

Racy Literature.

A Deputy Sheriff in Keene, some year ago, had a habit when anything occurred to him which he had forgotten to state—quickly raising his right hand, with forefinger extended, and always prefacing his remarks with the exclamation, "By the way!"

An old lady was telling her grandchildren about some trouble in Scotland, in the course of which the chief of her clan was beheaded.—"It was no great thing of a head, to be sure," said the good lady, "but it was a sad loss to him."

An eccentric man in Bath, Maine, was asked to aid a foreign mission. He gave a quarter of a dollar, but stopped the agent as he was departing, and said: "Here's a dollar to pay the expense of getting the quarter to the heathen."

A merchant who died suddenly, left in his desk a letter written to one of his correspondents. His clerk seeing that it was necessary to send the letter, wrote at the bottom—"since writing the above I have died."

"Guilty or not guilty?" sharply said the City Judge the other day to an inattentive female prisoner in the dock. "Just as your honor pleases. It's not for the likes o'me to dictate to your honor's worship," was the reply.

A traveller went into an inn after a shower, and asked the landlord to show him a good fire; "for, said he," I am very wet;" and then turning to the waiter, he said: "Bring me a tankard of ale immediately, for I'm plaguey dry."

BEAUTIFUL EXTRACTS.

He that knows useful things, and not he that knows many things is the wise man.

Every man cherishes in his heart some object—some shrine at which his adoration is paid, unknown to his fellow-mortals.

It is conferring a kindness to deny at once a favor which you intend to refuse at last.

Let persons understand one another in good faith as honest men, and not as thieves who wish to cheat each other.

"I never wonder," says Dean Swift, "to see men wicked; but I often wonder to see them not ashamed."

Happiness must arise from our own temper and actions, and not immediately from any external conditions.

So long as men are imprudent in their diet and business, doctors and lawyers will ride in carriages.

What good would centuries do the man who only knows how to waste his time? Little drops of rain brighten the meadows, and little acts of kindness brighten the world.

A great step is gained when a child has learned that there is no necessary connection between liking to do a thing and doing it.

Many condemn the organization of the past; but they all observed their purposes—have really done great good; and the world would have suffered more without them.—Adin Bullou.

CURIOSITIES OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.—How differently is the action described in scouring a forest and scouring a floor; in skimming the sea and skimming milk; in breaking a dish, breaking a colt and breaking a commandment; in catching a train and catching a cold; in falling in a ditch, falling in love, falling in your own estimation, and falling in with a friend, or falling out of a carriage. So you might read of a museum of wonders, illuminated by the light of other days; furnished with music, played on the feelings by the man who having lowered his voice by means of ropes, murdered a tune, but subsequently tried his voice and acquitted himself with ease; with walls hung with pictures of despair; with a library filled partly with volumes of smoke, and where could be seen the lady who sat on the lapse of age; the attorney's clerks who engrossed a man's attention; mathematician who is so devoted to figures that he frequently casts up his eyes; the girl who was saved in a wreck by clinging to a forlorn hope; a man who was wounded by sitting down on the spur of the moment; the acrobat that jumps at conclusions; the cup of sorrow that overflowed; the chain which bound a freeborn mind; the ticking of an oyster bed; the receipt giving to a man who paid his respects; the suspenders used for the breeches of trust; the quiver which was observed in the voice of (n)arrow-minded men; a lock of hair from the head of a discourse, and one from the head of a cabbage; a flat iron to smooth ruffled tempers; a phial of tears from a weeping willow; a button from the coat of the stomach; a sheaf from the shock of an earth-quake, and many other articles equally rare and interesting.

Oh! let youth cherish the happiest of earthly beams while yet it is at his command; for their cometh a day to all, when "neither the voice of the lute nor the birds" shall bring back the sweet slumbers that fell on their young eyes as unbidden as the dews.

Education is a companion which no misfortune can depress, no climate destroy, no enemy alienate, no despotism enslave. At home a friend, abroad an introduction, in solitude a solace, in society an ornament. It chastens voice, it guides virtue it gives at once grace and government to genius.

Fame is an undertaker that pays but little attention to the living, but bedizens the dead, furnishes out their funerals, and follows them to the grave.

There is nothing like a fixed, steady aim, with an honorable purpose. It dignifies your nature and insures your success.—Beecher
