IN MEMORIAM

MRS. MARGARET GALLANT
It is with regret that we record the death at her home in St. Charles, on December 26, 1955, of Mrs. Margaret Gallant in her eighty-third year.

Mrs. Gallant was predeceased by her husband, Sylvester, but by two months. Like so many of our venerable aged, who have taken and are taking their departure, Mrs. Gallant assisted in the birth and development of our community.

There is no written page to record the feats of courage, ingenuity and industry of our pioneers. Their labors are, however, perpetuated in the social, spiritual and material growth of the community to which they have so generously contributed.

May we not say, with due deference to the poet, that the good they have done lives after them. To her and to them, our admiration and gratitude for their having surmounted the untold difficulties of pioneering and early development in any locality.

Would that some iota of their spirit, creative, ingenious and tenacious should live or in us who receive the challenge to serve as they have served.

May her and their Master find that they have been faithful stewards, and may their eternal reward be commensurate with their devotion to duty towards God and country.

The funeral was held at St. Charles Church and cemetery. Rev. Charles Gallant celebrated Requiem High Mass and officiated at the grave.

Pall bearers were: Messrs. George Doucet, Arthur Cahill, Reg. Peters, Elmer Gallant, Harold Gallant and Eusebius Doucet.

There are left to mourn, Alice, Mrs. Frank Ford, Boston, Mass.; Irene, Mrs. Peter McDonald, Boston, Mass.; Madeline, Mrs. Lea Foley, Boston, Mass.; Marion, Mrs. Duncan Nolan, Glace Bay; Christopher, Providence, R.I.; William, Dartmouth, N.S., and Eugene at home.

Thirty-Seven Canadians Among V.C. Participants

By KEN METHERAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON (CP)—About 300 men, each proudly wearing the crimson ribbon of the Commonwealth's highest order of gallantry, will march before the Queen next month to mark the centenary of the Victoria Cross.

Participating in the week-long celebrations will be 37 VCs and 63 relatives from Canada. They are scheduled to arrive in Britain about four days before the celebrations get under way June 25.

The high point of the program will come June 26 when Queen Elizabeth will review the heroes from all parts of the Commonwealth in Hyde Park, where Queen Victoria exactly 99 years earlier presented the first 62 awards bearing her name.

In the 100 years since Queen Victoria signed the royal warrant creating the VC, it has been awarded 1,344 times, including 81 awards to members of Canada's armed forces. Officials estimate that about 300 of the 400 living holders will attend the reunion along with 900 relatives, including the widows of posthumous VCs and of VCs who have died since receiving the award.

The Canadian contingent will include the oldest living Canadian VC, Lt.-Gen. Sir Eric Turner of Quebec City and Col. Cyrus W. Peakes, of St. John's, Nfld. Sir Richard won the VC for conspicuous bravery at Koanati river in 1900 during the Boer War and Col. Peake for gallantry during the First World War.

Others include 'Labor Minister Milton Gregg and Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, military spokesman for the Consociation of Veterans. Both won their decorations during the First World War.

Second World War heroes attending will include Sgt. E. A. (Smookey) Smith of New Westminster, B.C., and Lt.-Col. Paul Triquet of Cabano, Que.

The celebrations will begin June 25 with a memorial service in Westminster Abbey attended by VCs and relatives and will be followed by a tea party for VCs and their wives at the House of Commons.

The same evening Maj. John W. Foote of Port Hope, Ont., will be one of five imperial VCs to be guests of honor at the annual dinner of the Royal Army Chaplains' department.

On June 26 the Queen, escorted by a detachment of the household cavalry, will drive in an open carriage to Hyde Park to address the VCs. She will inspect the holders of the Commonwealth's highest award and will salute as they march off the parade ground.

Later the same day the Queen Mother is scheduled to attend a garden party in honor of the VCs and relatives at Marlborough House, where a special exhibition of VC relics will be on show.

The exhibition, which will include relics shipped from Canada for the occasion, is to be opened June 15 by Prime Minister Eden.

On June 27 the heroes will visit Windsor Castle and later attend a reception at the Guildhall given by the Lord Mayor of London, Cuthbert Ackroyd. The following day the VCs and relatives will be guests of honor at a reception in Church House, Westminster, by the British Empire Service League.

The Canadian contingent will attend a reception at Canada House June 28 and on July 1 is expected to meet members of the Canadian Veterans Association in their annual pilgrimage to the Canadian section of the Military Cemetery at Brookwood, Surrey.

BEAUTIFICATION AND PLAYGROUND PROJECT

Not a very promising outlook but the Kinsmen Club of Charlottetown plan as a major project the beautification of this two acre on the east side of DesBrisay Crescent and converting it into a playground. The stream running through its origin in the area converging on the old ice pond near Spring Park and terminating through conduit at Government pond. Approval co-operation of the City Fathers is being sought in the drainage problem presented.

Montreal Financier Gets Cold Shoulder On Pipeline Proposal "Very Tired"

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has given the cold shoulder to a proposal by Montreal financier Lloyd C. Champion that he could build the proposed 2,200-mile Alberta-Montreal natural gas pipeline without federal assistance.

Prime Minister St. Laurent told the Commons under questioning Friday that Finance Minister Harris received a letter May 10 outlining Mr. Champion's proposals to build the line, pay Alberta gas producers with notes instead of cash and take steps to assure Canadian control.

But Mr. Harris had felt it was a proposal "which could not be taken seriously," the prime minister said. Therefore it had not been placed before the cabinet.

Mr. St. Laurent agreed with Mr. Harris' view. The finance minister had told him of the Champion proposition only Friday. "But if the letter had been addressed to me I would not have felt they were proposals that required to be placed before the cabinet."

Mr. Champion, 51-year-old head of Champion Pipe Line Corporation Ltd., which holds a federal charter to build a gas or oil pipeline anywhere in Canada, heard his friends and neighbors from the Commons public gallery.

He said he had no comment to make. Later he left for his Montreal home but planned to go to New York Monday for talks with financial colleagues there.

PREDICTS DEFAULT
Mr. Champion at a press conference Thursday night released three letters he sent Mr. Harris regarding his proposals. He told reporters he believes Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. will default on the $80,000,000 loan the government proposes to make it to complete the western leg of the line this year.

Then, he said, the government will be left with an uncompleted pipeline on its hands.

Mr. Harris read the House a reply he wrote to Mr. Champion's May 10 letter. It said: "The content of your letter do not indicate that you have at the present time a specific, detailed and viable proposal. Your suggestion that the gas producers accept long-term notes of your company in payment for gas delivered to you does not appear to me to be one that the gas producers would be disposed to accept."

At his press conference, Mr. Champion said that under his proposal to pay Alberta gas producers in notes instead of cash, the notes could be cashed before maturity.

of the producers desired. This deferred payment would bridge the gap between the time the line was built and the time it became a paying proposition with the building of Quebec and Ontario markets for the gas.

But they told the Maritime ham radio network they were all well and didn't need anything.

Because there was no sun during the day the four French-born adventurers couldn't give their position, but a ham operator on Sable Island, 180 miles southeast of here, said their signal was stronger than Sunday night when they were 90 miles south of the island. A spokesman for the network said, however, that this would not necessarily indicate a position change.

AGRICULTURAL

growth diminishes partly due to the tendency of the herbage to mature and go into a more or less dormant stage, and partly due to the scant precipitation of July and August. To meet this problem various methods can be followed.

Pasture in a Crop Rotation—Possibly the best pasture for dairy cows on the average farm is that obtained from a pasture in the crop rotation. This may be from the second to the fifth year, or longer, after seeding depending on the length of rotation being followed.

Such a pasture in a well-managed rotation can yield abundant herbage early in the growing season. Pasture like this at the Central Experimental Farm, have carried two cows, per acre up to the middle of July. This means that to get the pasture completely utilized the area must be restricted to just what will be required to carry the maximum number of cows until aftermath pasture is available. For example, if a 20-acre field were available, it should carry 35 to 40 cows during the luxuriant growth period. If only 20 cows are to be pastured the area should be reduced to 12 or 14 acres. The remainder should be fenced off with electric fencing and an early crop of hay taken off.

When the aftermath has grown sufficiently the electric fences can be taken away and the cows permitted to graze over the whole field. In the meantime, the hay crop on the other fields will have been harvested and these fields may be used for additional aftermath to carry the cows through the poorer pasture period, when one, two, or more acres per cow may be needed. Some of the second crop on new hay seedings should always be saved for hay for winter feeding of calves or especially high producing cows.

Feeding Grain with Pasture—When the pasture is abundant, cows giving 30 to 35 pounds of milk will need very little if any grain to supplement the pasture. However, with heavy producers, or when the pasture is getting low, grain should be fed if milk production is to be kept at a high level and the cows in good condition.

Based on trials in this connection at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, it would seem advisable to feed at least one pound of grain for every four pounds of milk produced over 35 pounds. During the early season when the grass is young and abundant, a grain ration consisting of equal parts of oats and barley will constitute a satisfactory grain supplement. With more mature grasses a grain supplement containing 14 to 15 per cent protein should be fed if the ration is to be properly balanced. Such a meal mixture can be made by adding oilcake meal to the above coarse grains in the ratio of one of oilcake to 6 of coar. grain.

Supplemental Pasture and Fodder—Annual pasture crops are very water-y and are likely to be laxative in effect if the cows are allowed to graze them continually. A good practice is to start grazing the annual pasture before the regular one is too closely cropped and to let the cows graze twice a day on the annual pasture for two or three hours at a time. A better utilization of the herbage is obtained in this way, and the pasture can be made to last until an aftermath is ready. In dry seasons, when pasture is scarce and forage crops or supplementary pastures are not available, roughage may have to be fed. Corn silage, in districts where corn grows well, has proved to be a very satisfactory supplement when sufficient silo storage space convening for feeding is available.

Skip School; Girls Hide Out Five Days
ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Two 15-year-old girls, afraid to face their parents after skipping school last Wednesday, were found safe Sunday night having spent five days in a shack on the city's outskirts. Barbara Spratt went home after a squabble with her companion, Marie Toner, and directed police to the shack. The girls had been spotted several times in places outside the city during a five-day search.

Marie and Barbara munched from school Wednesday and were afraid to come home," Mrs. Toner said. "Marie was so weak she could hardly walk. I don't know what the girl ate for the five days."
