Queen Visits Cutty Sark

LONDON (CP) — The Queen drove six miles through the streets of London Tuesday to inspect a sailing ship that will never put to sea again.

She motored from Buckingham Palace to Greenwich to go aboard the famous China tea clipper, Cutty Sark, now in permanent drydock as a maritime museum and a memorial to the men of the merchant navy.

The Queen's scheduled departure from the palace was delayed by more than 10 minutes while she chatted with Prime Minister Diefenbaker. Palace officials had expected the Canadian leader's audience of the Queen would last for about 15 minutes. Instead, he was at the palace for 40 minutes.

The Cutty Sark's figurehead was carved from a block of laminated Canadian white pine, a gift of the Canadian government.

During her visit she met painter Leslie Wilcox, who designed the new figurehead when the ship was restored earlier this year and whose works are among those hanging in the royal yacht Britannia.

Wilcox has been commissioned by Brig. M. P. Bogert of the Canadian Army to paint the siege of Cape Breton by New England forces in 1745. The painting is destined for the Canadian Army Staff College at Kingston, Ont.

BEDTIME STORIES

Sally Sly Takes Over

There's satisfaction in the end When things work out as you intend.
Sally Sly

Black Pussy had done his feathered neighbors, especially Redeye the Vireo and Mrs. Redeye, a good turn without intending to and without knowing he had.

Because the Redeyes were tenderhearted they had been feeding a young Cowbird who could if he would get his own food, but who pretended he couldn't, and followed them about all day long crying to be fed. Black Pussy had tried to catch him and had given him such a fright that he had taken to his wings and flown into the Green Forest.

She flew just a very little way and waited for him.

When he thought it was safe to do so he returned to the Old Orchard to look for Mr. and Mrs. Redeye.

They were nowhere to be found.

They were keeping out of his sight.

Now that they were free of him they would keep free. He tried begging from others in the Old Orchard. Whenever he saw another bird near he would run or fly that way with mouth open and crying to be fed.

No one would give him so much as a single worm.

Now his mother, Sally Sly, who had tricked the Redeyes into caring for him from the time he had hatched from the egg she had left in their nest, had been keeping out of sight in the neighborhood but watching to see how the young Cowbird was getting along. She was watching when Black Pussy tried to catch him and frightened him so.

She watched him beg in vain to be fed by the Old Orchard folk. The time for her to take over had come and she knew it. She was ready.

It would be for only long enough to show him where and how to get his food. She flew over near him.

As soon as the young Cowbird saw Sally Sly he ran toward her with open mouth and crying to be fed. She didn't fly away and leave him as other birds had done. She flew just a very little way and waited for him. He flew after her, begging harder than ever. She led him out of the Old Orchard, along the edge of the Green Meadow.

She would fly a little way then wait, looking for and picking up food as she waited. When he saw her doing this he hurried to catch up.

So Sally Sly led the young Cowbird to the Old Pasture. This was very different from the Old Orchard, the Green Forest and the Green Meadow. Cows were grazing there. They were the first cows he ever had seen. At first he was afraid. Sally Sly paid no more attention to him. She flew over to where the nearest cow was slowly moving along as she ate the tender new grass. Sally Sly began running about close to the feet of the Cow and picking up something.

Then the young bird made a discovery. There were other cows and doing just what Sally Sly was doing were other feathered folk.

Some looked just like Sally and some had soft brown heads and wore glossy black coats, very trim and neat. Without knowing how he knew, he did know at once that these all were birds of his own kind. They were his people.

He forget to be afraid. He joined them. Right away he found out why they were there and what they were doing. When a cow took a step it started insects hidden in the grass to running and flying.

These the birds were catching. No one took any notice of him. No one offered to feed him. In a few minutes he was doing just what they were doing, running about and picking up an easily caught breakfast around the feet of those cows.

From that time on Sally Sly forgot him. He had found his place in the Great World.

Commonwealth Papers Look For New Sources Of Newsprint

LONDON (CP)—Commonwealth newspaper executives voted Wednesday to establish a study group to explore the possibility of developing newsprint supplies in Commonwealth countries other than Canada.

The newsprint scheme was embodied in one of four resolutions adopted at the final session of the annual conference of the Commonwealth Press Union. Other resolutions dealt with telecommunications, a training program for Commonwealth journalists and freedom of the press.

Delegates said the cost of newsprint is the vital problem facing newspapers. It comprised almost 70 per cent of the total cost of production compared with 30 per cent in 1930.

D. F. H. Packer, managing director of the Australian Consolidated Press, said if newsprint charges continue to rise he did not know what would happen.

NEWSPAPERS EXPLOITED

"If anybody is being exploited it is not the public by the newspapers, but the newspapers by the newsprint manufacturers."

Referring to the Commonwealth penny - a - word rate for press cables, the Australian publisher said: "Compared with the cost of newsprint, it would not matter if we paid one shilling a word for our cables."

"All we spend on telecommunications and the cost of gathering news pales into insignificance compared with the astronomical increase we are paying for the basic material we must have to produce our product."

In Australia, newspapers that paid £12 a ton for newsprint in 1939 now paid more than £90.

EXCHANGE PROBLEMS

Other delegates complained that even if newspapers could afford to pay present newsprint prices, they had difficulty buying Canadian supplies because of sterling exchange restrictions. They suggested the United Kingdom colonial office should be approached to help develop alternative newsprint sources in South Africa and India.

Senator Rupert Davies, honorary chairman of the Canadian section of the CPU and president of the Kingston Whig-Standard, said another problem facing newspapers in Canada is the high level of taxation, which absorbed 49 per cent of the gross profit.

The 70 delegates also adopted a resolutions endorsing the proposals, aiming at cheaper rates and better facilities for press communications throughout the world, which the CPU council is submitting to all the member states of the International Telecommunication Union of the United Nations for consideration at its general conference next year.

SERVE WEAK BEER

TORONTO (CP)—Beer with a low alcohol content was on sale Tuesday night in a lunch counter at Maple Leaf Stadium where an International League baseball game between Toronto and Columbus was played. The 12-ounce bottles sold for 40 cents apiece. Ontario liqyor laws say sale of beer with an alcoholic content greater than 2.5 per cent comes under provincial control. The stadium is not licensed to serve liquor or beer.

Licensing 5 New TV Stations Recommneded By CBC Board

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC board of governors Wednesday recommended the licensing of five new television stations, including two in Quebec province. But it rejected an application for a TV outlet at Pembroke, Ont.

Recommendations for the new TV licenses were for stations at Red Deer, Alta., Prince Albert, Sask., Swift Current, Sask., Matane, Que., and Trois-Rivieres, Que.

In opposing the Pembroke application — made along with the others in hearings here Tuesday—the board said it was not satisfied with the proposedfinancing of the applicants, the Ottawa Valley Broadcasting Company, Ltd., operators of radio station CHOV at Pembroke. The company had sought a licence to operate on channel 5.

The board also recommended that the government accept an application from Marlene Beaudoin, 21-year-old daughter of former Commons Speaker Rene Beaudoin for a new radio station at Thompson, Nothern Manitoba \ ite of a huge mining development. It was for a 1,000-watt station at 610 on the dial.

The Matane application by La Campagnie de Radio-Diffusion de Matane Ltee for operation on channel 9 at 160 Kilowatts ideo and 95 kilowatts audio was opposed by Frank Power, Liberal MP for Quebec South who was counsel for CJBR-TV, Rimouski, Que. He said the lower St. Lawrence south shore area could not economically support two TV outlets.

The CBC regional engineer for Quebec, Henri Audet of Montreal, was the applicant for the Trois-Rivieres station. It will operate on channel 9 with a powerof 3.07 kilowatts video and 1.53 kilowatts audio.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAY BECKER

QUIZ

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♦	Pass

What do you now bid with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠J ♥K5 ♦AQ7 ♣KQJ9864
2. ♠A8 ♥A942 ♦6 ♣AKJ873
3. ♠853 ♥AK7 ♦9 ♣AKQJ62
4. ♠A4 ♥9 ♦AKQ ♣KQ87653

1. Four clubs. The bids to be considered are three notrump, four clubs and five clubs. Although it is possible to construct a North hand where three notrump would be the best final contract, there are many more hands that will play best in a suit. With only a tentative heart stopper and a club suit that may have to be established, a notrump undertaking looks much more dangerous than a suit contract.

The choice between four and five clubs is resolved in favor of the former because the top cards include only one ace and two kings. A jump to five clubs, in conjunction with the previous jump to three clubs, may lead partner to bid an unmakable slam.

2. Three hearts. It seems quite likely the best chance to make game lies in notrump, but it is best to use the three heart bid as a stepping stone to three notrump. In this way, partner is apprised of the unbalanced nature of the hand and is, at the same time, notified of the shortage in spades and diamonds.

North has already put us on notice of an apparent misfit. There is a corresponding duty on our side to caution him not to get frisky in his suits. A three heart bid gets the message across more effectively than three notrump.

3. Three notrump. With eight rapid winners, the three notrump contract becomes an outstanding candidate for game. If there are bigger things in store, North will have to speak up again. At the moment, the nine-trick game is more appealing than game in a suit.

4. Five diamonds. A slam is just around the corner, but the most that should be done about it is to urge partner to bid it. The two jump bids combined with the enthusiastically announced support for diamonds constitute a plea for North to bid again.

It would be improper to leap to six ourselves—partner may have no aces. The four notrump convention does not serve well in this case because the number of aces North has will not necessarily settle the question of the best final contract. Thus, if partner responded by showing one ace, we would then have to guess what to do next.
