INSIDE IS A WELL EQUIPPED LAB

Mobile Public Health Lab Work On Quahaug Cleansing

Working in the Montague area at the present time is a mobile laboratory unit, owned by the Dept. of National Health and Welfare.

Working the unit are: J. M. Kelly, Dr. A. E. Larner and I. E. Erdman all of Ottawa. They are seen standing in that order. Mr. Kelly and Mr. Erdman have been with the unit since it was built in 1950. The unit is here to assist the Dept. of Fisheries in a project which includes a check of shell fish and water pollution, from the point of view of health, particularly with reference to the purification of polluted quahaugs.

The mobile lab is a complete unit within itself. All that is required is an electric socket and a water tap to hook up the appliances. It is completely equipped with sterlizer, incubators, bunsen burners, test tubes, water sample bottles, refrigerator etc.

This is the largest and best equipped mobile lab in Canada. It was built for the Dept. of Health by Motor Coach Industries of Winnipeg, at a cost of approximately $30,000. and is used in bacteriological surveys.

The unit is available to any Province free of cost, bacterological work, such as testing of raw milk, private wells, restaurants, dairies, etc. It was requested to come to P. E. I. by Mr. T. J. Kickam, M. P. and Neil A. Matheson, M. P., local Members in the Federal House

Mr. Kelly Mr. Erdman nd Dr. Larner are accompanied by their wives and families and expect to be here until sometime in September.

St. John 11, Verses 25, 26.

The pallbearers were Messrs. William Collins, Otis McAssey, Joseph Kelly, Wilson MacDonald, Murdock MacDonald, and Frank Kelly, Interment was in Lorne Valley cemetery.

Major War Could Not Be Fought Without A-Bomb

CAMP GAGETOWN, N.B. (CP) —The commmander-in-chief of the northern army group in Europe said Sunday major war could not be fought with anything but nuclear weapons" and this mass destruction would likely be short lived.

Gen. Sir Richard Nelson Gale, DSO, Mc., whose troops occupy the northern area of West Germany, told a press conference that "The length of any future war is a very difficult question to answer. But if there is all out atomic destruction it can only last so long, then it's a matter of who is standing up."

"Perhaps," he said, It would be 10 days or even less."

Gen. Gale is here to watch the 1st Canadian Infantry Division stage the first big atomic military exercise in Canada, and because this deals with a difficult problem he finds it one of the most interesting I have ever seen."

He spent much of Sunday in a bush uniform watching the Canadian troops fighting a mock battle for the control of the front, and later at the press conference he strongly supported army power for any future nuclear battles.

NEED GROUND TROOPS

"You still need ground troops to occupy a country," he said, "and there has to be troops to protect airfields, radar stations and other installations. I think the present proportion of land forces to air and naval forces is about right."

He foresees little possibility of guided missile development affecting army manpower because "they should affect the air force more than the army. It doesn't make any difference to the army whether it carries a pilot or whether it is a mechanical device.

NATO forces now are "very well prepared" but whether or not atomic power would immediately enter an outbreak of war "is a political question on which I could not give an opinion. But from a military viewpoint. it would be used."

Conscription of military personnel, he said, is a matter for each individual country to decide and "it depends on whether a country can raise enough volunteers for its commitments. I suppose everyone would like to do away with conscription."

Gen. Gale, whose army is separated by two zones from Canadians in Germany, said Canada's forces are enjoying "extremely food" relation with the Germans and "I think they are very well accepted."

The Canadian Army, he said, "is well disciplined."

Royal Dog Bites Guards Officer

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — Guards Lieut. John Morrogh-Bernard possessed a pair of ripped pants and a mounting admiration for young Prince Charles today as the result of being nipped by a dog from Buckingham Palace.

"It was deeply embarrassing," said the dashing—but not quite dashing enough for safety—young officer as he related the incident, which took place last week.

The drama of the royal dog, a royal prince and the seat of a guardsman's trousers took place in the royal park of St. James located near the palace.

Dressed his off-duty clothes—a dark blue suit, stiff collar, derby hat and a furled umbrella—Morrogh-Bernard of the Irish Guards was making his dignified way across the park. One of the royal Corgis, a long-bodied breed of Welsh working dog with short legs, caught sight of him.

"The dog was being exercised by Prince Charles, Princess Anne and a nurse," said the lieutenant. "I was a few yards away when the dog came whisking toward me, yapping loudly."

The officer made a small dash, but he was too late.

"I half turned," he said. "The dog leaped, made one snap—and I headed back to barracks."

Prince Charles ran after the officer, who was beating a dignified retreat and half holding the snagged seat of his trousers. The seven - year - old prince made anxious inquiries. The guardsman assured his Royal Highness that although his pants were torn his skin was whole.
