THE STRAIN OF THE SCHOOL ON AMERICAN GIRLS.

Edward Wakefield, in McClure's Magazine. Doctor Mitchell deliberately maintains that, for all the best purposes of female society, it would be better that American girls were not educated at all until they are seventeen than that they were over-educated at the present. They study seven or eight hours a day, and two or three would be sufficient to keep their intelligence in training, and all for what? To spend their after years on a sofa in a roomy attic to be burdened instead of to help to those who are dearest to them. It is a tremendous saying, from one speaking with authority, that as much domestic unhappiness is caused in America by nervousness among women as by drinking among men. Yet such is Doctor Weir Mitchell's verdict. He holds that every girl ought to be examined as to her nervous temperament when about to go to school, and at frequent intervals afterwards; that leisure, exercise, and wholesome meals ought to be insisted upon, and that studies ought to be compulsorily diminished, or discontinued altogether, the moment the well-known signs of over-strain appear. If girls are maintained in normal nervous condition until they are seventeen, they may study almost as hard as they please afterwards, without imperiling their woman's life. But let there be no mistake about it. Overwork and unnatural worry from eight or nine to seventeen mean ruin and wretchedness from seventeen till early death.

DOES FARMING PAY?

It does if you look after the little things; for instance, if you study how to feed your stock you can save dollars every year, not by feeding cheap food but by feeding the right food. For steers, the best feeding ration is: for cows, the best milk-making feed; for horses, the best strength-giving feed. But no matter how well you feed, if the food is not properly digested the animals will not thrive; to remember, one pound of food properly digested is worth more than five pounds not assimilated. There is nothing like Peal's Condition Food to help digestion. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Price $1.00 per bag, worth $10.00.
