JUNE MAGAZINE.

SCRIBNER'S.

Scribner's Magazine for June opens with a richly illustrated article by Cecilia Waern who describes the wonderful advance in art made by her fellow countrymen under the title of "The Modern Group of Scandinavian Painters," and discusses such eminent artists as Thaulow, Larsen, Zorn and many others, examples of whose work are given in excellent engravings.

The number is very strong in short stories. William Allen White, the Kansas editor, whose "Boyville Stories" are so well known, writes a tale of Western political life with which his editorial duties have brought him in close contact. He calls it "A Victory For the People," and gives the inside history of the appointment of a U. S. Senator by the Governor, a kind of politics which is just now very much in evidence. The illustrations are by W. R. Leigh. Mr. White will contribute a number of Western political stories to forthcoming issues of the Magazine. Scribner's most remarkable serial is brought to a close in this number where Governor Roosevelt, under the title of "The Return Home" gives the final scenes in the life of the most famous regiment of recent times—one that will go down in American annals with the romantic glamor which surrounds Marion's Men and Tarleton's Legion of Revolutionary times, the Texas Rangers, the Pennsylvania Bucktails, and Mosby's Guerrillas. Col. Roosevelt's genius conceived, perfected and led the regiment to actual achievement, and his brilliant qualities as a historian will preserve their record in graphic narrative for future writers. A typical fight in the Philippines is described by an eye-witness, a clever journalist, under the title of "The Battle of the Blockhouse," which is a most complete and stirring account of that curious campaign—one which in its names and methods suggest a wild romance, brought home to us by the equally stirring titles associated with the romantic development of the West—Oregon, Kansas, Nebraska, Dakota. It is illustrated from photographs taken during the battle.

Stevenson's letters in this number were written from a Swiss health resort—Davos—and tell much of his companionship with John Addington Symonds. One of the letters is a Christmas sermon suggesting the famous paper which he once wrote for Scribner's under the same title. Sidney Lanier's poetical music impressions are concluded in this number. The Field of Art (by Will H. Low), and Point of View end the 25th volume of Scribner's Magazine.

Proper Care of the Finger Nails

"Soft white hands are always one of the principal points of a refined appearance, and for that reason women of all ages have most carefully attended to their hands," writes Mrs. Humphry, advising plain girls how to be pretty, in the June Ladies' Home Journal. "The care of the hands cannot be said to be neglected nowadays, when so many persons employ the manicure, who scrapes the nails and makes them of a lovely pink, pushes back the skin from the little white half-moon, at the base, cuts the nails in a crescent which exactly follows the outline of the half-moon, and ends by washing the hands in a preparation that makes them both smooth and white, temporarily, if not permanently. The hands look extremely well after the manicure's task has been finished, although Erasmus Wilson says that the nails should never be scraped nor cleaned with any instrument save the nailbrush. The only other implement needed is the small ivory presser."

TAKE A SHORT NAP DAILY.

A Fifteen-Minutes' Sleep After the Midday Meal Works Wonders.

"During the day every one should take a few minutes' sleep, preferably directly after the noon meal," writes Edward B. Warman, in his "Five Minute Talk on Good Health," in the June Ladies' Home Journal. "The time given to it may seem too precious for one in business, but it will be more than compensated for by the mental and bodily condition that follows. Sit in an easy-chair. Lying down directly after a meal crowds the digestive organs and makes one's sleep restless instead of restful. Rest the head comfortably. Tip the chair to a pleasant angle for the body, not enough to have the weight of the body on the back. Place the feet on a chair as high or a trifle higher than the one upon which you are sitting; cross the limbs at the ankle joints, close the hands together by interlocking the fingers, place the fatty part of the thumbs together in order to avoid grasping the hands too tightly, and close the eyes. Having thus closed the circuit, it will be necessary to relieve yourself of all nervous and muscular tension; think only of your slow, measured breathing and the desire for a restful sleep."

IN MEMORIAM:

Lives penned in grief on seeing the lifeless form of Minnie M. Ching, of Red Point, which was brought home on the 26th May, 1899, by kind and loving friends:—

Sad, sad are all our hearts today,
And floods of tears are in our eyes,
For here in still and calm repose
Dear lovely Minnie lies.

A few short months and we beheld
A maiden full of mirth and joy,
With bloom of youth upon her cheek
And light and love within her eye.

But, ah! an hour of sadness comes,
The hand of duty points the way,
And she must seek another home
Far o'er the rolling sea.

With tears of sorrow streaming down,
She then the parting hand did take,
And kissed each other so tenderly,
And wept as though her heart would break.

Ah! could we then have pierced the gloom
And seen the future as decreed on high,
What anguish in our hearts that day,
How sad that last good bye.

But yet, dear Minnie, God doth well,
He kept this sorrow from our view,
And in anticipation sweet,
How oft we've greeted you.

But now thy spirit fled from earth,
Its radiance we no longer see,
And nought is here of our beloved
Save this cold crumbling clay.

But loved one, God to thee was kind,
He took thee in thy youthful bloom,
Nor suffered grief, nor age, nor care,
To mark thee for the tomb.

Hadst thou but lived to years of age
What sorrows might have come to thee,
What crushing grief, what cruel pain,
Or known alas! man's perfidy.

O, glorious thought! O, love Divins!
What joy the best assurance gives,
Though cold in death her body lies,
With God forever Minnie lives.
Red Point, May 26, 1899.

STRANGE CHAIN OF DISASTERS

One Connected with the Other in Remarkable Succession.

CHICAGO, June 5.—A special to the Chronicle from Arthur, Ill., says: One boy drowned, a little girl fatally injured beneath the hoofs of horses, two women and a man brought to death's door by the shocks of the accident, all incidentally accompanying the funeral of a man who met sudden death, made Sunday a remarkable one in this city.

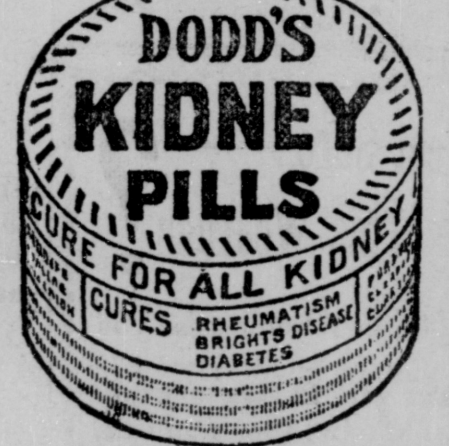

The strange chain of disasters began when the local grand jury post buried P. T. Wells, who was asphyxiated by gas at a hotel in Chicago last Wednesday.

While the ceremony was in progress at the cemetery news reached Gus Baker that his 13-year son had just been drowned while swimming. The shock prostrated Mr. Baker and he had to be taken home in a carriage. When the news was broken to his wife, she went frantic and became unconscious. Both are in a precarious condition.

While the funeral procession was returning from the cemetery one of the carriages ran over Mrs. Wm. Sullivan's two-year-old daughter, mangling her in a horrible condition.

Miss Clark, a witness of the latter accident, faint-d and was carried to the nearest house, where she lay for hours before recovering sufficiently to be removed to her home.
