Gas when in contact with moist silage, and this is actually the acting agent in the chemical. When this drug is used the silage is just as fresh as it does in the field and cattle prefer silage in this way over the non-treated.

The addition of molasses to silage hastens fermentation and adds to the palatability of this feed.

TYPE OF SILOS

As far as type of silo is concerned the horizontal surface silo is more efficient, less expensive, and more profitable than pit silos, but for the farmer who wishes to consider the permanent type silo, we would recommend the upright silo, although this type of silo is far more expensive to construct.

Finally, it is recommended that all silage should be ensiled no later than June 30th for best results.

PASTURE FOR SWINE

Pasture crops are valuable for breeding and growing swine. In addition to providing green succulent feeds they supply proteins, minerals and vitamins in readily available forms. Moreover, the hog, while foraging, takes exercise—an important routine in the life of breeding boars, brood sows and young pigs.

Pasture crops play an important role in the control of parasites. If pastures are rotated or changed, worm infestation can be kept under control to a considerable extent. Young pigs that have been treated for worms after weaning and put on clean pasture, have reasonable chance of escaping further infestation.

Most clovers and grasses grown on Prince Edward Island farms provide suitable pasture, but none is better than alfalfa or red clover. Fall wheat can be pastured in the late fall or early spring when other forage crops are not available.

Acadian Bi-Centennial At Wellington

The beautiful float, above, representing the patron saint of the Acadians, was one of the eight floats taking part in the parade at Wellington on Sunday evening, witnessed by an estimated 2,000 people who were present for the occasion.

Depicting the hardships which accompany the modest seasonal prosperity enjoyed by rugged Acadian fishermen, the two men aboard the sturdy dory "Isle St. Jean" represent the lobster fishing industry carried on in most Acadian districts in this Province. While one of the men simulates the rowing of the dory, the other holds a lobster against the background of miniature lighthouse during the Acadian Bi-Centennial observance at Wellington on Sunday evening.
