Kidnap-Killers

Soon after the deadly cyanide was cleared from the gas chamber the bodies of the two were hauled out of the prison in two black hearses.

A few hours later Mrs. Heady's body was taken to Maryville, Mo., to await burial today in the family plot in the cemetery at Clearmont, Mo., her childhood home.

Six Airmen

Taking the map, the men followed a telephone line leading from the tower and they came across a trapper's cabin well stocked with supplies.

George Roc, an Indian trapper, saw the men's tracks, followed them and found the men in the cabin. He then took a message from Dolby to the Department of Transport's weather station on Lake Manouane, 150 miles west of here and word of the men's safety was flashed to the outside world.

80-Mile Walk

Rescue came quickly Friday. Two ski-equipped Beaver planes put down near the cabin where the men had taken refuge and in approximately two hours they were in Sept Iles, undergoing examination in hospital.

Dolby estimated that the men walked between 80 and 100 miles during their 11-day stay in the bush. He believed the Anson would be found about 60 miles from Lake Manouane.

The rescue recalled another in the same area about two months ago. On that occasion, seven men were dramatically rescued after they had been missing in the northern wilderness for 30 days.

Their plane had run out of fuel and set down on an isolated lake about 100 miles from where Stapley and his passengers were found.

Stapley told officials he was hopelessly lost when his plane crashed. He made the statement to C. W. Hoyt, superintendent of flying for the Hollinger-Ungava Company, who was in charge of search operations for the missing plane.

Mr. Hoyt later passed Stapley's information on to W. H. Durrell, general manager of the iron ore company here. The missing men were employed on a company project.

Stapley said that when the plane came down half the party thought it was on the south shore of St. Lawrence river and the other half on the north shore.

Sept Iles is on the north shore, about 300 miles northeast of Quebec City. The men were found roughly 150 to 180 miles west of Sept Iles.

There'll always be a Christmas With greetings warm and true, When self is quite forgotten And love is born anew.

There'll always be a Christmas The bells—the candle glow— There'll always be a Christmas Because we love it so.

— Constance I. Heckbert.

IN MEMORIAM

ANGUS. D. McISAAC

The death occurred at the Souris Hospital on November 21 of Angus D. McIsaac, aged 81 years. The deceased was a well known lobster packer in earlier years and was greatly respected and admired by both young and old.

His sudden passing came as a great shock to his family and friends and his loss will be keenly felt among the people of the community.

Left to mourn are his widow, two sons, Joseph at home and Lorne of Dorchester, Mass.; six daughters: Mrs. Joseph Gillis, St. Margarets; Mrs. W. A. Acorn, Souris; Mrs. Arthur Booth, Souris; Mrs. W. J. Moynagh, Ottawa; Mrs. James Howlett, New Zealand; and Margaret of Montreal, also one sister Mrs. Mary A. MacDonald of Brockton, Mass. Two sons, Daniel and Charles and one daughter Eleanor predeceased him.

The funeral, largely attended, was held from his residence at 4, Bernhardt St., St. Margarets church where Requiem High Mass was sung by Rev. George McDonald. Present in the sanctuary were Monsignor J. A. Murphy of Souris, Rev. F. L. Mullally of Sturgeon, and Rev. W. Keefe of Rollo Bay. The services at the grave were conducted by Rev. George McDonald assisted by Rev. W. Keefe.

Palbearers were Messrs. D. J. McIsaac, J. D. McIsaac, R. C. McPhee, Chester McDonald, Kenneth McDonald and Ronald McDonald. May he rest in peace.

Trinity Church Sunday School Concert

Trinity United Church Sunday School held their annual Christmas concert for the intermediate and senior classes last night. A delightful program presided over by Dr. Lloyd W. Shaw, superintendent of the Sunday School, was carried out by the pupils of the various classes and the numbers presented reflected great credit on the participants and the teachers who trained them.

The concert was under the direction of Mrs. J. P. Lantz and Miss Edith Douse. Accompanists were Mrs. E. W. G. Foster, Mrs. J. Curran and Mr. Kevin Johnston.

The opening chorus was made up of a group of girls from Mrs. Gillispie's class. Mrs. J. G. MacDonald's class presented an exercise entitled "Christmas wishes" and a beautiful dialogue by Miss Lillian Duchemin's class was very well portrayed.

Donnie Garmham, a pupil from Mr. MacKinnon's class wrote and took the leading part in a short play; he was ably supported by a number of other boys including David Sellar, Douglas Reid, Jimmie Peaha, Terry Manning, Tony Kelly from Mount Herbert Orphanage did a fine job of a recitation. A dialogue by the girls of Mrs. Van Alstine's class gave a fine interpretation of "The other wise man".

The colorful costumes and the Oriental scenery in this number did much to make this story very realistic. Earl Dixon Foster sang very sweetly a verse from "Good King Wenceslas" Scott Van Alstine lent an air of humor to the programme with a recitation which depicted the quandary one is confronted with in receiving the same gift each Christmas.

Miss Ferne Herman sang most feelingly "O Holy Night". A chorus by Mrs. Ernest MacKinnon's class brought a very enjoyable programme to a close.

Among the interested audience were thirty children from Mount Herbert Orphanage who were brought in through the kindness of the Men's Association. A member of the Sunday School who thoroughly enjoyed the evening's entertainment was Ronnie Macleury, from the Provincial Infirmary.

Santa appeared at the close of the programme and brought joy to all the kiddies present.

Hunter's Corner

The estimate is closer to the latter figure. In my opinion 1953 topped by far any fall flight of geese since 1933. Black ducks are present in thousands and duck hunters are of the opinion, many of them at least, that the 1953 flight is heavier than last year.

Ducks and geese seemed to do everything backwards this fall. It has been the accepted theory among waterfowl hunters that geese and ducks move at high tide level. This fall it might be anytime. I've seen them taking exercise flights at dead low tide. Trading back and forth over the mud flats of along the river channel while hunters, left stranded on some Point or sandbar, watched them with envious eyes and muttered curses under their breath.

To add insult to injury this past 10 days geese have again commenced visiting certain stubble fields. They seem to sense when the heat is off. A few days ago a farmer of my acquaintance drove back to his woodlot for a truckload of wood. Toward the rear of his farm he said he had to slow up his truck because his lane bordering a stubble field

Wants Prison Term To Complete Trade

MONTREAL (CP) — William Cowan, 65-year-old ex-convict who pleaded guilty earlier this week to a attempted burglary, asked Judge Rene Therberge Friday to be sent back to prison to complete his apprenticeship in the shoemaking trade.

"It's a good trade, and the last time I was in penitentiary I didn't have sufficient time to finish my apprenticeship," he explained.

"Just because you have a bad record prior to 1936 is no reason why I should send you to prison" said the judge.

But the judge obliged with a two-year sentence when Cowan said: "I feel that if I can complete learning my trade, I'll have something to earn my living with in my old days."

was covered with geese . . . 50 or more of them. They didn't seem to be greatly alarmed. Clusters of black necks were held high but they walked a few steps before taking wing. It was a leisurely taxi takeoff—not a standing jump that took them 30 feet in the air at the first drive. I imagine somebody's mouth is drooling right now but it would be good advice to think once or twice and maybe three times before puffing a break . . . I have quite a few contacts in this particular area.

This change of tune by Jack Frost will put the white bunnies in prime condition. I never took any kick out of hunting rabbits 'til after the first sharp frost. It seems to prime them up and improve the quality of the meat. The speedsters with the powder-puff tails are quite plentiful in some areas and scarce enough in others . . . In other words they are spotty. Hunters have had pretty good luck. It's nothing unusual for a team of gunners with hounds to bag from seven to nine in an afternoon. Some hunters are satisfied with a pair. They like to listen to the music of the hounds and inhale the tangy spruce scented air. Frost tempered sunshine on white snow, a background of green spruce and the baying of the hounds ringing clear and sweet is a day worth while in anybody's life. As I said some are satisfied with a pair and are willing to leave the rest for another day . . . they keep just as well in the woods as they do in a deep freeze and one has the joy of anticipation to the good.

Rabbits are heavily hunted and when the snow deepens and a crust forms Brer Fox will find the going tougher in his mousing and will give the fellows with the white coats and black ears more attention. After all it's not always the amount of game one brings home that really makes the day. A pair of rabbits are sufficient to make a savoury fry, stew or pot-pie for the average family so what more does a hunter want.
