Peas Still to Be Reached for Farm Votes

By DON HARRHIGHT
OTTAWA (CP)—The peak is still to come in the political struggle for farm votes in Eastern Canada.
It began in earnest in the federal election campaign last spring. The tenor of that contest seemed to be that the Prairie farmer was compared with federal assistance that was due for grievances of farmers in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.
However, this issue never quite caught fire on the eastern coast. The rural vote of appeal of the Liberals and Conservatives early in the running, but it was the issue of defence policy, the state of the economy and Canadian-American relations.
Now the battle has been joined anew. The last session of Parliament saw the Commons agriculture committee pre-occupied with what many MPs in all parties have identified as the first problem of eastern agricut-ture—the supply and price of grain.

The Conservatives claim to have an answer.
Last Feb. 5, the day the minority Dielenbacher government was formed, the Commons was given notice of the government's intention to introduce a resolution dealing with the eastern feed-grain situation.
In the ensuing campaign, the Commons was told that it had a solution ready but were prevented from bringing it before Parliament because of the opposition's successful non-confidence vote. Since then, a draft bill of the Conservative plan had become available. It is dated Feb. 7—the day after the election was called.

Briefly, the bill would have created an "eastern livestock feed board." This agency would have done all the buying, storing and selling of Prairie feed grains in the eastern market. Its main object was to rid the eastern farm scene of feed-grain speculation.
There reported to be considerable support in the other opposition parties for this approach. Some support also was evident in the Liberal back benches.
However, the Pearson government tackled the problem another way.
It paid for winter storage of Prairie feed grains in the East, but the effect was that dealers brought down their supplies early—piling up a whole winter's supply—before navigation closed on the Great Lakes. That met shipped by rail from the West—all shipments that cost three times as much as sea rates, and push up the price of feeds to the farmer.

In addition, Agriculture Minister Hays told the Commons Dec. 12 that the government now intends—rather than setting up a buying agency—an in-house body that will provide liaison among the various feed-grain interests operating in the East.
This was the approach favoured by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. However, CFA spokesmen had what one MP called "a rough go" before the House agriculture committee.
This was the approach favoured by the opposition MPs who want something closer to an Eastern Canada version of the Canadian wheat board with power to regulate.
In any event, the House committee came to no decision before the last session was prorogued before Christmas. It reported merely asked that at the new session starting in February the committee be organized again "as expeditiously as possible" to resume its inquiry. That request probably will be

Boom in Home Construction May Exceed That Of 1950s

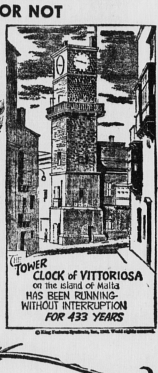

By DON HARRHIGHT
OTTAWA (CP)—Winter house construction in Canada has been expected to level off activity that may exceed the boom of the late 1950s.
Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation officials expect there will be about 90,000 houses under construction on Dec. 31. This would exceed by about 2,000 the record year-end total in 1958.
Even if there is a fall-off in housing starts in 1964, the CMHC officials say, the boom could ensure enough activity for the rest of this winter to be at least on a par with the cold-weather unemployment.
The impetus has come mainly from three sources: do-it-yourself centres.
One is the recent spate of direct CMHC lending to contractors for speculative house-building. The corporation expects 1963 four-quarter loans to hit a total of 15,000. This has more than offset the decline in Nation-wide housing starts by trust and insurance companies.
Meanwhile, the impact of the government's $200 bonus for those buying new houses between Dec. 1 and March 31 has been greater than anticipated, CMHC says. The $500 comes out of down payments, which already had been lowered in mid-year. This has brought hundreds of persons into a market which normally dried had been slipping steadily.

to eight per cent from four. Builders have this date firmly in mind in their plans to start a level of activity.
Until a few months ago, CMHC had been forecasting 130,000 housing starts in Canada for 1963—but with the same as last year, but with a larger proportion in rural areas. Now it has revised the forecast up to 145,000, with much of the increase in single family houses.
In November, direct lending by CMHC was $89,000,000—five times higher than a year earlier. It made 6,910 loans to both owners and builders—but mostly builders—compared with 1,550 in November last year, a jump of 452 per cent.
This reflects government policy announced last fall to provide loans up to $80,000 in CMHC lending to make up for what then was a rapid pull-out of the trust and insurance companies, in the face of rising interest rates that made alternative investment opportunities more attractive.
Interest rates subsequently declined, but the source of private NHA funds had practically dried up.
CMHC officials say they look for the trust and insurance companies to return to NHA making a large part of the current direct CMHC lending unnecessary.
