The Colonial Herald.

SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 1843.

The Halifax and other Colonial Mails for the present week, arrived last night about 8 o'clock. The only items of News possessing any general interest, which we have been able to discover in the papers, will be found below:—

HALIFAX, March 4.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.—The Steamship Acadia arrived from Boston yesterday morning, bringing intelligence from that city to the 1st instant.

A land slide occurred at Troy, N. Y. on the 17th ult., by which nine houses were destroyed, and eighteen persons killed. A similar disaster happened at the same place six years ago.

Capt. McKenzie's trial was not finished on the 28th ult; the Court Martial had at that date occupied 24 days in the investigation of the particulars of the case.

The Great Western had not arrived at New York on the 28th ult. She was then out 17 days, from the time appointed for her departure.

The packet ship Independence, arrived at New York, on the 27th ult, brought 6520 Sovereigns from Liverpool. She performed the passage in 21 days.

Further accounts of the Earthquake that overtook H. M. Brig Ringdove, as we mentioned last Saturday, have been received since. By the bright Splendid, arrived from St. Thomas, on Wednesday, we learn that the town of St Kitts was nearly destroyed on the 8th ult. by an earthquake; Martinique suffered considerable damage from a shock on the same day; and a shock was also felt at St. Thomas. From the U. S. papers we learn that different places in the Southern States sustained a shock, nearly at the same time, and the concussion at sea was experienced by several U. S. vessels, and their description of it corresponds with the Ringdove's log book.—Recorder.

VENUS.—The planet Venus was beautifully distinct at noon this day, in a clear sky,—and although the sun shone beautifully—a little to the southward and eastward of the greater luminary. She appeared like a comet approaching its perihelion, but white and bright as the light of Sol himself. All Halifax was excited at the strange but sublime sight.—Times, Feb 28.

The Nova Scotia Royal Gazette is said to have been much improved, under its new manager. Not having seen a number of this paper since the appointment of Mr. Thompson, as Queen's Printer, we are unable to speak from personal observation on the subject.

We observe that Mr. Thornton has given notice in the House of Assembly, that when the House is in Supply, he will move that a sum be placed at the disposal of the Lieutenant Governor, to enable his Excellency to purchase one of the Murray Harbour Islands, called Indian Island, for the Indians of this Island. The island is but of small extent, being not more, we believe, than about sixty acres, therefore the cost of it, we should suppose, cannot be great; and, as it is a favourite place of resort for several Indian families in that part of the country, we cannot anticipate that any opposition will be made to a small grant to enable them to obtain it.

The House of Assembly, so far from having passed the Squatters' Bill, and sent it to the Council for concurrence, as stated in the Islander of yesterday, have not yet, we are sorry to say, agreed to a single clause of it, notwithstanding all the discussion it has undergone. When last under discussion, the 21st Feb., it was considered that certain alterations were necessary to be made in the Bill, and the debate was adjourned, in order to afford time to propose them. Here the matter at present rests.

At the Eastern Agricultural Society's Grain Show, held at Georgetown on the 7th inst., the Prizes were awarded as follows:—

- 1st Prize: Wheat—Allan Steel, Lot 56—weight, 62½ lbs. 15s. 2d. do. George Parker, Georgetown, 61 lbs. 2 oz., 11s. 3d. do. Thomas Fisher, Lot 61, 62 lbs. 6 oz. 8s. 3d. do. Barley—2 rowed; J. Dalziel, Lot 63, 51 lbs. 10 oz. 15s. 2d. do. do. Thomas Fisher, Lot 61, 53 lbs., 11s. 3d. do. do. David Creighton, Lot 64, 51 lbs. 14 oz., 8s. 1st do. Black Oats—Peter Campbell, jun., Lot 59, 38 lbs. 6 oz., 15s. 2d. do. do. Archibald Macdonald, Panmure, 37 lbs. 14 oz., 11s. 3d. do. do. R. D. Westaway, Lot 59, 36 lbs. 15 oz., 8s. Timothy seed—R. D. Westaway (only one sample at the show), 15s. Red Clover seed, none.

TEMPERANCE.—In pursuance of a previous arrangement, a public meeting was held in the Wesleyan Chapel, Little York, on Thursday evening last, for the purpose of forming a Branch to the P. E. Island Auxiliary Temperance Society. After the meeting had been opened in the usual manner, the Rev. Mr. Waddell took the chair, and briefly explained the object contemplated in calling them together, pointing out some of the blessings conferred on mankind by entire abstinence, and urged upon all interested in the temporal and spiritual welfare of their neighbours and acquaintances, the duty—both by precept and example—of supporting this good cause. It was thereupon—

Resolved, That this meeting, fully approving of the Constitution and Pledge of the Auxiliary Society, do now form themselves into a Branch Association, to be called The Little York Branch of the P. E. Island Auxiliary Temperance Society. A Book being opened to receive signatures to the Pledge, about 40 persons enrolled their names as members. The meeting, which was well attended, was addressed by several members of the Auxiliary Society, and a manifest interest was taken in the proceedings by all present. The following persons were elected Officers-bearers for the ensuing year.—President, Mr. Wm. Brent; Vice do. Mr. Geo. Deacon; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. Abraham Gill.

THE CHASE.—The following account of a fox chase, which took place about three weeks since, at Cascumpeque, on Lots 5 & 6, is perhaps as extraordinary as any to be found on record. The ground lies between Hill's River and the West shore of the Island, and is about nine miles across. On the morning of the 13th ult., there having been a light fall of snow the evening before, Jas. Gallant, son of Prosper, the Cascumpeque pilot, left his father's house before sunrise, to look after a fox; and on the shore of Hill's River caught a glimpse of a silver grey, which immediately took to the woods. He hastened to the spot, and marked its track, and just then falling in with one of his neighbours, who was on the same business, they agreed to return home for provisions, and set out together in pursuit, which they did about 9 a. m., and continued on the trail all day. When it became too dark to proceed farther, they made a camp and fire, slept till daylight, and then renewed the chase. Soon after, they came to the spot where Reynard had quartered for the night, which was under a thick bush. Here he had scratched away the snow, and coiled himself up, starting off like his pursuers with the early dawn. The whole of Tuesday was passed in the same manner as the preceding day, the fox at intervals returning and crossing his own track. On Tuesday night they camped as before, and on Wednesday morning set off as usual, and, as before, came up to the place where the fox had passed the night. Thursday and Friday were spent in the same manner, except that on Thursday night they slept in the camp they had made on Wednesday night. During the five days they had been engaged in this determined and singular chase, the fox had several times approached the western shore, but had invariably turned back, on discovering the opening; and the whole of the time he had confined himself to a space of country of about 8 miles E. and W., by 6 miles N. and S. On Saturday morning—out of provisions, and wearied with their week's arduous task, they again set out, and about 10 a. m., were within a mile of the spot from whence they had started on Monday, and to their great joy found that they had come to the end of his trail, and that Reynard had, for the first time since the start, entered a hollow pine tree of about 100 feet in length, which was lying on the ground. They immediately blocked up the entrance, and proceeded to chop him out, which they accomplished in about two hours, chopping and blocking about twenty times before they came to the end of the hollow which was about the middle of the tree, leaving a space of about six feet in which the chase was imprisoned. This they opened longitudinally, sufficiently wide to admit their axe-handles, with which they drove him up to the end of the hollow. They then got hold of his hind legs, which they disabled—drew him out, and knocked him on the head. The skin of this animal was sold in Charlottetown, last week, for £10 12s. It is worthy of remark, that, in returning, whenever the fox came on the track of himself and his pursuers, he made repeated leaps, as if greatly alarmed. Fortunately for his captors, there was neither snow nor thaw during the week, which enabled them so perseveringly to keep on the trail.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE COLONIAL HERALD.

Sir; An advocate has come forth, in your last number, in defence of the Warrant system, under the signature of PLAIN DEALER—an appellation to which, I think, it is quite evident he can lay little claim, judging from the tenor of his remarks in endeavouring to uphold that and the interest scheme; but I can easily imagine him to be deeply interested in the subject under discussion. I do not conceive that he has adduced any argument, bearing weight with it, why the thinking public or myself should change our sentiments, or why the proposed alterations should not be adopted. What seems to be the worst feature in it, with him, is, the discontinuation of the interest on Warrants, large or small. He admits that a partial issue, in small Warrants, would be beneficial, which clearly proves that what I have advanced carries truth with it; and since the publication of my former letter, public attention seems to have been made alive to its importance, and the necessity there exists of its being reduced to practice. PLAIN DEALER supposes an issue of £15,000, or three thousand Warrants, of Five Pounds each, and puts the question—“If a contractor holds £200, in these small Warrants, and every merchant's counting-house is gorged with such paper, I should like to know whether the holder would be better off than his neighbour, possessed of the same sum in a single Warrant without interest?” To which I would reply, the possessor of the small Warrants would be much the better off, as he could make any payment he wished without being subjected to loss, by discount or otherwise; but the case would be widely different with the holder of the £200 Warrant. If he had to make a payment or purchase, for part of the amount, he must at once submit to a discount of from 2½ to 5 per centum, and consequently would be a loser of from five to ten pounds, and often happens when Warrants are bearing interest. That the counting-houses of the merchants would become gorged with such paper, is a thing much to be desired, though it is very improbable, as it would then soon find its way into general circulation, and in a short time relieve the great depression in the money market, and give an impetus to trade, and instead of these Warrants being designated trash—a title which PLAIN DEALER would wish to affix to them, because not bearing interest—they would pass from hand to hand equally current with Five Pound Notes; and let me ask why they should not, when the security is the same? The Warrants would have this advantage over the Notes, that the holder would be certain of receiving a circulating medium for them yearly at the Treasury; and I think there is not a merchant in the community who would not be more willing to sell his goods in any amount, on government security, in the shape of Five Pound Warrants, than he would be to any of the monied holders of Warrants on interest, at an indefinite time of credit, as is generally the case. We are further told by PLAIN DEALER—“No man in his senses would part with gold and silver, available in any of the Colonies, for a paper medium, confined to this Island alone.” Interest (and being interested) appears to be the only thing that stamps Warrants of any value in the estimation of your quondam correspondent; for when bearing interest, it almost seems as though he would part with his senses to become possessed of them. Would not these Warrants, I ask, be quite as available in the other Colonies as ever our Notes were? Nor are sovereigns or British silver available to us in the other Colonies, only at a loss of 5 per cent. above the common rate of Exchange; but he foresees the evil that would arise to monied holders, should the plan suggested go into operation. The large amount pocketed by them yearly, out of the revenue of the country, in the shape of interest on the Public Accounts exhibits the sum of £960 2s. 10d. paid for that purpose last year, would then be lost to them; there would then be no chance of obtaining Warrants or road orders at a discount; their coffers would not then be filled at the cost of the poorer and industrious part of the community. Do away with the interest, and PLAIN DEALER'S prediction will be verified, viz: “no one possessed of the rational faculty will hoard them” (Warrants) but would be compelled to seek other means for the investment of their capital, whereby the labouring classes would, to a greater or less degree, receive employment, and the desired effect be obtained, of at once throwing £15,000 into circulation, which would greatly tend to relieve the present pressure.

I do not conceive it to be a matter of such immense importance as PLAIN DEALER would wish to attach to it, even supposing a person in one of the other Colonies “should come here with a number of these Warrants.” If the measure suits our own purposes, why should we put ourselves out to offer facilities to persons from the other Colonies to become contractors with Government, and thus carry the money out of the Island? Your correspondent's ideas of economy seem to be rather vague; in supporting the worse than useless expenditure of nearly £1,000 per year, he must forget that the interest on £15,000 for sixteen years would amount to as much as the principal. I think it must be admitted, if the interest is discontinued, it would be a great step towards good and permanent retrenchment in the public expenditure.

I am, Sir, Yours, FIAT JUSTITIA.

Charlottetown, March 2d, 1843.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE COLONIAL HERALD.

Sir; I should not be induced to notice the remarks of A TEMPERATE MAN, inserted in the last Islander, were it not for his statements respecting the Auxiliary Temperance Society; feeling assured, however, that this Society stands too firmly to be affected either by his secret calumnies or more open attempts at defamation, I shall not enter upon a minute refutation of what he has advanced; but take one assertion, and proving its glaring falsehood, leave all interested to judge how far his other statements are worthy of credit. His words are—“That the Report of the Society carries exaggeration (if not falsity) on its face, for having been present at all the meetings, to his knowledge the extent of signatures has been truly about 30.” If I mistake not, the increase during the year is stated in the Report to be about 70. I have, however, made it my business to examine the Roll Book, and find this number to be within bounds, the actual increase (exclusive of any Branch Associations) being between 80 and 90. So much for the boasted knowledge of this veritable gentleman! Before taking leave, I would observe, that I have not been blessed with a classical education, but I am happy to say, that my education has been attended to sufficiently to teach me the propriety of both speaking and writing in a more temperate strain than this misnomered TEMPERATE MAN appears capable of doing. I have also been taught the necessity of “speaking the truth every man with his neighbour;” and that “honesty is the best policy,” which, judging from the false quotation he gives from my letter, it would seem he is yet ignorant of, however deeply he may have dipped into classical knowledge. I would cordially recommend to his notice, a lecture delivered before the Mechanics' Institute, on “The Reciprocal duties of Social life.”—an attentive perusal of which might prove highly beneficial. It seems that, notwithstanding my having written anonymously, the TEMPERATE MAN has succeeded in identifying me, and I should judge quite to his satisfaction, from the positive manner in which he asserts me to be “a lack-brain”—“slanderer”—“hawk,” &c. He could not, therefore, feel chagrined, were I to attempt finding some clue to his identity (and this would be no difficult matter)—for, like the ass in the fable, who crept into the lion's skin, he seems to have forgotten that his bray would betray him—but this is not my intention. There is, however, a little circumstance which, in conclusion, I will mention; at a late meeting of the Auxiliary Society, two individuals were expelled for abusive and disorderly conduct, and on seeing this very TEMPERATE MAN'S remarks, it appeared to me as being somewhat singular, that there should be such a striking analogy between his language, and that made use of by them.

A TESTOTALER.

In every civilized country throughout the world the human hair is always found to be a subject of peculiar attention. Of the numerous compounds professing to promote or reproduce the hair, few have survived—even in name; whilst ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, with a reputation already unparalleled, is still on the increase in public estimation; which fact, together with innumerable testimonials (for perusal at the proprietors) is sufficient to satisfy the most incredulous as to its sovereign virtues so repeatedly shown, in restoring, preserving, and beautifying the human hair.

In Dressing the Hair, nothing can equal the effects of “ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,” on either Natural or Artificial Hair, rendering it so admirably soft, that it will lie in any direction: it produces beautiful flowing curls, and, by the transcendent lustre it imparts, renders the head dress truly enchanting! It preserves the coiffure in the heated atmosphere of the ball room, and neutralizes the effects of a damp atmosphere, or violent exercise. See Advertisement.

LAUNCHED.—On Wednesday the 8th inst., from the Shipyard of Messrs. M-Ewen, St. Peter's Bay, a fine Schooner called the Jeon, of 100 tons burthen. The above vessel was drawn the distance of 600 yards to the river, on a sledge made for the purpose, by 66 horses.—Islander.
