Province of Prince Edward Island.

IN CHANCERY,
Before the Vice Chancellor.

In the matter of Pierce Murphy, a person of unsound mind.

TO BE SOLD by Public Auction, on WED-NESDAY, the twenty-second day of APRIL next, A. D. 1885, at the hour of 12 o'clock, noon, in the Supreme Court Room, Law Courts Building, Charlottetown, in pursuant to an order made in the above cause, dated the ninth day of March, 1885, all those several pieces and parcels of land and premises hereinafter mentioned, belonging to the said Pierce Murphy, a person of unsound mind, the care and custody of whom hath been duly committed to Hugh McMillan, of New Haven, in Queen's County, merchant, and James O'Brien, of Charlottetown, in the said County, farmer, both of said pieces of land being situate in Lot Thirty-one (31) in Queen's County, Prince Edward Island, being described as follows:—

1st. All that tract, piece and parcel of Freehold land, lying and being on Township number Thirty-one, in Queen's County, Prince Edward Island, bounded as follows, that is to say: On the north by land leased to William Hughes, lately occupied by the said Pierce Murphy, on the east by farms in possession of Edward Murphy and the farm lately occupied by Donald McPhee, on the south by the Elliot or West River, and on the west by the land formerly in possession of David Webster, the said described land containing ninety-four (94) acres of land, a little more or less.

2nd. All that other tract, piece and parcel of Leasehold land, lying and being on Township number Thirty-one aforesaid, bounded as follows: Commencing at a stake fixed in the boundary line between the farms formerly in possession of Malcolm Livingstone and John Donil, at the distance of twenty-three chains and fifty links south of the Tryon Road, and from thence by a line running east at right angles a distance of twenty-three chains and fifty links, or to the Tryon Road, and from thence following the course of the Road to the place of commencement, and containing by estimation forty and a half acres of land, a little more or less, being the land demised by indenture of lease, bearing date the tenth day of March, 1839, by Andrew Colville and others, Trustees and Executors of the late Earl of Selkirk, to William Hughes, for the term of ninety-nine years, from the first day of March, 1839, subject to annual rental of one shilling sterling per acre, of which said land the said Pierce Murphy, by several mesne assignments and acts in the law became possessed; together with all rights and appurtenances thereunto belonging. The above parcels will be sold separately.

Terms:—One-third of the purchase money to be paid down at the time of sale and the balance to be secured by mortgage on the premises, payable in one, two and three years from day of sale, by equal instalments, with interest payable yearly at six per centum per annum.

CHAPTER XXXIV.
THE BETROTHAL.

It was a dry Sunday, and really a pleasant day for the 2nd of November. There was no sunshine but the clouds were high, and the wind was so still that the yellow leaves which fluttered down from the hedgerow elms must have fallen from pure decay. Nevertheless, Mrs. Poyser did not go to church, for she had taken a cold too serious to be neglected; only two winters ago she had been laid up for weeks with a cold; and since his wife did not go to church, Mr. Poyser considered that on the whole it would be as well for him to stay away too and "keep her company." He could, perhaps, have given no precise form to the reasons that determined this conclusion; but it is well known to all experienced minds that our firmest convictions are often dependent on subtle impressions which words are quite too coarse a medium.

However it was, no one from the Poyser family went to church that afternoon except Hetty and the boys; yet Adam was bold enough to join them after church, and say he would walk home with them, though all the way through the village he appeared to be chiefly occupied with Marty and Tommy, telling them about the squirrels in Binton Coppice, and promising to take them there some day. But when they came to the fields, he said to the boys, "Now, then, which is the stoutest runner? Him as gets

ADAM BEDE.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Our good Adam had no fine words into which he could put his feelings for Hetty; he could not disguise mystery in this way with the appearance of knowledge; as you have heard him. He only knew that the sight and memory of her moved him deeply, touching the spring of all his love and tenderness, all faith and courage within him.
How could he imagine narrowness, selfishness, hardness in her. He created the mind he believed in out of his own, which was large, unselfish, tender.

The hopes he felt about Hetty softened a little his feelings toward Arthur. Surely his attention to Hetty must have been of a slight kind; they were altogether wrong, and such as no man in Arthur's position ought to have allowed himself; but they must have had an air of playfulness about them, which had probably blinded him to their danger, and had prevented them from laying any strong hold on Hetty's heart.
As the new promise of happiness rose for Adam, his indignation and jealousy began to die out; Hetty was not made unhappy; he almost believed that she liked him best; and the thought sometimes crossed his mind that the friendship which had once seemed dead forever might revive in the days to come, and he would not have to say "good-bye" to the grand old woods, but would like them better because they were Arthur's. For this new promise of happiness, following so quickly on the shock of pain, had an intoxicating effect on the sober Adam, who had all his life been used to much hardship and moderate hope.
Was he really going to have an easy lot after all? It seemed so; for at the beginning of November, Jonathan Burge, finding it impossible to replace Adam, had at last made up his mind to offer him a share in the business, without further condition than that he should continue to give his energies to it, and renounce all thought of having a separate business of his own.
Son-in-law or no son-in-law, Adam had made himself too necessary to be parted with, and his head work was so much more important to Burge than his skill in handicraft, that his having the management of the woods made little difference in the value of his services; and as to the bargains about the Squire's timber, it would be easy to call in a third person. Adam saw here an opening into a broadening path of prosperous work, such as he had thought of with ambitious longing ever since he was a lad; he might come to build a bridge, or a town hall, or a factory, for he had always said to himself that Jonathan Burge's building business was like an acorn, which might be the mother of a great tree. So he gave his hand to Burge on the bargain, and went home with his mind full of happy visions, in which (my refined reader will perhaps be shocked when I say it) the image of Hetty hovered and smiled over his plans for seasoning timber at a trifling expense, calculations as to the cheapening of bricks per thousand by water carriage, and a favorite scheme for the strengthening of roofs and gables with a peculiar form of iron girder.
What then, Adam's enthusiasm lay in these tidings; and our love is wrought in our enthusiasm as electricity is wrought in the air, exalting its power by a subtle presence.
Adam would be able to take a separate house now, and provide for his mother in the old one; his prospects would justify his marrying very soon, and if Dinah consented to have Seth, their mother would perhaps be more contented to live apart from Adam. But he told himself that he would not be hasty—he would not try Hetty's feeling for him until it had time to grow strong and firm. However, tomorrow, after church, he would go to the Hall Farm and tell them the news. Mr.
Poyser, he knew, would like it better than a five pound note, and he should see if Hetty's eyes brightened at it. The months would be short with all he had to fill his mind, and this foolish eagerness which had come over him of late must not hurry him into any premature words. Yet, when he got home and told his mother the good news, and at his supper, while she sat by almost, crying for joy, and wanting him to eat twice as much as usual because of his good luck, he could not help preparing her gently for the coming change, by talking of the old house being too small for them all to go on living in it always.

CHAPTER XXXIV.
THE BETROTHAL.

It was a dry Sunday, and really a pleasant day for the 2nd of November. There
was no sunshine but the clouds were high,

to the reasons that determined this conclusion; but it is well known to all ex-
medium.

M. D.—Money Down.

The cases against Dr. Buchanan and Mrs.
Russell ended in Philadelphia on the 17th inst., to the conviction of the former, and the acquittal of the latter. A brother of Dr. Buchanan testified in rebuttal of some of witness Moore's declarations, and attempted to impeach that witness's character for veracity. The only persons that he had ever heard speak ill of Moore, however, were the prisoners. Mrs. Russell herself took the stage. She claimed to be the daughter of Buchanan, her business partner, but not to have known of the relation until she was twenty years of age. She refused to say how she acquired her wealth. After admitting that she was not a graduate of any regular medical school, she was questioned as to the meaning of "M. D." affixed to her name, on her business sign. She promptly replied "money down."

The People Happy.

The prosperity of the people is pretty well indicated by the extent of their amusements and enjoyments. When people have rain staring them in the face, and times are hard, the community at large grow slow; and happy faces and empty pockets are not generally concomitants. Our country exchanges show that, whilst Sir Richard Cartwright has been preaching blue ruin at Ottawa, the people have been enjoying themselves with sleighing, surprise and donation parties, tea-meetings, and everything else to an extent unprecedented in a Canadian winter. And why all this hilarity?
Because the people are happy and prosperous, and the blue ruin we hear of is only a figment of the imaginations of such men as Blue Knight Cartwright.—London, Ont.
Free Press.

The Short Line.

The Dominion Government having had under consideration Norvin Green's application for a further extension of time for paying the $150,000 due by the company for work done, have agreed to give the company till the first of April next. The understanding, it is said, is that if the company put up the money their contract of last year with the government will come into force. The company express confidence in their ability to go on.

Death of a Nova Scotian.

Rev. R. K. Ashley, who recently died at Willimatic, Conn., was a native of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, the son of a Baptist minister and one of eight brothers of whom six became Baptist ministers, a circumstance without parallel in the history of any family in this country. He preached the ordination sermons of three of his younger brothers.
