MRS. BRADSHAW'S DIVORCE.
Mr. Garraway stood up as young Mrs. Bradshaw rose from her seat at the dinner table. It had been rather a quiet dinner, and he had to do nearly all the talking.
Bradshaw opened the door and Mr.
Garraway (of Gray's Inn Place) notice of that each avoided looking at the other.
Bradshaw closed the door and he came back to the table. He cracked a walnut, and on opening it, threw it into the fire.
"Yes," said young Mr. Bradshaw, violently. "Of course it's bad. Worst of it is that you never know until you try."
"But all the nuts are not bad, Bradshaw," Bradshaw grunted. "Any thing wrong at Whitehall?"
"No, Whitehall's all right." Mr. Garraway was successful as a solicitor mainly to knowing exactly when not to do the wrong thing.
"I want to ask you something, Garraway. Do you ever have people coming to draw up deeds of separation?"
"Oh, yes; pretty often."
"Well, would you mind being of some use to me—and to Helen?"
"Why, certainly. But you two don't want to be separated? Why, man, alive, you haven't been married a year!"
"Garraway, look here. We have had a row—a dispute, or whatever you like to call it. We have agreed to part." On the piano in the dining room upstairs a chord or two were struck, and the clear voice of Mrs. Bradshaw's rang out.
"You see," said Bradshaw, perfectly jolly over it. "There was a sudden stop and a change of plans, as though the player could keep it no longer."
"Look here, Bradshaw—Mr. Garraway has just been here. He has smoothed half—look here. Call at my place at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning and I'll do what is wanted."
"Thank you, Garraway."
"Shall we go upstairs? I must arrange with her."
The demure, precise little clock on the mantelpiece in Mr. Garraway's chamber struck 11. A small boy entered with a card.
"Thank you, Judd, show the lady in."
Mr. Gibson withdrew with his work to the outer office, stepping aside at the door to permit a slim, girlish figure to enter.
"I had no chance of speaking to you last night," said Mr. Garraway, "excepting to ask you to call. But I had a brief conversation with Bradshaw, and he assured me that you had quite made up your mind about the matter."
"He is, in this particular instance, quite right," she put her lips together and so I am to draw up the deed of separation?"
"If you please."
"It's rather rough on me," went on Mr. Garraway, with an effort at humor.
"When it seems only yesterday that I was his best man, and you and he went away to Neufchatel, and we cheered you as you left Victoria station. Do you remember?"
"Would your mind telling me, please, when the document can be drawn?"
"And do you remember your first dinner after your return, and how jolly we all were as we were as comfortable as anything, until a week or so ago?"
"What I propose to do, carefully, over the stern young lady, with just the suspicion of a catch in her voice, "is to go abroad with my aunt for a year or two and leave the house just as it stands for Ernest to live in. He can get a housekeeper, you see, and—"
"By Jove!" cried Mr. Garraway, "not a bad idea."
"You think—you think it will work all right, Mr. Garraway?"
"Oh, yes."
"It was our quarrel of last week parted us, and—"
"Well, will you allow me, as an old friend, to give you a little advice?" "I should advise you to make up this difference of opinion with Ernest. I'm old—of course I'm only a bachelor—but I'm told that all young couples have their quarrels to begin with, and they do say—here again I speak, of course, as a mere bachelor—that the making up is always the most delightful part of it."
"Mr. Garraway, I thought you would argue in this way, and it is very good of you. But my mind was made up before I came here, and nothing that you can say will alter it. A woman must judge for herself in these matters."
"It shall be put in hand at once."
"I should like to leave London this day week."
"I dare say," said Mr. Garraway, with great amiability, "that that can be managed."
"There is only one question of a housekeeper. Somebody must be there to look after the servants."
"Is there, I think, I can be of some assistance to Ernest?" Mr. Garraway spoke with genial assurance. "It is so happens that a client of mine is looking for precisely a situation of that kind."
"How extremely fortunate."
"She is a good manager. She is a widow and she has had charge of a house similar to yours."
"That's capital. As I say, I shouldn't like the house to go to rack and ruin.
When could this old lady come, do you think?"
"This—who?"
"This old lady—this widow. When could she come?"
"Oh, but—Mr. Garraway smiled pleasantly. "You are laboring under a slight mistake, Mrs. Bradshaw; the lady is not old."
"Oh, she is not young, I suppose."
"Well, as a matter of fact, she is rather young. By-the-by, I ought to have her portrait here somewhere." It had cost Mr. Garraway an shilling, this cabinet photograph in a shop that morning. The shopman couldn't tell him who it was; she was an exceedingly pretty girl in demure black, and the lady Mr. Garraway was contented with the bunch of narcissus at the lady's bosom was bobbing up and down as she continued to look at the photograph.
"You see, the thing is to get some one who would make poor Bradshaw comfortable and not compel him to be a slave to the photograph on his table."
"This lady," said young Mrs. Bradshaw, definitely, "shall never come into my house."
