TIM HEALY PORTRAYED.

A Pen Picture of the Peppery But Clever Little Irishman—He is not a Born Leader.

He was but young, says the London Spectator, when he began political life in 1880, at 25, considering the laborious part which he at once took in the legal discussion of the first great Irish Land bill, and even now he is only 40, about the most productive of all ages for ordinary public men. When he addressed Mr. McCarthy the other day, who is 25 years his senior, as "My Dear Justin," it was very easy to see that he contemplated taking a new departure in the Irish politics of the day; and we should think it probable that he is aiming at the leadership of the anti-Parnellites, and is emulating to some extent the strategy of Mr. Parnell. There is no doubt of his cleverness nor of his tenacity, but he lacks what Mr. Parnell never lacked, that note of authority, bred in the very blood, which Irishmen discern almost by intuition, and to which they respond as they never respond to mere talent and industry. Perhaps Mr. Healy hopes to make up by coolness and resource, in neither of which he is at all deficient, for Mr. Parnell's inborn masterfulness, but he will not find them suit his purpose with his Irish colleagues half as well. Mr. Healy is not born to rule, though he is born to rebel, and to rebel with a certain fertility of ingenious plausibility which has something of the springiness and versatility of gen us.

"My countrymen," said the late Mr. Cashel Hoey, who had a great deal of the genius of the Celt with the saving sobriety of the Saxon, "have a great capacity for worry," and not one of them, not even Mr. Parnell, in his most industrious mood, ever showed the capacity for worry which Mr. Healy exhibits from day to day and from year to year. He began the present campaign with two strokes of policy, on which, no doubt, he has congratulated himself heartily. At Omagh, on July 8, he worried greatly the leaders of the anti-Parnellite party by magnifying into a great crime and treachery their negotiation with the Gladstonians for the transfer of a couple of Ulster seats to the English branch of the Home Rule party. And when he had accomplished that effectively, and had shown his nominal chief that he could command very nearly equal numbers to his own, and a good deal more of political ingenuity and mobility, he opened the present short session by an exhibition of his cleverness in tormenting the new Unionist Government, of which it was the only fault that it was really too clever by half in the perversity of its motive and in the deliberate confusion of his manipulation of the circumstances.

Mr. Healy, with all his cleverness, will never fill the place of Mr. Parnell. He is perhaps more than his equal in adroitness, and fully his equal in tenacity, but he will never be his equal in authority. He is much more formidable with his net than he is with his spear. He can spread mutiny, but he will not manage to impose discipline. There is nothing of the rock in Mr. Healy as there was in Mr. Parnell. The Irish party will never look to him for shelter and protection. They may look to him for clever tactics, but not for impressive and audacious strategy. He is fertile in ingenuities, often much too ingenious. But he is not, and never can be, a statesman of the massive and commanding kind.

Married 100 Years.

That must have been a grim celebration the other day, at Zsonbolga, in Hungary, when Mr. and Mrs. Szathmer, whose combined ages amount to 233 years, observed with ceremony the completion of a century of married life. One has heard of silver weddings, and golden weddings and diamond weddings, but this tops them all; it may be called a platina wedding. It is something to be congratulated upon, no doubt, but yet there is something gruesome about it: On Saturday, Aug. 17, by the Rev. So-and-So (dead), assisted by the Rev. What-d'ye-call-him (dead), Johann, son of Somebody (dead), to Judith, daughter of Somebody else (dead). All the witnesses dead, all the spectators, including the very children in a mass, dead. All their orange flowers have indeed turned to cypress! Are they glad they are living? One fancies that it must be a case where solitude, even with some one to share it, must have its moments of unutterable loneliness.—New York Press.

The Poetry of Matrimony.

Her constant aim is to be interesting to her husband. She multiplies herself. In turn she is his friend, his confidante, his partner in business, his chum, and, if I may use the word in its best and most refined sense, his mistress. She is forever changing her appearance. For instance, you will seldom see a French married woman wear her hair in the same way longer than three or four weeks. She knows that love feeds on trifles, on illusion, on suggestion. She knows that, when a man loves his wife, a rose in her hair, a new frock, a bonnet differently trimmed, will revive in him the very emotion that he felt when he held her in his arms for the first time. She also knows that the very best dishes may sometimes become insipid if always served with the same sauce.

She understands to a supreme degree the poetry of matrimony. I have heard men say that matrimony kills poetry. The fools! There is no poetry outside of it. And the poetry has all the more chance to live long in French matrimonial life, because our wedding ceremony is not, as in England, the end of courtship, but only the beginning of it. In France, when you have married your wife, you have to win her, and the process is very pleasant. I have often told my English friends that if in their country there were not so many kisses indulged in before the wedding ceremony, there would be a great many more administered after it. Why is the French woman of forty so attractive? Because every feature of her face shows that she has been petted and loved.—From "A Study in Wives: the French Wife," by Max O'Rell, in North American Review for October.

PISTOL IN THE HOUSE.

It is an Unmixed Evil and Should be Treated as Such and Absolutely Abolished.

There may be localities in the United States where it is advisable to keep a pistol in the house accessible to the women and children, but such places are few in any part of the country and are entirely non-existent in the well-ordered communities of the older States. There are no statistics available showing the results of keeping firearms for the defence of families, but every attentive reader of the daily papers must have observed that the victims of domestic pistol practice are, in most cases members of the family, or innocent strangers accidentally on the premises and within range of a shot. Wives shoot husbands and children, and children shoot fathers and mothers. There have been hundreds of such tragedies in the past two or three years. In all our cities there are homes that have been darkened and lives that have been rendered permanently wretched by these horrible incidents.

The latest case of this kind is reported from Harwood, Pa., and is sufficiently pathetic to serve as an object lesson. It appears that tramps were "prowling around the neighborhood" in quest of subsistence, and that some of them had been seen near the residence of Edward Cooper. Being engaged in an occupation that keeps him away from home through the night, Mr. Cooper gave one of his boys a revolver and charged him to protect the household. Clothed with this responsibility, Master Charles Cooper decided that the place for the pistol at night was under his pillow. It chanced that, in the small hours of last Monday morning the wind began to blow violently, whereupon Mrs. Cooper awoke and got up to close the windows. In order to avoid disturbing her boys, the thoughtful mother "glided into their room on tiptoe." But Charles, the protector of the family, was aroused, and, seeing some one at the window, had no doubt that it was a case of burglary, and that the time for action had arrived. Reaching his hand under his pillow, he grasped the revolver, aimed and pulled the trigger. His aim was true, and his mother sank to the floor a corpse. The fatal bullet had entered her brain. "When the boy discovered that he had shot his mother," says the account, "his grief knew no bounds. He tried to shoot himself, and the pistol was taken from him by force."

The sorrow of that boy will last as long as he lives, but he is really blameless. Any other boy, and many a grown-up man, placed in his position, says the Washington Post, would have done just what he did. Aroused from sleep in the darkness of the night by a person in the room, one is in no condition for calm reflection, and is likely to make bad use of a gun if it happens to be at hand. When we add to this kind of tragedies, those fatalities that result from the careless handling of firearms, the list swells from the hundreds into the thousands—an appalling aggregate of needless killing and maiming, of needless bereavement of families and wrecking of the lives of those by whose hands the evil is wrought.

Expenditure for 'Cycles.

The people of no other country part so freely with their money for recreation and sport as do Americans. Millions of dollars went into the roller skating craze a few years ago, and now the more substantial and apparently permanent bicycle furor is the leading channel for the flow of the great American dollar. A Boston paper has figured, from reliable reports, that 500,000 bicycles have been marketed in the last season. Another estimate brought the figures up to 560,000 machines sold. Assuming the lower figures to be correct, over $35,000,000 have gone for the purchase of machines alone during 1895. In addition to this original outlay, every bicyclist has expended from $20 to $50 on costume and machine outfit, thus easily bringing the figures up to $50,000,000 for putting our wheelmen on the road ready for a "run." No more interesting study could be made than to follow this tremendous sum of money from the purchaser through its various channels of disbursement in the labor world. How many people have found employment through it? How many have grown rich? How many factories have been changed from idleness to busy times? Another element for speculative thought is, how much have these 500,000 new wheelmen meant to the roadside tavernkeepers? The "runs" always end at a wheelmen's headquarters, and in the aggregate have brought thousands of dollars to the county hotelkeeper. Naturally, he wants their trade and has thus become a strong ally of the good roads movement. So, too, have the wheelmen, and here, again, has come a heavy investment of money, due largely to the agitation of the wheelmen. More miles of good roads have been built in the last year than at any other period, I imagine, in the history of the country. New York city alone has just appropriated $300,000 for a macadamized bicycle path "from home to office," extending the length of the city without a break, and a million and a half is to be spent there this year in macadamizing streets in various neighborhoods. This is not done entirely for the cyclist, of course, but their demand for it has been the deciding factor in moving the officials to make the charge. Through all the States the good roads demand, so long ignored, has become one of immediate concern by reason of the stand taken by wheelmen. It has only to be kept up to have our country roads a source of pleasure and a pride instead of a disgrace.—Henry L. Stoddard, in Peterson's Magazine.

Offering His Services.

Tramp—Got any fruit, lady, that you want canned.

Lady of the house—Yes, I have; there's two bushels of peaches in the kitchen.

Tramp—Well, if you'll let me eat about a peck of them, lady, you will have that much less work to do."

The Verdict.

"Did the jury find the prisoner guilty?" inquired a man, concerning a burglar.

"No, sir," responded the policeman; "They didn't find him at all. He got away."

ORILLA, Feb. 10th, 1894.
EDMANSON, BATES & Co.
Gentlemen,—About three or four weeks ago I had an attack of Itching Piles. I tried two or three different remedies recommended by druggists as the "best and only cure," etc., but got no relief. About the time I was beginning to despair of finding any relief, with some slight misgivings I bought a box of your pile cure, which I am pleased to say gave me almost instant relief and permanent cure. I consider your Dr. Chase's Ointment a Godsend.

IMPURE AIR.

Written by Wm D. H. Brown, M. D., Chicago—Clipped from the Journal of American Health.

He lives most who breathes most. Impure air is more justly deemed a cause of scrofula than defective nutrition itself, and there can be no doubt that many febrile diseases among the poor are due to want of sufficient breathing; for the air vitiated by breathing and by the emanations from the body, becomes more capable of conveying seeds of disease. The removal of dead and effete matter from the body is effected by the union of oxygen with it, and if there be not a fresh supply in proportion to the demands of the system it must suffer in consequence. The air expelled by the lungs contains peculiar matters certainly poisonous, carbonic acid, included, given up by the lung itself.

Each person requires 3,000 cubic inches of fresh air per hour to wash away and dilute the poisons of his own lungs and skin and any system of ventilation in a building is inadequate which does not supply that quantity to each occupant. The amount needed for the purpose depends greatly upon the degree or rapidity of contamination. The continuous introduction of air to take the place of that deoxidized is, therefore, necessary to vitalize the blood and give tone to the tissues, and it must be supplied without creating draught. Food, drink, sleep, etc., are all needed by the human economy, but no need is more pressing than that of air; and as oxygen is its vital element and one of the greatest tonics, we need it in abundance. On going from a close room of oft-breathed air into the open air, feeling depressed, what a sense of relief we experience, and a few full inspirations revive us quickly.

This is because the lungs, which are overcharged with carbonic acid gas and other impurities, take up the life-giving oxygen, purifying the blood, increasing the circulation, and invigorating every nerve and fibre of our being. Deep breathing is of great importance and none breathe to the fullest capacity, for there is always a reserve force in the lungs.

A Most Disastrous Cyclone.

HAVANA, Oct. 21.—The latest word received here of the progress of the cyclone, of which warning was given yesterday, is that it has caused havoc in the province of Santa Clara, the wind blowing with hurricane force at the rate of 90 miles an hour, uprooting trees, blowing down houses, and laying waste corn fields. The damage which has resulted is enormous, and the people in the villages in the interior are thoroughly discouraged at so many successive calamities. The details of the ravages of the storm in full are not yet known, but the danger for Havana is over. It has been raining all over the Island for over 24 hours incessantly, and there are fears of another disastrous flood in Vuelta Abajo and in the provinces of Havana, Natanzas and Santa Clara. The storms trajectory shows that it will strike the southeastern portion of Florida, and it will perhaps be more violent there than here, as it was momentarily increasing in intensity while passing over this Island.

WORD FROM KOOTENAY.

Good Mining Prospects for the Year and Increased Facilities to Miners.

NELSON (Special) Oct. 21—The mining prospects for next year in this locality are excellent, and a large influx of prospectors is expected. Miners and others coming in have been in the habit of bringing with them large quantities of Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which they all swear by and whose virtues they have extolled to such an extent, that the druggists throughout the section have become alive to the necessity of laying in large supplies to meet the greatly increasing demand. The remedy is generally regarded as an indispensable part of a miner's outfit both for it's portability and a value in preserving health which cannot be overestimated.

Cuban Insurgents Applying the Torch.

HAVANA, Oct. 31.—The Navas column of troops, while skirmishing in the vicinity of the Santiago plantation recently exchanged shots with a number of Insurgents, four of whom were wounded. A detachment of about 300 Insurgents, commanded by Rosendo Garcia and Frederico Toledo, has been dislodged from the position which it occupied, by a force of 600 Spanish troops. The Insurgents lost 3 killed and the troops one killed.

Kidney Facts.
In Jan. 1892 my son was taken with Kidney disease. Though attended by three physicians, and change of climate he grew worse and by '93 had fallen from 195 lbs. to 95 lbs. In 10 days from starting to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills we were able to move him home. In 4 months he gained 50lbs. and was fully restored to health by the use of this medicine Jno. S. Hastings, 23 St Paul St., Montreal.

A Jealous Barber's Act.

CALEDONIA, Oct. 21.—"I am too hot to work," said Park Pattison, the village barber, on Saturday night. He stopped shaving a man and went into the house, after putting a razor in his pocket. Soon cries of "murder" were heard and it was found Pattison had almost severed his wife's windpipe and was trying to cut his own throat. Both will recover. Pattison is locked up in consequence of his actions, which were inspired by jealousy.

That Pale Face.
For Nervous Prostration and Anæmia there is no medicine that will so promptly and infallibly restore vigor and strength as Scott's Emulsion.

HEART-BEATS.
The Reason Why the Heart Flutters, Palpitates, and is Oppressed, and How to Relieve it.
The heart has a hard old time of it and within itself does not excite much disease, but it is very often called upon to display the troubling symptoms of palpitation, fluttering, labored breathing, oppression, etc., on account of diseased Kidneys offering increased resistance to the passage of the blood through their defective secretive structures, causing a morbid change in the blood unsuited to nourish the tissues and noxious to them. The minute arteries resist the passage of this foul blood, resulting in the muscular walls of the arteries and the ventricle of the heart becoming partially paralyzed, and from this cause results much of the so-called heart disease, which is owing to wasting Kidneys not being able to perform their functions. In order to relieve heart trouble remove the cause in the Kidneys with Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They relieve the blood of poisonous deposits, it goes on its way a stream of health, relieving the heart and imparting strength to every tissue of the body. When your heart is in trouble Chase's Pills quickly remove the causing condition, no matter whether it exists on account of disorder of the kidneys, liver, stomach, or of nervous affection.
