PROHIBITION.
Sir:—We noticed a few days ago in The Patriot that Inspector Jenkins complained that he attended at Peale's Station to conduct two, prohibition cases but found on arriving that the summonses in these cases had never been served! Surely, this is a strange state of affairs, that open violators of the Prohibition law can prevent summonses being served on them! Whose fault is this? Where is the Stipendiary Magistrate? The country is looking to him to do his duty in this matter and bring the guilty parties to justice. We shall see.
