CONDITIONS.

I ran across a newspaper man the other day on Pennsylvania avenue who once gave me an oral distribution of your visitors probably the greatest shock he received in the whole country. It happened in St. Paul or Minneapolis. I forgot which, and the distinguished visitor was Edwin Arnold. The newspaper man had just left the army after service on the plains and he knew more about "books and saddles" and "maps" than he did about literature. He was sent to interview Sir Edwin Arnold. The great man received him with a courtesy that took away his breath. He could not think of a single question to ask. The silence grew embarrassing. Finally, in desperation, he blurted out: "Sir Edwin, I'd like to ask you where—where do flies go in winter?"—Washington Post.

A pleasing agitation will shortly fill the minds of the ladies touching new costumes. Nothing better can be obtained than a Cravenette. In a variety of shades, it clings, if need be, while it is at the same time absolutely impervious to rain or dust. It is rainproof, yet as porous as any other dress material, so that it is free from the objections of the rubber goods. Cravenette is made by Myrtle, Brown, Grey, Castor and Black, the ideal dress goods for spring and summer. Save money, in wear, while it guarantees as distinguished appearance.

JUST ARRIVED!

A lot of nice TAN UPPEERS, excellent qualities. Also, Tan Calf in the skin suitable for Ladies', Misses' and Youths' Boots and Shoes, best value, lowest prices. Order early, order now, from J. H. BELL, Ch' town, May 15, 1895—ly The Reliable Boot and Shoe Dealer.

GLASS PAPER.

That Would Be a More Accurate Designation Nowadays than Sandpaper.

Sandpaper as now made, is false to its name, for it has no sand about it, the backing several years' experience in being usually powdered glass, which does its work with vastly greater effect.

One of the most important operations in the fabrication of sandpaper is the pulverization of glass into powder of the different grades of fineness. Commonly an iron mortar is used for this purpose, a heavy iron pestle being the crushing instrument. Stamping machinery is better. It consists of a stout box whose iron side walls serve as a base for the stamping machinery. In the box, which can be closed by a wooden door to prevent waste of material, and also injury to the workmen, are two iron cylinders in which play the stamps. These crush the glass, turning on their own axes as they work.

For grading the powder several shifting cylinders are necessary, covered with gauze of different mesh. Beginning with the coarsest the workman passes gradually to the finest, resulting each time in a finer grade of sandpaper. The paper to be used in the manufacture must be good, strong, and rather rough, so that it will not be torn by knots and irregularities, and if there are any such they must be planned off. If they should be overlooked, they would interfere with the proper use of the sandpaper; the knots would protrude through the glue, and little ridges and channels would result, making it impossible to smooth off a surface evenly with the paper.

The paper is cut into large sheets, spread on work tables, fastened down, and then painted, by means of a large brush, with a thin coat of hot glue. If the glue is too thin and the paper of bad quality, the glue soaks into the paper, so that the remaining fragments of glass, which occur in no manner may be held fast in it. On the other hand, if the layer of glue is too thick or the consistency viscous, the outer part hardens too quickly, so that the glass powder cannot embed itself in it.

When the glue has been spread on the paper the powdered glass must be sifted on through the apertures in the strainer. This operation also requires considerable skill, though not so much as the spreading of the glue. For the glass must be sifted merely in such a manner as to use a given quantity to a sheet, but so that each sheet may be graded evenly. Even then all the powder will not stick, and some of the particles lie upon others without touching the glue; these can be shaken off by the slight movement of the paper. When the superfluous glass powder has been removed a wooden roller is passed lightly over the sheet to press the particles of glass as firmly as possible into the glue and to form a perfectly even surface.—Philadelphia Engineer.

Save the Babies

Feed Them Properly and They Are Safe.

This is the fatal season for the babies. They die off in thousands from common summer complaints, brought on by poor and faulty feeding.

LACTATED FOOD for the baby during the hot, sultry weather, means health, strength, brightness and happiness. Thousands of happy mothers in Canada use Lactated Food, and strongly recommend it to others.

LACTATED FOOD "Saves babies' lives" when other foods are rejected and fail to do good. Try it mother.

My Baby

was a living skeleton; the doctor said he was dying of Marasmus and Indigestion. At 13 months he weighed only seven pounds. Nothing strengthened or fattened him. I began using Scott's Emulsion of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, feeding it to him and rubbing it into his body. He began to fatten and is now a beautiful dimpled boy. The Emulsion seemed to supply the one thing he needed.

BLUEBERRIES.

"Blueberries, blueberries," the robins call from their perch in the tall birch over the wall.

"Blueberries, blueberries, blueberries," the crickets chirp.

The blackbird is whetting his greedy bill, "Blueberries, blueberries, blueberries."

"Blueberries, blueberries, blueberries," the crows cry.

In Dame Nature's market there's nothing to pay.

Free to all comers her dainty wild stores, Even the poor tramps, dusty and brown, May come, if they will, from the barren town For there's never a lock on her doors.

"Blueberries, blueberries, blueberries," they're ripe to-day.

Over and over her hold cries say, And stay till the daylight is turning pale, And the market place is with sweet ferns bright, And the wood thrushes sing for the crowd.

"Blueberries, blueberries, blueberries," they're ripe to-day.

The farmer who thinks picking them just like play, And the little brown maids from the mill Come with their baskets across the dale, And stay till the daylight is turning pale, And dewdrops are folding the daisy's frill.

"Blueberries, blueberries, blueberries," they're ripe to-day.

Who would not go berrying once a year, Nimble young lassies and old folk say, For the old folk find in those globes of blue, Mingled with spices and honey dew, The sweet, wild flavor of long ago.

And never do air-castles soar so high, Or half so fine while the years go by, As the young folk build off a berry bush, And never was twilight path so fair As the one that leads moon through the sunsets' flush.

When the new moon looks through the sunset's flush. —Susan Hartley Sweett.

Don't Die Before Your Time.

"Why will you die? That is the question the scientist now asks the miserable sufferer from consumption or lung trouble. The answer natural is, "because I can't help it." But the consumptive can help it. Miller's Emulsion, made from Norwegian Cod Liver, and combine with the hypophosphites of lime and soda will cure nine cases out of ten of consumption, and the ten cases can get a reprieve for a year, or two. New blood is what the consumptive requires, and Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver, when taken, produces it. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrophula and all Lung Affections. In Big Bottles, 50c. and $1, at all Drug Stores.

A subscription in aid of Irish home rule has been started in Montreal.

MERRY MOMENTS

"Willie, have you been in another fight?" "No, ma; this fellow out-classed me, and I was in it."—Brooklyn Life.

Hoax—That story of yours reminds me of a tramp. Joah—How so? Hoax—It won't wash. Philadelphia Record.

"Don't you know, prisoner, that it is very wrong to steal a pig?" "I do, your honor. They make such a row."—Tid-Bits.

"Are you the man who runs this newspaper?" "No, sir; I'm only the editor; the others run the paper."—Atlanta Constitution.

Lulu (who has been very ill and suddenly recovered)—"An I in heaven, mamma? Mother—No, dear, we are still in this world—Tammammy Times.

Anna—I wonder what makes Mr. Droopelin down in the mouth to-night? Gaybelle—Force of habit, I suppose; he's a dentist, you know.—Boston Courier.

"Papa," asked little Willie, "isn't a cynic a man who is tired of the world?" "No, dear; a cynic is a man of whom the world is tired."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Fuddy—I was talking to Johnson last night. Fuddy—Yes, I saw him this morning. He was in a terribly demoralized condition.—Boston Transcript.

Judge—You say you have some means of subsistence? Tramp—Yes, your honor. Judge—Then why is it not visible? Tramp—I ate it.—Harlem Life.

Briggs—You say the phenologist who examined your head wasn't very complimentary? "Lardly. He told me I was fitted to be a leader in society."—Life.

"I am going now; yes, I'm going, going," murmured Steigher. "What an excellent auctioneer you'd make," said the heartless but tired Miss Nycoeger.—Boston Courier.

The teacher—Now, who can tell me which travels the faster, heat or cold? Johnnie Bright (promptly)—Heat of course. Anybody can catch cold.—Tid-Bits.

Smallwort—Well, I have to hunt up another cook. Our latest one left yesterday. Ford—Did she basely desert you for gold? "No, Copper."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Miss Parique—in New York do the prominent social lights smoke? Miss Clausette—Yes, particularly after they have been turned down.—New York World.

Tramp—Do you know what it is, sir, to be abused by a lady? Not having a grasp of a single friendly hand? Stranger—Indeed, I do. I'm a life insurance agent.—Judge.

Principal (to new apprentice)—Has the bookkeeper told you what you have to do in the afternoon? Youth—Yes, sir; I was to watch him when I saw you coming.—Dablin.

First Carpenter—I can't see what you are driving at, Second Carpenter—Well, I can now; I was driving at the nail, but hit my thumb.—Boston Courier.

Stout lady (at street crossing, to policeman)—Could you see me across the street, officer? Policeman—Sure, ma'am; I could see you from the distance, aisy.—London Tid-Bits.

"O, yes, my husband has been a collector of curios and such things for a number of years." "Was he in that business when he married you?" "Yes indeed." "I thought so."—Atlanta Constitution.

"You can always guess a woman's age if she'll give you a three guesses," remarked Sinnick. "I don't believe it." "It's true, though. It's bound to be sixteen, twenty-six or sixty."—Washington Star.

"Baker got into a rumper with a policeman the other night," said Pinkney. He offered to let the policeman he didn't dare arrest him. "What did the copper do?" "Took him up."—Harper's Bazar.

"What was the principal object of interest in America when you were there?" The eminent British novelist looked at his questioner with chilling scorn, and replied: "I was, of course."—Washington Star.

"What are you shaking the life out of that poor cat for, Willie? Willie—I heard pa say that the kitty had $19 in her last night. I was only trying to shake some of it out.—Current Literature.

Kansas Farmer—Yes, sir; that well known fact is that you can get a horse down all that distance to get water. Visitor (from Kentucky)—And you dig seventy-five feet for it? Great Scott!—Chicago Tribune.

Leading lady (at the tragedy theatre)—I don't like the new lover a bit; he is such an ugly brute; and his playing! so clumsy and awkward! Seond lady—Yes, and he is married into the bargain.—Illustrated Zeitung.

Upgradation—I had a singular experience last Tuesday. You remember it looked like rain and the weather prophets predicted rain? Atom—Yes, well, I brought my umbrella, raincoat and rubber shoes down town that morning. Yes, well, it rained.—Chicago Tribune.
