THE SEASON'S GREETINGS.—The season for good will and kindly feeling has arrived. In the Christmas week all people are supposed to have more charitable feelings than at other times; to have kindlier hearts and more friendly hands.

There is no reason why that should be the case. That is to say, Christmas should not be a more charitable season than any other part of the year, for the simple reason that every other part of the year should be as good as Christmas. That is the theory of Oddfellowship. Good-will to all mankind, kind words and kind deeds for everybody, from the first of January until the last of December.

Unfortunately we cannot live with our virtues at full tension day after day. In the bustle of life, and in the struggle for existence, selfishness comes into play; and so busy are we all in looking after our own affairs—making our bread and butter, and as much more as we can make—pushing along after the prizes of life, and shoving aside everyone who is in the way, and who is not strong enough to shove us, that we easily and thoughtlessly disregard the cry of distress, forget to look after our needy brethren, omit many of the ordinary courtesies of life.

A great deal of the lack of charity in the world is due, not so much to actual selfishness and cruel indifference to others, but to thoughtlessness. We all have so much to do that we forget the claims of others. If our attention is called to them we are ready to assist; we drop our contribution in the box willingly if some one will only hold the box before our faces.

The great need of society to-day is more thoughtfulness on our part for our neighbors. If we would only think a little more of our neighbors' rights, and not so much of our own, a little more of their necessities—a little more of their sorrows. That is what Oddfellowship teaches. To love our neighbor as we love ourselves is, perhaps, a standard too high for average human nature. But it is not beyond our power, while thinking of ourselves, to think of our neighbor as well.

And while we are so forgetful and heedless of others, it is a good thing for us all that there should be special seasons when the customs of society encourage unselfishness and charity. Such a season as Christmas-time, when kind deeds and kind words become for a week the rule of life. Even a week of unselfish charity is something in a whole year of devotion to self. Let it be given freely.

And do not confine it to our friends alone. Let our sympathies go out beyond our own narrow circle. There are needy ones on every hand; there are friendless people all around us. It may not be much we can do for them; but it may be only a very little will help to relieve their distress and make their lives happier. Let not the season pass without some one being benefitted.

And the good we do to others will react on ourselves. The happier we can make others, the more pleasure our own lives will have. As we bless others, so will ourselves be blessed. And thus will be answered Tiny Tim's Christmas prayer: "God bless us, every one!"

The Dominion Oddfellow of the 25th ult. says: The DAILY EXAMINER of Charlottetown, P. E. I., has a well conducted I. O. O. F. column. It will appear weekly. The items making up the department are timely and interesting."

A larger number of papers devoted to the Order is published to-day than ever before, and of a much higher character. The Order has no occasion to be ashamed of its literature as a whole.

The selfishness of humanity is responsible for the ills of the Order as well as of society in general. The selfish mortal occasionally gets into the Order through the doors that should have been closed to him, and trouble follows his footsteps.

The Order wants thousands of new members, but not unless they are the material from which good Oddfellows can be made. Swell the ranks, but not with those who are unworthy, and who will lower our standard. We want quantity, but not unless it is coupled with quality.

A HUMANE SOCIETY.—It is usually considered that our humane societies are doing a very noble work. But of all humane societies that have ever existed, the Independent Order of Oddfellows is by far the greatest and most efficient. All the distinctly termed humane societies together have never spent a tenth of the money or done a tenth of the work that our Order has spent and done in the direct line of uplifting the human race and smoothing the rough passages of life. In the nature of things it is impossible for human organizations to compete with us in their line of work. They have not the machinery to do the work. They lack the hands and the hearts to do it, and they lack the means. Unfortunately, in all professional relief work, it costs an immense sum of money—when compared in relation to the amount contributed—to transact the business. We are not complaining of this fact, for we do not see how such organizations can carry on their work without heavy expenditures. If men and women give their time to the management of charities, they must be paid in some way.

But the men who give their time and efforts to Oddfellowship are not paid a salary. They do much for which they never will be paid in a pecuniary sense. But they must naturally have a reasonable expectation that the help will come when they will need it, and receive, to a greater or less degree, the same sort of kindly attention and assistance that they are giving to others. The Independent Order of Oddfellows is everywhere. Six hundred thousand men in this country are banded together for humane work, and the entire Fraternity can be aroused in a twinkling, if necessary, to bend their united effort in one benevolent direction. It requires only knowledge of the working of the machinery of our order, and of its great capabilities for the relief of human distress, to fill the soul full of admiration for it as a humane organization. —Ex.

If you know of any member of the order who persistently violates the principles upon which it is builded, you are wronging your brothers in the order by not taking steps to secure his expulsion. But, before you proceed, look into your own heart and make sure that you are in no wise actuated by personal spite and that the offence is real and not magnified

A Teacher Remembered.

On the evening of the 22nd ult., the house of Mr. Edmonds, of Summerville, was stormed, not by shot and shell nor by the fury of the elements, but by sturdy youths and blooming maidens, amiable representatives of the adjoining and flourishing districts of Alberry Plains, Summerville and New Perth, all eager to spend an evening with the popular teacher of Summerville before leaving to take charge of the senior department of the Pownal School in his native district.

During the whole evening pleasure reigned as king, and all present were willing subjects, as bright beaming eyes and smiling countenances bore unmistakable evidence of pleasant associations. The wings of time seemed never more fleet, influenced by sweet music, vocal and instrumental, together with other equally innocent recreations till the "we sma' hours" when supper was announced. And then! well might the ladies of the committee who prepared that sumptuous repast feel proud of the work of their hands, in doing justice to which my pen fails where my stomach succeeded. The evening meal being over and well merited compliments having been paid the ladies who so generously contributed to the evening's entertainment, several highly complimentary addresses were tendered the hero of the evening, the least of which, because of its brevity, I submit for publication:—

ADDRESS

To J. Bernard Pratt, Teacher, Summerville and late of Alberry Plains:—

DEAR SIR,—On this, the eve of your departure, permit us, on behalf of the people of Summerville and Alberry Plains respectively, to tender you our sincere and hearty acknowledgements for the invaluable services rendered by you while engaged as teacher in our respective districts.

Your zeal and energy in the pursuit of your vocation being equalled only by the success with which your efforts have been crowned. The number of successful teachers now engaged in active service, and also the number of students at present preparing themselves for the honored profession who have received their education in whole or in part at your hands, bear testimony, strong though silent, of what may be achieved by well directed effort, and is matter for our warmest congratulations.

Now, sir, ere we say the parting word farewell, we beg most earnestly to assure you that your future welfare will be ever a source of pleasure to us, and that in whatever situation of life Divine Providence shall hereafter place you, we sincerely hope and trust that those characteristics, born of early habits, may ripen with years and bear you on to greater fame.
