Student Loan Requests High

"A very large number" of applications for student loans has been received by the department of education, Dr. L.G. Dewar, minister of education, said yesterday.

He added a meeting of the student loan committee would probably be held next week shortly after Labor Day to consider them.

However, the minister was definite in stating "there are more applications than we can handle at the $1,000 level. It looks as though we will have to prorate them."

Yesterday was the deadline date for receiving applications, but it is believed any received by the department prior to the committee meeting will be included for consideration.

Farm Groups Will View Corn Crops

Groups of Island farmers are invited to visit four farms this week where corn has been produced successfully.

The visits will be made to the farm of D. Fred MacRae and Son, Wheatley River, and the time scheduled is from 9.30 to 10 a.m.

From there direction is pointed to the farm of Earl MacRae and Son, Brookfield, and the time is 10.30 to 11 a.m.

Interested farmers will visit the Experimental Farm at Charlottetown from 1.30 to 2.30 in the afternoon and the last stop is on the farm of Leo P. McIsaac and Son, Mermaid, where the visit will start at 3.00 p.m. and may last until 5 p.m.

Mr. McIsaac has six different varieties under production and various formulae of fertilizers have been used.

The department of agriculture has prepared typewritten explanations of the methods used and the rates of fertilizer applied at each of the four places to be visited, and copies will be made available to the visitors.

Production of fodder corn has been reasonably good in the province this year; it was stated by David Smith, provincial department of agriculture fieldman.

SPECIAL SPEAKER

Special speaker on last night's program was Moncrieff Williamson, Curator of the art gallery and museum at Confederation Centre, Charlottetown.

He stated that in answer to some persons who like to refer to the Centre as a "white elephant" which will never get off the ground, it should be noted over 140,000 persons visited the Centre from the first of January till the end of July of this year.

He said a large exhibition by 15 leading Canadian artists will be shown there this fall. The exhibition had been all across the United States but Charlottetown is the only place in Canada where it will be shown. The departments of education of P.E.I., N.S. and N.B. will be invited to send bus loads of students to see the exhibition.

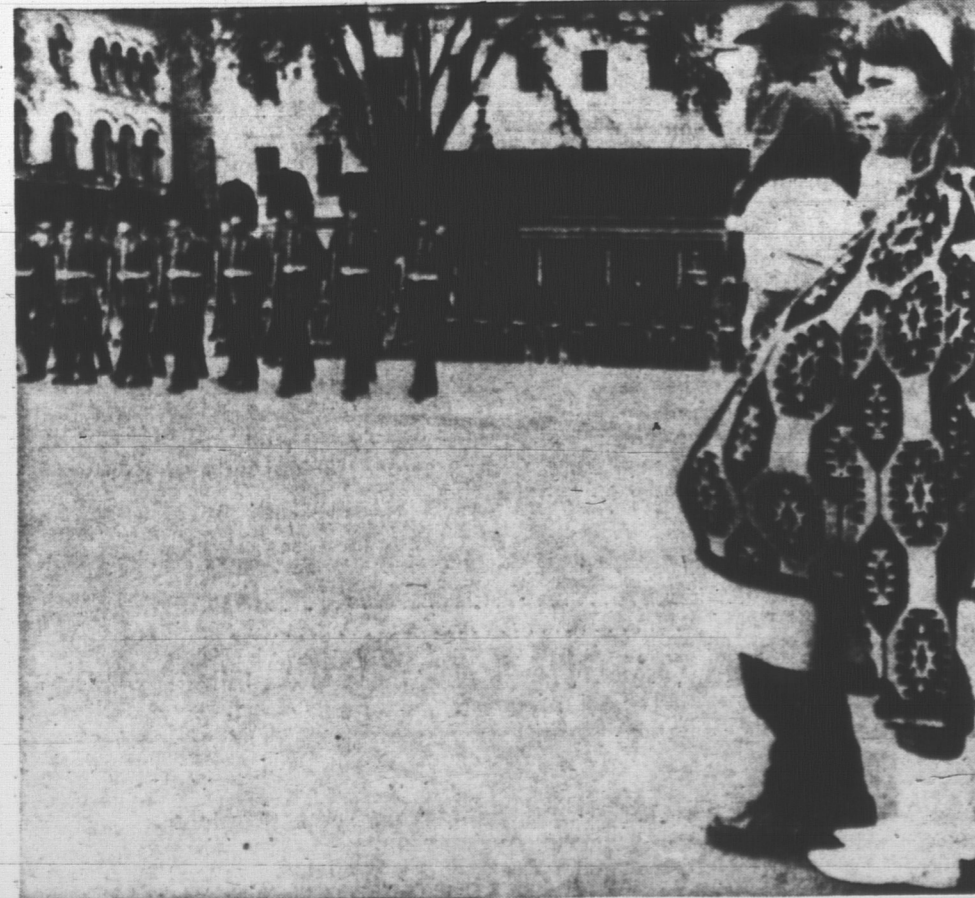

Mr. Williamson said as a 1967 Centennial project, the gallery will feature an exhibit of Robert Harris paintings.

He said the centre has been aiming its program at the young and will continue to do so.

The Jenkins sisters of Summerside rendered three vocal selections last night.

Judges for this year's show were: Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Harrison, Fredericton, N.B. gladioli; Peter White, Dalhousie; Keith Brehaut, cut flowers; H. E. Hyndman, roses; Owen Kelly, table decorations.

Mrs. Ives, as regent of the sponsoring chapter, presented the judges with gifts.

Spent Uranium Has Many Uses

By BOB MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Uranium has been used in the manufacture of nuclear weapons but it may end up in ammunition for conventional arms.

This is only one of several possible uses for spent uranium fuel after it has been expended in nuclear power reactors. Sol Gertsman, chief of the mines department's physical metallurgy division, told an interviewer.

Several papers have been presented on industrial uses for the metal here at the conference of metallurgists sponsored by the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

"Uranium would be too expensive to refine just for these new industrial applications," said Mr. Gertsman, chairman of the uranium alloy section at the three-day conference.

"But it's a lot cheaper, when you use nuclear reactor leftovers, sort of a byproduct of atomic energy."

Once the uranium has been used to power a reactor it could wind up in anything from a space vehicle to copper base alloys like brass and bronze.

USE AS AMMUNITION

"It may even be used in ammunition, again because of its high density," Mr. Gertsman said.

The uranium would have no effect on the explosives used in the ammunition, but for heavy artillery it could provide the heavy core necessary for accuracy and penetration power. Uranium is 19.2 times heavier than water.

"Right now the main problem is cost and scientists are looking for a way to cast the cores to eliminate expensive milling.

Weight also is the key to current uses for uranium in metal alloys or by itself.

"Uranium now is used in bronze and brass to improve its workability at high temperatures. You have to roll bronze and brass at low temperatures or it will crack because of impurities.

"With small amounts of uranium added, the uranium sort of ties up these impurities so you can use cheaper methods and roll it at higher temperatures.

PROVIDES PROTECTION

"And, believe it or not, uranium is an excellent shield against radiation — again because of its high density," Mr. Gertsman said.
