

PAULIST MISSIONS.

Close of Most Successful Mission in the Sacred Heart Church.

The Paulist Father, Hopper and Menton, of New York City, have just concluded their first mission in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Alberton, of which Rev. Father Burke is rector. The services were daily, morning and evening, and the attendance was so large that often admittance could not be gained. Three sermons on the whole body of Catholic truth besides the masses and religious exercises were preached every day, and the way the people attended in the middle of their harvest and often in very disagreeable weather is a sufficient guarantee of the excellence and favor of the preaching. At the night services the congregation was especially large and the scene inside the Church particularly striking. A rostrum was built for the preacher just outside the sanctuary rail from which the missionary father spoke. At his back stood a great black cross draped as to its arms in a loose winding sheet of white material, wearing a black cassock with white collar. A biretta and a large crucifix secured to his breast and without surplice the reverend preacher occupied the rostrum, the entire action of the body within view of his audience. And splendid platform speakers they are—clear, able, vigorous, deliberate and oftentimes eloquent. Many non-Catholics were attracted to the services especially at night when an instruction followed by the Rosary, a sermon and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was given. The altars were beautifully decorated and the choir sang the masses and other services beautifully. A strong temperance sermon was preached by Rev. Father Hopper, on Thursday night and "Promise Cards" distributed to men women and children which were largely if not universally signed. The card read as follows:

Total Abstinence Promise, made at the mission given by the Paulist Fathers in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Alberton, P. E. I., September, 1897. For the love of God and for the good of my soul I promise to abstain from intoxicating drinks. Name..... years For..... years I have signed the Total Abstinence Promise for..... years. Name..... Address..... Tear this Coupon off and give it to one of the Mission Fathers.

No better way of inculcating temperance could be adopted and if all the churches worked in this way we would have a sober people. On Sunday at the closing the church was especially decorated with flags, flowers and lights. The congregation was immense. The fathers congratulated Alberton and its pastor on the marked success of the mission—"It had been one of if not their most satisfactory missions"—and gave the Papal Benediction. All then repaired to their homes much benefitted by the missionary ministrations. The string of carriages after every service took hours to go by the town. Morell is the next scene of the Father's labors.

DEATH OF MR. J. J. GILLIS.

He Falls Down Stairs and is Fatally Injured

The funeral of Mr. J. J. Gillis, the well-known tenor artist, took place this morning to St. Dunstan's Cathedral thence to the Roman Catholic Cemetery. The Caledonian Club, of which the deceased was a member, attended in a body, and there was also a large attendance of citizens generally. The casket containing the body was drawn on the salvage corps wagon by a detachment of city firemen. The wagon was fittingly draped and decorated with flowers. Galbraith's Band turned out with the firemen, and the club had their piper with them. The pallbearers were W. S. Stewart, Geo. Stanley, B. Trainor, A. S. Hewitt, W. J. O'Reilly and D. O'M. Reddin, jr. Mr. Gillis' death occurred under very sad circumstances. It seems that about eleven o'clock on Friday night, Mr. Gillis was going upstairs to bed. His wife preceded him a few steps carrying a lamp. When she reached the top of the stairs she looked around and was horrified to see her husband fall backwards down stairs. The stairs were very steep and the fall was very heavy. It did not take long to ascertain that Mr. Gillis was seriously injured, and soon two doctors were on the scene. It was found that the base of the skull had been fractured by the fall. Everything possible was done to help the injured man, but he did not regain consciousness until Saturday afternoon when he partially revived and talked sensibly to those about him. In the evening, however, he became worse and about midnight the end came. Mr. Gillis leaves a wife and six small children to mourn their loss. Mrs. Gillis is a daughter of Mr. W. J. Fraser, of this city. To his bereaved wife and family and other relatives we tender our sympathy.

WILLIAM MEIKLE DROWNED.

He Walked Over McMillan's Wharf on Saturday Night

On Saturday night last Mr. William Meikle, the well-known attendant in the Supreme Court came to his death by drowning. Mr. Meikle, it seems, has for the past year not been as strong as usual mentally, and several times has had to enquire his way home. On Saturday evening he left his home on Fitzroy Street, east, his people thought to see a neighbor whom he was in the habit of visiting. Instead of calling upon this neighbor, however, it seems that Mr. Meikle wandered down town and about eight o'clock went down McMillan's wharf and in the darkness accidentally walked over the side of that structure into the water. The poor old man fell over some little distance to the north of the coalshed. The watchman on the Ferry Wharf and two sailors in a schooner heard his cries as he fell into the water, and made all haste to the rescue. The water is not particularly deep at the point where the accident occurred, and by the aid of the watchman's lantern the poor old man was located. The watchman and sailors succeeded in getting him up on the wharf, and upon discovering that there was still a spark of life remaining hastily summoned Dr. Conroy. The doctor did everything in his power to save the unfortunate man's life, but the shock he had sustained was too great for his system and it was not long before he died. The body was viewed by several hundred people on the wharf and at the police station, and strange to say it was not recognized for a long time although the old man was well known to very many of those who examined it remains. The body was taken from the police station to the home of the deceased after it had been identified by some members of his family, and it will be interred this afternoon at four o'clock. Mr. Meikle was a native of Tipperary, Ireland, and was 85 years of age. He was deservedly esteemed by all who knew him, and his death under such sad circumstances is deeply regretted. His wife and family have the sympathy of all.

OBITUARY.

It is our melancholy duty to record the death of Mr. Joseph H. Gaudet which sad event took place at his home in Tignish on Tuesday evening the 14th inst.

About six months ago Mr. Gaudet was taken ill with cancer of the stomach, and although everything was done that medical skill could devise the disease continued to sap the vitals of his once vigorous constitution. Slowly but surely the angel of death continued to narrow the confines of his life, until, as stated above, surrounded by his sorrowing wife, family and friends he passed peacefully away. Mr. Gaudet was born at Tignish about sixty-three years ago. For many years past he had been Secretary of the Roman Catholic Church in his native parish and was one of the best known men in the western part of this Province. From early life he took an active part in political affairs and from the days of Conroy and Howlan till the time of his death was always considered one of the most energetic, active and influential workers of the Conservative party. His funeral took place from the Church of St. Simon and Jude, where in life for thirty years no form was better known in the aisles of that stately edifice than that of its faithful secretary. A high mass was said for the repose of his soul by the Rev. D. M. McDonald, pastor of the church, and the multitude of sorrowing friends surrounding the grave attested to the respect in which the deceased was held by members of the community.

In the old churchyard at Tignish, by the side of his venerable father who had but shortly preceded him, close to the church and people he loved so well, he sleeps the sleep of all those who in life have acted well, their part, and in the hope of a glorious resurrection.
