the birds being so combative it was necessary for success to bring them over in separate cages; yet the few have increased to hundreds of thousands; flocks of them may be seen in the streets of New York and Brooklyn, and they are gradually spreading over the surrounding country. Advices from North Alabama state that the inhabitants living at a distance from railroads are dying of starvation, and unless relief reaches them the whole range of counties in the Sand Mountain section will be depopulated. The recent floods destroyed over three thousand bushels of corn and a large amount of food sent by relief associations to the sufferers. The avaricious mind is like the barren, sandy ground of the desert, which sucks in all the rain and dews with greediness, but yields no fruitful herbs or plants for the benefit of others. The memory of good and worthy actions gives a quicker relish to the soul, than ever it could possibly take in the highest enjoyments of youth. Grief knits two hearts in closer bonds than joy ever can, and common sufferings are far stronger than common joys. Whether discretion is or is not "the better part of valor," it is most certain that diffidence is the better part of knowledge. The working men of New York are organizing for the purpose of resisting by legal means the excessive demands of landlords and real estate agents.

WINSLOW, An experienced Nurse and Female Physician, presents to the attention of mothers, her Soothing Syrup, For Children Teething, which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay all pain and spasmodic action, and is SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS. Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourself, and RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANTS. We have put up and sold this article for over thirty years, and can say with confidence and truth of it, which we have never been able to say of any other medicine—never has it failed, in a single instance, to effect a cure, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak in terms of highest commendation of its magical effects and medicinal virtues. We speak in this matter "what we do know," after thirty years' experience, and pledge our reputation for the fulfillment of what we here declare. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered. This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most experienced and skillful nurses in New England, and has been used with never failing success in THOUSANDS OF CASES. It not only relieves the child from pain but invigorates the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve GRIPING IN THE BOWELS, AND WIND COLIC and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied end in death. We believe it the best and surest remedy in the world, in all cases of Dysentery and Diarrhea in children, whether it arises from teething, or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the foregoing complaints—do not let your prejudices, nor the prejudices of others, stand between your suffering child and the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of this medicine, if timely used. Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper. Sold by druggists throughout the world. Principal Office, No. 48 Dey Street, New York. Price, only 35 cents per Bottle. Oct. 6, 1866. Risks taken Daily. Office hours from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. H. PALMER, Secretary. Mutual Fire Insurance Office, Kent St., Charlottetown, 1st Feb., 1867. ALL CURES MADE EASY BY HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT. Bad Legs, Ulcerous Sores, Bad Breasts, and Old Wounds. No description of wound, sore or ulcer can resist the healing properties of this excellent Ointment. The worst case readily assume a healthy appearance whenever this medical agent is applied; sound flesh springs up from the bottom of the wound, inflammation of the surrounding skin is arrested and a complete and permanent cure quickly follow the use of the ointment. Piles, Fistulas, and Internal Inflammation. These distressing and weakening diseases may with certainty be cured by the sufferers themselves, if they will use Holloway's Ointment, and closely attend to the printed instructions. It should be well rubbed upon the neighboring parts, when all obnoxious matter will be removed. A poultice of bread and water may sometimes be applied at bed time with advantage; the most scrupulous cleanliness must be observed. If those who read this paragraph will bring it under the notice of such of their acquaintances whom it may concern, they will render a service that will never be forgotten, as a cure is certain. Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia. Nothing has the power of reducing inflammation and subduing pain in these complaints in the same degree as Holloway's cooling Ointment and purifying Pills. When used simultaneously they drive all inflammation and depravities from the system, subdue and remove all enlargement of the glands, and leave the sinews and muscles lax and uncontracted. A cure may always be effected, even under the worst circumstance, if the use of these medicines be persevered in. Eruptions, Scald Head, Ringworm, and other Skin Diseases. After fomentation with warm water, the utmost relief and speediest cure can be readily obtained in all complaints affecting the skin and joints, by the simultaneous use of the Ointment and Pills. But it must be remembered that nearly all skin diseases indicate the depravity of the blood and derangement of the liver and stomach, consequently, in many cases, time is required to purify the blood, which will be effected by a judicious use of the Pills. The general health will readily be improved, although the eruption may be driven out more freely than before, and which should be promoted; perseverance is necessary. Sore Throats, Diphtheria, Quinsey, Mumps and all other Derangements of the Throat. On the appearance of any of these maladies the Ointment should be well rubbed at least three times a day upon the neck and upper part of the chest, so as to penetrate to the glands, as salt is forced into meat; this course will at once remove inflammation and ulceration. The worst cases will yield to this treatment by following the printed directions. Scrofula or King's Evil and Swelling of the Glands. This class of cases may be cured by Holloway's purifying Pills and Ointment, as their double action of purifying the blood and strengthening the system renders them more effectual than any other remedy for all complaints of a scrofula nature. As the blood is impure, liver, stomach and bowels being much deranged, require purifying medicine to bring about a cure. Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:— Bad Legs Chilblains Fistulas Skin-diseases Bad Breasts Chiefo-foot Gout Sore-ripples Burns Chapped Hands Glandular Sore-throats Bunions Corns (Soft) swellings Scoury Sores-beds Bites of Mosquitoes Contracted and Piles Tumors Sandals Stiff Joints Rheumatism Ulcers Coco-bay Elephantiasis Scalds Yaws/Wounds Sold at the Establishment of PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY, 224 Strand, (near Temple Bar), London; and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the civilized world, at the following prices:—1s 1/2, 2s, 9s, 4s, 6s, 11s, 22s., and 33s. each Pot. There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes. N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder affixed to each box. August 7, 1863.
