Says Universities Need Women

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Claude T. Bissell, president of Carleton University, says Canadian universities need more women students and teachers.

Speaking at the closing exercises of a private school for girls, Dr. Bissell said Thursday there are only about 16,000 women attending university in Canada against 60,000 men.

He said men students increasingly are "deserting the more traditional studies in the humanities for studies that attract by the promise of more immediate rewards" like business administration, engineering, medicine, and dentstry.

"Increasingly, then, the strength of tese studis (in the humanities) will dpend upon th women in our universities," he said.

Also it was a "well - known sociological and psychological fact" that girls mature far more quickly and more surely than young men and bring to the university "a sophistication . . . a social awareness and sureness that is of the utmost value."
