Kimberley and Canada.

THE Ottawa Citizen extracts the following points from Lord Kimberley's recent speech at Wimbledon, and makes the following comments:—

1st. He says that England has begun to look upon Canada as a considerable power in the world. That is very satisfactory to hear, inasmuch as some years ago the colonies of North America were looked upon as sources of weakness rather than power; and many men of standing often talked of getting rid of us.

2nd. He looks forward with pride to the completion of the Pacific Railway. That, too, is satisfactory. It shows us that the Colonial Secretary has not come to the conclusion that Canada is going to "ruin" herself by building that Railway. And, moreover, if the relations of Canada and England were at all likely to become awkward, on account of any want of sympathy with the scheme in England, Lord Kimberley would not have introduced the project in his speech.

3rd. But we get a little more than an expression of pride; we get something like the promise of co-operation. We have the sympathy of England, we are told. The sympathy of an Empire is worth much; it counts for an army of men in such matters as the Eastern question. Why not for an army of immigrants in our case?

4th. His remarks about the mutual aid which should be given by the Colonies and the Empire, is spoken of in the same line of thought which animated the correspondence that passed between the two Governments previous to the appointment of Sir Alex. Galt.

5th. His endorsement of the act of the Government in sending Sir Alex. Galt is of especial value at this time, when there is an especial itching among the Grit press to attack him.

6th. His confident declaration that all parties in England were favorable to Canada, was just the declaration that might have been expected from a statesman. It soars beyond the small spites of some of our Canadian public men, who, "if they were British statesmen," would do nothing at all for us.

The Pacific Railway.

THE Toronto Mail, in a recent article, says:—

"The Grit policy of building the Pacific Railway was a policy of direct and continued absorption of money from the public treasury—a policy of building the railway out of taxation. They professed to be building it without increasing the taxation. But they declared it was going to cost $100,000,000; they had promised to build it by 1890; and now they tell us they did not calculate on getting much from the lands of the North West. Therefore it is plain that every dollar of the money must have been raised by extra taxation. Let the people consider this. It has recently become a fact of singular importance. It is only recently that they have let the cat out of the bag. We had given them credit for looking to the land, and for trying to keep within reasonable bounds. But they have confessed their own intentions—and these were terrific. They were going to take $100,000,000, or say $80,000,000, out of the taxation of the country, or they were going to add that sum to the national debt in addition to what already existed and against which they had, when it was still smaller, protested loudly. We do not think that the public mind will miss these points. The Grit party made increase of taxation inevitable. The present Government made the inevitable burthen as small as possible. The Grit party would have added the whole cost of the Pacific Railway to the public debt of Canada, and taxed the people to pay for it—they say they will do so if they get back to power. The present Government are endeavoring to save the people from taxation for that purpose."

These are important points. They should not be lost sight of by the people of any section of Canada.

Hanlan's Rival.

Dr. Howe, a former Torontonian writes to his brother in this city that the people of Australia are wonderfully confident that Trickett can clean out Hanlan. The odds forthcoming on the giant, however, are not very liberal, and our champion seems to have a number of friends in the Antipodes. Six to five on the Australian is offered and generally taken, invariably by old Canadians, like Dr. Howe, who have wandered to the far-off colony. Dr. Howe says Hanlan will find Trickett a very different antagonist to any he has yet met. Just to get a glimpse of the Australian champion, the Doctor travelled 120 miles, and was gratified by several times seeing Trickett at his best. The result of Dr. Howe's observations is that he considers Trickett a wonder, never having seen anything like him on the water before. The Doctor knows Hanlan, but has never seen him pull, having been away from the Dominion for three years. Dr. Howe concludes by wishing the Torontonian every success, and expressing the hope "that he will defeat Trickett for the sake of old Canada."

Worried father: Don't forbid their staying out there and chatting. Just paint the gate every day.

"Can tough fowl be made tender?" asks a housewife. Certainly. In many boarding houses the boarders find the landlady tenders tough fowl.

The Sultan of Turkey is said to be the greatest scamp in that country. He is the son of an Armenian woman, and is cunning, avaricious and treacherous, and secretly opposed to all reforms, though he pretends to favor them.

TO WHITEN THE HANDS.—Take a wine-glassful of eau-de-cologne, and another of lemon-juice; then scrape two cakes of brown Windsor soap to a powder, and mix well in mould. When hard, it will be an excellent soap for whitening the hands.

The Bank of England lost $39,000,000 specie during last week, but the reserve was increased to 53½ per cent of liabilities from 51½ per cent last week. The posted discount rate remains 2½ per cent, although the actual rate is much lower. All the money markets throughout Europe are now very easy, with the result of making very full prices for all classes of investments.

There is a veritable boom at Montreal. Never, or hardly ever before, have there been so few able bodied paupers in it. Work is plentiful. The hotels are crowded. Shipping accommodation is found too scanty to supply the demand for it. The Allan line is being provided with an extra supply of warehouses 540 long by 48 wide. There is much general activity in trade circles.
News.

A whaling captain, lately returned from the Arctic Seas, declares that a new breed of whales have made their appearance in those waters. They are supposed to have emigrated from the open sea at the pole. The skipper describes them as very much larger than the old whales, and very gentle and confiding. In former years, when a whale was harpooned, the rest of the herd threw up their flukes and made off. The new breed do not seem to mind in the least the capture of one of their number.

ADVICE TO GIRLS.—First cultivate industrious habits; be willing to work and try to do your work thoroughly. It is not enough to be busy, we must do our work well. To be thorough in study, to be thorough in all work, ought to be the aim of every girl, not less than every boy. Our methods of female education have encouraged superficiality rather than the thoroughness; we have given our girls smatterings of many things, and mastery of few things. After thoroughness, independence. A habit of relying on your own judgment, a habit of thinking for yourself, not selfishly, but in a true womanly fashion—a habit of taking responsibility and bearing it bravely—is one of the habits that women as well as men need to cultivate. Your parents ought to give you some chance to form this habit; it is a great mistake to shield a girl from all care, and then, by and by, when the helpers on whom she has leaned, fall by her side, to leave her with judgment untrained and powers undisciplined, to carry the burdens of life. A woman should have self-reliance as well as a man.
