No Change In Hospital Training Role Forecast

The graduating class of the Prince Edward Island Hospital School of Nursing was told last night by Miss Jean G. Church RN, BSc., MA, assistant director of school of nursing, Dalhousie University, that hospital schools of nursing will continue for some time, to be the source of the nursing profession..

Speaking at the graduation exercises of the hospital at Prince of Wales College, Miss Church noted, however, that the hospital school of nursing must be a school and not another part of the hospital. She said it must be independent and free to function as an educational institute.

Miss Church said she firmly believed the student nurse could only learn proper nursing technique by nursing in hospital wards.

"There is no other way she can learn. There is no way she can learn in the classroom or from the books in the library. Only by nursing in wards," she said.

She noted that the nursing student cannot do good nursing unless she sees good nursing practised about her. "Therefore," she said, "a high quality of nursing must be maintained in the wards of the hospitals."

Chairing the exercises was Malcolm MacKenzie, a member of the hospital's board of trustees. The invocation was by Rev. Henry Tye, president of the Charlottetown Ministerial Association.

Presenting the diplomas and school pins was Lieutenant-Governor F. Walter Hyndman. The presentation of prizes was carried out by Miss Frances MacMillan, president of the alumnae.

Receiving prizes were Jennie Helene Dingwell for general proficiency and available scholarship; Joan Alfreda Stewart, for general proficiency in second year and Florence Jessie MacLeod for general proficiency in the first year.

The valedictory address was given by Miss Barbara Smith. Musical selections were by the Trinity Male Octette.

Miss Church concluded her remarks by noting there was an election on the horizon and that regardless of what was said about social and economical needs, nurses were still needed.

"Each school must do its utmost to provide the best possible educational program," she said.

Dropping Of Poll Deplored By PCs

A Progressive Conservative Party spokesman last night described as a "dreadful thing" the possibility that some residents of the Sacred Heart Home in Charlottetown may not be able to vote in Monday's election.

The possibility arose Wednesday when it was learned that the home had been dropped as a polling site.

Jack Kenny, PC campaign manager for Queens County, said this means that home residents must go to an outside poll in order to vote and "bedridden residents will be unable to do so."

"I think it is a dreadful thing," he said, "that anyone is deprived of their democratic right to vote. Even if there is only one pereon involved, the right to vote is something we cherish and Canadians have fought in two world wars to preserve it."

Originally the Sacred Heart Home, Beach Grove and the Sanitorium were designated as polling stations, but an appeal to Nelson Castonguay, chief electoral officer, resulted in a ruling that in order to qualify as polls 100 voters from outside the institutions must be allowed to cast their votes there.

Mr. Castonguay said this must be done in order to avoid any possibility of the voting trend in any institution being revealed.

Both the Sanitorium, and later, Beach Grove made the necessary arrangements to have 100 outside voters cast their ballots there, but, the Sacred Heart Home, a private institution, declined to do so.

The PC spokesman charged that the appeal to the electoral officer that resulted in the Sacred Heart Home poll being dropped, was made by a Liberal Queens County candidate.
