Islanders Wed In Banff

Seen following their marriage ceremony at St. George's Anglican Church, Banff, are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wright Coles (center). Extreme left and extreme right are their attendants, Mr. John Ferguson of Vancouver and bridesmaid, Miss Bernice Lidstone of Summerside, P. E. I.

A wedding of interest to Prince Edward Islanders took place at St. George's Anglican Church, Banff, Alberta, on Saturday morning June 20, when Florine Elizabeth Evans of Charlottetown, P. E. I. daughter of Mrs. J. Gordon Evans and the late Mr. Evans, exchanged vows in an impressive double-ring ceremony with F. L. Millard Wright Coles, C. E., D. F. C. son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Coles of Milton, P. E. I. Rev. Canon H. T. Montgomery officiated. Wedding music was played by the church organist.

The church was beautifully decorated with white peonies, irises and carnations.

The bride wore a street-length dress of jasmine silk organza over taffeta, fashioned in draped bodice and full skirt. Her headpiece was a matching bandeau of flowers and velvet ribbon; other accessories were in echoing shade. She carried a gold-embossed prayer book, a gift of St. Paul's Sunday School, with ribbon streamers, caught by clusters of rosebuds and stephanotis.

The bride was attended by Miss Bernice Lidstone of Summerside, P. E. I. who wore a similarly-styled dress of rose taffeta. She carried a colonial bouquet of roses and sweet peas.

The groom was supported by Mr. John Ferguson of Vancouver, B. C. As the bridal party left the church, the lovely Chimes of "St. George's In-The-Pines" rang out clearly the strains of "O Perfect Love."

The reception took place at Homestead Hotel where the decorations were assorted white and yellow blossoms, white candles in candelabra, arranged by Mrs. Gammann. The toast to the bride was proposed by Canon Montgomery and fittingly responded to by the groom. An unique part of the festival was the playing of a beautiful hymn, recorded earlier by Miss Barbara Rogers and Mr. Elmer Power of Charlottetown.

A large number of telegrams of congratulations were received from friends in this Province and other parts of Canada and the U. S. Following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Coles left by motor for a honeymoon in the Western Provinces.

On return they will take up residence in Canmore, Alberta, where the groom is attached to Montreal Engineering Co. The bride is a graduate of Prince of Wales College and a former employee of Science Service Laboratory, Charlottetown. The groom is a graduate of Dalhousie University and Nova Scotia Technical College.

The Stars Say - -

For Tomorrow YOU may find it profitable to seek the cooperation of another this day. If such a situation should develop, accept the situation with equanimity. Do not feel just because you are carefully considered plans have hit a slight snag, that you are a failure. The viewpoint of an outsider is often valuable, not only because of a difference in perspective, but because he may consider angles that you have overlooked.

Socially, the day should be a most pleasurable one from the standpoint of relaxation and recreation in domestic affairs, especially if shared with loved ones. Outdoor and group activities are especially favored.

For the Birthday If tomorrow is your birthday, your horoscope promises much in the way of progress in business and happiness in romantic and domestic affairs. Financial matters should prosper by early fall, but it would be unwise, however, to increase expenditures immediately. It would be better to consolidate your gains and build up a surplus. Unexpected opportunities await you at the beginning of the new year and it may be necessary for you to make a substantial cash outlay in order to take advantage of them.

During October you may have an opportunity to travel, but whether you accept it or not, the last three months of 1953 should be unusually stimulating. Social affairs in which you will have a part should be at their liveliest, and new contacts can bring increased popularity and prestige.

A child born on this day will be practical, loyal and a conscientious worker.

Day After Tomorrow TRY, this day, to enlarge the scope of your activities and take advantage of the slightest opportunity to better your conditions. The sidereal influences favor harmonious relationships in both business and personal matters, so take advantage of the situation to win cooperation in putting over cherished plans. It is an excellent period for making the most of your capabilities.

The evening hours are fine for romance, courtship and social affairs, with special emphasis on group activities which have a cultural aspect. Creative efforts should meet with exceptional success.

If It Is Your Birthday If tomorrow is your birthday, the months ahead should see your self-confidence more than justified. Others may have tried to discourage your ambitious plans during the past few months but, if you have kept to your habit of steady endeavor in spite of them, the results should be evident within the next two months.

Despite progress in your work with corresponding financial reward, however, your greatest happiness in 1953 will probably come from your personal relationships. This is an outstanding year where you are concerned for fostering new friendships, strengthening old ones and making contacts which will be of invaluable aid in the future. Take advantage of this propitious period, for harmony with others is one of the surest methods of achieving serenity and peace of mind.

A child born on this day will be talented, idealistic and fond of travel.

That Body Of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

BATHING THE EYES When an irritating substance gets into the eye and must be washed out or the eye is very painful from any cause, hot bathing can be soothing and comforting. Washing out the eye requires that the patient should be lying down, whether patient is in hospital or at home.

In the Practitioner, Dr. J. R. Much outlines the articles required in a hospital: a towel laid upon the patient's chest and another towel encircling the head, a container with the fluid that is to be used, an undine (small glass for bathing the eye), kidney basin (half round), and cotton wool.

The undine is filled with the fluid, the kidney basin is pressed against the cheek on the same side as the eye to be bathed, and the patient directed to tilt his head a little toward that side. A little of the fluid is run from the undine on the back of the hand of the person doing the bathing. If the fluid is too hot for the back of the hand, it is certainly too hot for the eye. The eyelids are kept open, using the thumb and forefinger of left hand, and the fluid is directed into the eye from a height of about 6 inches. The patient is told to look successively upwards, downwards, and to the right and left. The fluid passes over the eye and is caught in the kidney basin. The lids are then wiped dry with cotton-wool.

Recognizing that such utensils as undine or kidney basins are not usually available in the home, Dr. Much suggests the following substitutions for these utensils. For the undine a cream jug or old teapot is quite suitable and instead of the kidney basin a small pudding dish can be used.

In an emergency when any utensils are not available and the object must be removed at once, or soothing fluid used, it is suggested that balls of cotton-wool can be dipped into the hot lotion and the fluid squeezed into the eye.

By following the above simple procedures—patient lying on back head tilted to side of eye to be bathed, the eyelids spread apart by thumb and forefinger of left hand, and fluid dripped or squeezed from cotton wool dipped in the fluid, and the patient told to look in all directions, all parts of the eyeball can be reached by the bathing fluid, after which the eyelids are wiped dry with cotton-wool.

With the lids spread well apart, any little particle of dust or other substance can usually be observed and washed out by the solution.

The wedding—that was today's interest; and James saying, "It's too bad, Ellen, you never learned to hoe; think of the help you could give us now—and we so anxious to be working at the barn!"

There was no carpentry, for Mr. D., with a heavy heart, over the sudden passing of three who were his kin, was away attending these funerals. And we wondered if the mother who had been called away so suddenly and who in her girlhood had gone to classes in the same school as we, had then any premonition of the sad happening that was one day to befall her, to bear away herself, her husband and son so tragically from what had been an exceedingly happy home.

As she studied at the rude desks of those far-gone years did a dark sinister shadow fall, perhaps across the page?

Lovely are these days but in many a place sorrowful too with bereavements and troubles often extremely difficult to bear. Memories—how they, all that are left to us of friends and loved ones gone on, now "bless and burn!" And loving thoughts follow them into the veil and beyond, as with them we try to keep communion.

"I send my love unto my dead each day; I know not how; I only know it goes Forth from my heart, and going, ever grows; That as it flies, there's nothing can affray; That like a dove it fondly keeps the path it knows; That in its faithful flight it never slows, And if I fall or sleep, goes not astray." I send my love unto my dead, and they know 'tis sent, that I have not forgot; For often when I am alone I feel Their love return—and oh, no words can say The peace that comes to me! It matters not What woe befall, I have where-with to heal, Until Monday... Diary...

Morning Smile

Attention, Please!

A story is told about the great conductor, Koussevitzky, who was on the podium a minute before air time on a radio program where he was guest conductor. Tapping his baton for attention, he leaned toward the men in the orchestra and said, "Listen you know what you're supposed to do, and I know what I'm supposed to do. Let's do it! And during the performance don't look at me. It makes me nervous!"

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

"How did you manage to keep your boys on the farm?" a visitor of yesterday queried of James. He smiled. "I never had any trouble over keeping them," he replied, "to be truthful, I couldn't chase them away! Oh, there were a number of angles to it," he said, moving off toward his work at the new barn. "If I just had the time..."

And we thought of their conversation this morning, when in a moment of waiting for that lull in the choring which should give us the cream-separator to wash, and because a heifer of the herd had not come in with the others from the night-pasture, we came along the dewy front meadow in search of her.

Very sweet was the breath of the morning wind; quiet the surrounding farmlands with the new smokes still writing signatures fetchingly on the fresh summer air. We walked down toward the tree-edged millstream which was singing a happy song as it hastened away to turn its mill-wheels.

And there in a lovely nook in the flower-adorned meadow where a woody place comes down to meet the trees of the stream, we found... as Rob had expected... a mother and child.

"Better not go too near, Ellen," James, now following, warned. "She may be a bit jealous, you know. If she happens to be touchy" there was laughter in his voice, "run quick and climb a tree!"

And remembering, we wondered who would wish to leave the charm and delight of Island farm-places for any other, world-over.

How Can I!!!

Modern Etiquette

Q. After being away for several months, I returned home sometime ago and now my friends seem to be put out because I didn't call them. Isn't it their position to call me and welcome me back? A. There isn't any set rule, but I should think it would be more reasonable for you to call your friends and say, "I'm back."
