SAVAGE HARBOR

Miss Francis Coffin, nurse-in-training at the P. E. I. Hospital, spent the week-end at Savage Harbour, where she was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Coffin.

Mr. and Mrs. Freddie Mosher, Savage Harbour, were visitors to Charlottetown on Saturday. Many friends throughout this area were sorry to learn that the genial and obliging station agent at Vernon River, Mr. John McQuaid, is under treatment at the Charlottetown Hospital. All join in the hope that very soon Mr. McQuaid will be restored his full measure of health.

Mrs. Valentine MacIntyre of Savage Harbour, was a visitor to Charlottetown on Saturday.

It is pleasing to note that the condition of the Rev. George MacCormack, parish priest at St. Andrew's is steadily improving and hopes are held that he will be able to leave the Charlottetown Hospital this week and return to his parish. The Rev. Father George, as he is familiarly known, was quite severely burned in a fire at the Parochial House at St. Andrew's shortly before Christmas and since then has been under treatment at the Charlottetown Hospital.

Mrs. Lester Gunn accompanied by her son, Lester, Savage Harbour, were Sunday visitors to the Afton Road, where they were the guests of Mrs. Gunn's mother, Mrs. Mary MacQuillan.

Mr. Charles McConnell of Georgetown, was a visitor to Mt. Stewart on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Jay, accompanied by their son, Wayne, of Morell, were Sunday visitors to Savage Harbour, where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mosher.

Mrs. Reta Ross has returned to her home in Mt. Stewart after spending a pleasant holiday at Vernon River, where she was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. John MacQuaid.

Mrs. Lorne Doiron, Mt. Stewart, was rushed to the P. E. I. Hospital on Saturday where she underwent an operation for appendicitis. A host of friends join in the hope that Mrs. Doiron will make a speedy and complete recovery.

Mr. Jule Herring, the efficient and obliging conductor on the Mt. Stewart-Georgetown train, has returned from a week's visit to Montreal where he represented the Island Division at a Brotherhood meeting. During Mr. Herring's absence Conductor Henry Davey of Charlottetown took over the reins.

The little brush of winter weather has apparently petered out and with its going dwindles the hopes of hockey enthusiasts in the rural sections of King's County at least. It is understood some of the country rinks have decided not to open regardless of the weather on this on long.

No matter how disappointed we may feel we might look longingly backward to January 19th, 1923 when the thermometers at Mt. Stewart registered 30 below zero. The storm which accompanied the cold snap at that time must have been equally severe for the rest of the island.

NO SUCCESSOR NAMED

OTTAWA (CP)—Hon. J. J. Bowen, lieutenant-governor of Alberta since Feb. 1, 1950, will continue in that post, it was learned Monday. It is understood that Mr. Bowen has not resigned nor has a successor been named.

The Late Mrs. Daniel R. Burke

During the happy holiday season came the sad news that our friend and neighbor, Mrs. Ressa A. Burke, widow of Mr. Daniel R. Burke, had been seriously burned while attending a heater in her home.

The shock proved too great although she lived nine days and was allowed the joy of having her daughters and grand-children rush home from the United States to be with her during her last hours in the Prince Edward Island Hospital where she passed away on Friday, January seventh, 1955.

The funeral was from the Bay Fortune United Church on Sunday, January ninth, Rev. D. A. Sharpe officiated.

Mrs. Burke was a beautiful character who loved her family and home where she was a shining example of hospitality.

"There is no time that we could set for parting. We who must remain. We never ready for such pain. Even our prayer would be. 'Not yet, not yet, dear God—another day.' With us let our beloved stay. We must believe, when falls the blow That wisely, God has willed it so."

She is survived by three sons, Roy of Dundas, Clarence and Lester of Fortune, four daughters, Mrs. Ralph Keith, Needham, Mrs. Theodore Edwards, Norwood and Mrs. Clifford Dewolfe of Waltham, Mass., Mrs. Reginald Smith, Saint John, N. B., eleven grandchildren and three sisters, Mrs. Jessie Simmons and Mrs. Ida Robert, Marblehead, Mass., and Mrs. Earle MacLauren, Belmont, Prince Edward Island.

The pall bearers were John and Fred Aitken, Arthur Dixon, Jocelyn Coffin, Harry Burke and Henry Tophensh.

Card of Thanks

The family of the late Mrs. Daniel R. Burke wish to extend sincere thanks to the many friends and relatives who kindly helped by sending flowers, messages of condolence and assistance as these acts have been appreciated very much.

Tax Offer No Interest To Newfoundland

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Premier Joseph Smallwood said Monday he didn't think Prime Minister St. Laurent's recent offer to revive income tax relations with the provinces is "of any particular interest to Newfoundland."

"This proposal is not, I think, of any particular interest to Newfoundland but we will formulate our thoughts much more clearly and finally at the dominion-provincial conference that is to be held," the premier said.

Mr. St. Laurent's offer revolved around a revision of the tax rental agreements under which all provinces but Quebec surrendered their income tax collection rights in return for grants from the federal government.

FORMAL INSTALLATION LONDON (AP)—Foreign Secretary Eden will be formally installed by the Queen as a Knight of the Garter June 18 in St. George's chapel at Windsor castle.

RIGHTS OF MAN SACRED BEFORE GOD

A "Special Divine Service preceding the opening of Her Majesty's courts in Ontario" was held on January 10 in St. James Cathedral, Toronto. It was significant because it was held on the initiative of the Chief Justice of the Province, and, although it followed a British example, the service was distinctly Canadian.

It was significant because of the persons in attendance—chief justices, judges and magistrates whose decisions establish or vindicate the rights of our citizens. With them were members of the Bar Association who maintain the rights of our clients, advise them in perplexity and guard their interests in every way open to them.

Even the criminal has his defenders who say all that can be said on his behalf—sometimes more. All these are concerned with the administration of justice between man and man, and as the rights of men are inherent in personality, they are sacred before God.

The service was significant because of its acknowledgment of the truth that there is no authority except from God, and that those that exist have been instituted by God.

SET APART This class of citizens is set apart to deal with the rights of men, and together they asked God "to bless the judges and magistrates of this province, and with them those who plead the cause of righteousness in our courts and those who counsel and advise their fellow-men in perplexity and distress."

Bishop Wilkinson opened his masterly address with this statement of the object of the service: "In this service we have assembled to view our great responsibilities in the light of God's countenance and to ask Divine guidance and wisdom for Her Majesty's judges and counselors in the discharge of their high and at times awesome duties."

"There is no institution of our country and civilization which is a greater guardian of the rights, liberties and integrity of our citizens and their institutions than the law-courts of our land. Lord Tweedsmuir, when addressing members of the Bar Association, defined their task in these significant words: 'You are assisting in providing and administering that rational code of conduct, that union of discipline and liberty without which no society can be wholesome and no nation can be great.'

"The courthouse of any city or town in this province is a reminder to the citizens of the reign of law in our land. The majority of citizens may never enter a court of law and may know nothing about the statutes and procedure of the law courts, but for them it symbolizes a force and institution reflecting the supremacy of the moral law for humanity, the avenger of evil and lawlessness, the defender of justice and order, the upholder of the freedom and integrity of all men."

GOOD SAMARITAN "When a lawyer asked Jesus to state the greatest commandment of the Jewish law, Jesus answered with the question: 'What is written in the law? What doest thou?' Then, in response to the recitation of the law of love to God and one's neighbor, Christ gave to mankind the parable of perfect human justice and mercy in the story of the Good Samaritan.

"Behind all natural law is the goodness and good purpose of the Moral Law which the pagan philosophers and poets defied in the virtues of Truth and Wisdom, Justice and Temperance.

"As Richard Hooker states it: 'Of law there can be no less acknowledgment than that her seat is in the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world.' 'From Judaism and Christianity the common law of England derived its basic authority and spirit of justice, impartiality and mercy. These words of the ancient Lawgiver, Moses, express the pattern and ideal of any court of our land: 'Ye shall not respect persons in judgment, but ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man, for the judgment is God's.'

"The above are just excerpts from a truly great address, and we can give in conclusion only its closing words: 'The achievement of the Christian lawyer was to establish free men and women in the fellowship of a free community; they were the architects of freedom. Against any spirit of lawlessness within or without our country may the ideals and instruments of the common law be maintained, not only for the people of the Anglo-Saxon world, but in time for the good of all people.'

Fingerprints

day when his butler's discovery of Rubinstein's trussed, gagged body exploded the most sensational New York mystery story of a decade.

BRILLIANCY A MYTH

Brooks, 56-year-old native of Paris who formerly lived in Toronto, called the conception of Rubinstein as a brilliant financial mind a myth and added: "He succeeded only by chicanery and deception. All of his deals were destructive. He never built anything."

Another development during the day was the emergence of a cab driver who drove Rubinstein to his rendezvous with death in his Fifth Avenue mansion early Tuesday morning.

Ernest La Medica, 53, confirmed the details provided by Rubinstein's last date, model Estelle Gardner, one of many glamor girls whom Rubinstein took night clubbing.

DRAFT DODGER

Rubinstein, a ruthless financial manipulator who amassed a fortune estimated at better than $10,000,000, served two years in federal prison for dodging the draft during the Second World War. He got out in 1949.

The playboy multi-millionaire, uninvolved in life, went to an icy, wind-lashed grotto Monday, even his funeral oration a lament for his brilliant talents.

"His wastrel talent wasted and a life that might have been useful blasted—oh, the good that might have been," said Rabbi Julius Mark at the funeral of the 46-year-old Rubinstein.

Wants To Make

fulness of life. The late Dr. Harry Stack Sullivan, famous in psychiatric circles, defines love as that state in which the satisfaction and security of another has become as important as one's own.

Frank J. Sheed, distinguished English writer on religion and morals, says "The most important element in human love is willing the good of the other person." And to will the good of another is not merely to wish it but to will it effectively. That is, to actually work for it—as interestedly as we would strive to benefit ourselves.

Mr. Sheed further says our common life is damaged at the source by insufficient love—and in all its functioning by want of trust. People love each other all too little, he says, but they trust one another hardly at all—and indeed, he adds, a superficial glance over the human scene today doesn't justify too much trust of our moral reliability.

Yet the maintenance of trust between persons is essential to happiness; and the way to develop or restore trust in human relations is to become morally trustworthy oneself, insofar as one is able, with the help of God.

For A-B-C guidance in the field of affections, study "Love and Marriage" by F. Alexander Magoon (Harper & Brothers), a quite delightful, sage and searching treatment of the subject.

Nine days of feasting and revelry were recently observed by the tribesmen of Toro to mark the birthday of the ruling chief, the Mukama, Lt. George D. K. Rukidi. A COUNTRY GARDEN

ly atmosphere, it is venerable, abiding and serene. A beautiful book written by Eric Parker has been added to the collection here. It is entitled Surrey Gardens and describes the many gardens which are opened to the public. The writer owns one of these lovely gardens and in writing the book he said "a book giving an account of all the gardens I have seen in this way, might be of interest to other sight-seers."

In these words Eric Parker modestly describes his aim in writing this book: what he does not tell is the success with which his aim is achieved. Mr. Parker gives an informed appreciation of more than eighty of the Surrey gardens which, at one time or another in the year, are open to the public; he tells of the wild life—the birds and insects and animals—which adds so much to the pleasure the gardens give; he writes about garden writers who have been connected with Surrey; and he evokes with great success the pains and pleasures, and the atmosphere, of his own garden at Feathercombe.

William McLaren's drawings appropriately decorate the book which will endear itself to gardeners and garden makers alike. It is a good book to own when it is impossible to visit other gardens as we would like.

It is only a few years ago that a scheme, fully described in the pages of this book, was set on foot by which the owners of gardens should under certain conditions open them to the public.

Today during every spring and summer the gardens of England, Wales, from Westmorland and Yorkshire in the North, from Anglesey and Pembrokeshire, to Kent and Surrey and Cornwall in the South, are visited by thousands of sight-seers from neighbouring countries and overseas. And the author, as a visitor to other gardens and owner of a garden visited, thought a book giving an account of all these gardens he had seen would be of interest to all.

He writes . . . A garden differs from other work of art in that it is a living organism, always changing from season to season, from year to year, calling for unremitting care and hard work that carries no material reward. To the casual observer a garden may appear as an orderly arrangement of lawns and paths, a mass of colour, a symphony in green, a worthy setting for a family home, or a picture it may be any or all of these things, but to the creator it is much more. Every flower bed, every shrub, every tree has for him its own story.

One of these gardens will be described in the Green Lane Farm and this was made out of a farm field half a century ago. Mr. Galworthy, the owner, had planted all the trees. We looked, as he told us about them at three poplars towering above us, at a fern-leaved birch swaying in the wind, and at a tulip tree beyond the tulip trees are flowerless for the first twenty-five years of their lives, and this was waiting with buds ready for blooming. Everything was planted in a natural way at Green Lane Farm garden. A golden oak high in the sun was a tree new to the author.

Next we came to two hybrids named after the owner of the garden and the gardener, a rhododendron and a camellia. Then for a change we saw a pink rose single in petals, and next to Viburnum which for the beauty of its leaf and flower had decorated the pages of COUNTRY LIFE.

Then to a tree of which, for the triple beauty of its foliage I do not know the like, a coppiced beech whose dark leaves you should hold up to look through them against the sun. The copper-brown then changes to brown-green, and the pink edges are half-transparent and half rose.

Walking back through the green lanes we come to the house covered with a yellow rose and another plant of a white rose which must be a hundred years old, for nobody knows its age or its name, and so ends our visit to one of the lovely English gardens opened to the public and described in this beautiful book.
