Docherty, of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church in Washington, D.C., are shown in a picture in the New York Times standing before a portrait of the Rev. Dr. John B. Romeyn. The Notre Dame Academy is holding its bazaar on November 19th and 20th. From a recent editorial in the Listener entitled "British Way of Life" the following excerpt is taken: "The truth is surely that both traditional values and modern triumphs need celebrating."

This remark while applying of course to the wonderful old British civilization also makes one think of Notre Dame. The beloved convent certainly has established solid traditions also the good sisters are among the most progressive citizens. In the wonderful display at the bazaar booths will be seen a multi-variety of articles to tempt the smart shopper. In the beautiful selection it will be seen that the sisters "know a style when they see one."

So it is on Wednesday and Thursday that friends of Notre Dame gather within her precincts to make and renew happy friendships at the bazaar or as the British say to honor the tradition and to celebrate the triumphs—not the least of which is a grand Canadian bazaar held at the Notre Dame Academy, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

MR. AND MRS. DOUGLAS LEE SORRIE

First Wedding Is Held In Montague Baptist Church

The Montague United Baptist Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Myra Mae, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Kemp, Sturgeon, became the bride of Douglas Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Sorrie, Sturgeon. Rev. A.G.J. Steeves officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The church was beautifully decorated with multi-colored gladioli and mixed flowers, and the guest pews were marked with tiny bouquets of sweet peas and white satin bows.

The wedding music was played by the church organist, Miss Clemmie MacLean, and the soloist was Mrs. Douglas Coffin who sang "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor length gown of white silk organza over taffeta, trimmed with sequins and fashioned with a high neckline and fitted bodice with a large bow at the back. The long sleeves came to points over the hands. Her finery veil of tulle illusion fell softly from a coronet headpiece of tiny seed pearls and sequins. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Phyllis Nicholson, wore a ballerina length gown of blue nylon net over taffeta, with matching headpiece and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Mr. James Garnhum was best man and the ushers were Mr. LeRoy Wight, uncle of the groom and Mr. Morley Kemp, brother of the bride.

Rev. Mr. Steeves presented the young couple with a beautiful white Bible in honor of the first wedding in the Montague United Baptist Church.

Mrs. Kemp chose for her daughter's wedding a blue two piece dress with navy accessories and wore a corsage of pink carnations. The groom's mother was attired in a navy blue taffeta dress with white accessories and wore a corsage of white carnations.

A reception for fifty guests was held at Hill side Inn immediately following the ceremony. The bride's table was attractively decorated with autumn flowers and centered with a three tier wedding cake, topped with a miniature bird and groom. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Mr. Steeves, and responded to by the groom.

Telegram conveying congratulations and best wishes from Rev. R.G. Hill, former pastor, was read by the best man, Miss Edwina Farrell was in charge of the guest book.

The happy young couple left on a honeymoon trip through Nova Scotia. For travelling, the bride chose a suit of winter white with a blue fleck, blue accessories and a corsage of Beauty roses. Mr. and Mrs. Sorrie are residing in Montague where the groom is on the staff of Doug's Service Station and the bride is a valued employee at Clark Bros.

The newlyweds were guests of honour at a post nuptial shower at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ross, Sturgeon, where they received many lovely gifts.

ELLEN'S DIARY

"A Lazy Youth Makes A Lively Old Man!"

Now in these November days our farmers plow. Tonight in the star-shine tractor-lights like over-size Will-o'-the-wisps mark the course in the fields, where continues now the interest of the day.

So plow-shares whistle away in darning furrows those acres where our next year's crop will green and grow. And before them today to make their passage more tidy went a small band of workers, lifting fences from their paths and also clearing away in flames those accumulations of brush collected from the stumped hedgerows of late.

The band; James and the pair of interested and extremely alert workers which Saturday had granted him as helpers: Gage and Mack. They kindled and heaped on brush this afternoon to the field-fire, the smoke of which we saw climb and float away in a gray ribbon and dissolve, above the neighboring spruce treetops and stream. And altogether spent an enjoyable day in the field.

In summer what pleasant days farm-children have in the fields, to gather for themselves healthy appetites, to build sound bodies and keep young minds clear and clear. But now that the year draws toward its close, there are few such, sunlit and lovely left to them.

"I've always heard" James twinkled to Mack this evening—"it's an old Scottish saying—"A lazy youth makes a lively old man" so I'm wondering just what you and Gage will be like when the years come over you! You surely are smart willing lads.

In fact, I don't know how I would have managed without your help today."

Mack's face was darkened from his attendance at the clearing-fire, his clothes scented with smoke.

"It was a day that went fast, wasn't it?" he nodded.

The week too went fast. It came, smiled, remained it seems only briefly, and now is but an indistinct form as it fades from sight beyond the hills. Short busy days it gave, lengthened evenings—evenings of "lamp-light" and fireshine and the content of the season's inglenook.

So on farms we attend to the duties which call: outdoors the fieldwork, indoors the ordinary pleasant items which cause the fall-days to wing so smartly away. All to win our daily bread. What a mixture that daily bread is! Past and present is in it, of earth it is, and of Heaven.

"Oh I am rich in treasures stored away— Old ecstasies and half-remembered joys. Prismatic dawns that faded to white noons; Knowledge forgotten; songs my mother sang; The scent of flowers that withered long ago; Sorrows that long since lost their bitterness And only knit me closer to my kind; Music that lingers though its notes are stilled; Voices and hands and lips that I have loved; These are my wealth, my comfort and my stay, But not on these my soul can feed today.

Holding in dear remembrance all that was, Guarding my treasurers with a miser's care, May I have yet some daily need of joy. Some fresh untrasted cup; some flower that springs From the deep soil of old experience But blossoms in the sunlight of this hour. Rather some sorrow, fresh and fierce and strong Than the staid dregs of old wrongs Too dearly cherished. Grant me, Lord, new songs, New mirth and wisdom. That my soul be fed. Give me this day my spirit's daily bread."

Until Monday — — — Diary, Good-night.
