She took as her subject: "Then We'll Understand", dealing with the thought that through food, medicine and education, the world will come when women of all lands may reach a common understanding of human problems; and the many good things we now enjoy, can at last reach those whose lot at this time, is poverty, disease and hard labor. "Care" does much in helping these needy countries, and when we send to them our dollars, for postage or freight, surplus food in our Dominion may be sent abroad.

A sing-song followed with Mrs. Lea as soloist, accompanied by her husband, Mr. Lea was born in Victoria, P.E.I., but is now senior master of boy's private school in N.H.

The guest book was circulated by Mrs. Roger Worth. For traveling the bride wore a three piece ensemble of gold silk with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations. Prior to her marriage the bride was employed as a dental hygienist with the Provincial Department of Health. The groom is presently employed as an engineer with L.M. Ericsson Telephone Co. of Stockholm, Sweden.

The couple will leave shortly to take up temporary residence in Australia. The meeting agreed to contribute $10.00 for her care for this year, if that would meet with their approval.

A card of appreciation is to be sent to Mrs. Mary Profit for her gift of an embroidered table cover for use in the hall. The September meeting will be held in the hall and the members are asked to bring donations for a grab bag.

A report on the annual convention was given by Bertha MacLeod. The National Union brought the meeting to a close and refreshments were then served.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Checkerboard Of Fields Shows Season's Tapestry

We seem to accomplish so little these times. We resolve on rising, to get this and that chore done while we still have "long days", and then find that we are so easily distracted. But after all, we make excuse, this is summer, and there is only one day in a year, it may be the last, when we linger at a window, enjoying that play of light and shadow on the fields. Or watching there a mother juncos encourage her small one but growling at the law, to make haste and try to use his wings. We come out of doors to smile with the children over the nestful of swallows in their "dove house" on a rafter in the woodshed, and admire and listen to the chant of the hummingbirds as they dart about the flower-border.

And sometimes, we steal away as we did this evening, to follow old trails of this farm. For now were these more enchanting than they are now, with August's dreamy charm over all. Fields' paths, woods' aisles, beckon us.

"Come" they beg softly. And we come to an upland field to look out to a wide view of the valley, with its checkerboard of fields, clad in varied greens, its gorges and hedgerows, its woodlands, and its homes, all in making a beautiful landscape of season.

"Make us a bite of lunch, Ellen" James says now, looking up from his newspaper, "Seems as though I
