FEAR BEANBALLS

BURNOPFIELD, England (CP)—Most Englishmen are cricket-lovers and most cricket-lovers like "boundaries" or long hits—but not local villagers here. They say they are afraid to go outside during a game in case they get hit. The cricket club has promised to pay for damage caused and has asked players not to overdo it.

Cultural Group In Montreal Beset By Financial Problems

MONTREAL (CP)—For the second time within two weeks a Montreal cultural endeavor has found itself beset with financial problems.

In the wake of the problem-plagued Verdi Opera Festival comes the news that another set of artists have not received payment for their work.

These were some 40 performers in this year's Festival of French-Canada week which wound up with La Nuit des Etolles—an all-night open-air music hall-type show. It was the climax to the week-long St. Jean Baptiste celebrations.

The June 25 Saturday night performance, acclaimed as an artistic success, saw a crowd of only 40,000—of an expected 100,000 turn out to listen to songs and music from well-known Quebec performers because of rain.

Miss Germaine Dugas of Montreal organized the "Night Under the Stars" under contract with the St. Jean Baptiste Society's Festival of French Canada organization.

Expenses for the evening, including performers' fees and the elaborate setting with four stages, bands, security guards and a one-man show by Montreal sculptor Armand Vaillancourt, ran to $80,000.

RECEIPTS LOW

Receipts from the venture amounted to $42,000 and under her contract Miss Dugas owed 25 per cent of the gross amount.

to the Society. This money was members of the musicians' union turned over to the Societe Nationale de Fiducie, a trust company.

The money was "frozen" until it could be settled how much would be paid and to whom.

Miss Dugas said Wednesday night the only fees paid were those settled in advance to As a result some $15,000 was still owing individual performers and she estimated her total deficit, after the Society's portion was deducted, would be an estimated $40,000.

French-English Businesses Mark Beginning Of New Era

French-English businesses here are marking the beginning of a new era of co-operation in Montreal by building a spectacular 20-storey "association centre."

To be called La Maison de Commerce — Commerce House, the new $10,000,000 building will provide pooled facilities for Montreal's two major business associations—the Board of Trade and its French-language counterpart, La Chambre de Commerce de District du Montreal.

Working in full partnership, the two associations have laid plans for a program of co-operation without parallel in their history.

The centre, now under construction in the downtown section of the city, will provide a common library and information services, common mailing, printing and accounting departments as well as larger and improved quarters for both groups.

Common circulars and surveys, such as the ones that have been produced by the board for several years to help businessmen in Montreal and those considering a move into the area, will be produced by co-operative efforts.

UNANIMOUS SUPPORT

Harry Gould, general manager of the board, said that when the new joint building was first proposed there was almost unanimous support for the idea from La Chambre's 4,200 members and the 6,400 members representing firms who belong to the board.

"It's all part of working together to serve the community," he said.

La chambre and the board will occupy the sixth floor jointly with offices, the library, and a combination reception area.

On the two floors immediately below will be conference rooms and dining rooms with each of these open to the members of the board and la chambre alike.

The third floor features the Port of Montreal Room with an old shipping decor to symbolize the long-time ties between the board and Montreal harbor.

The remaining floors of the centre will be devoted to office space for other business associations and to some 13 floors of commercial space.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the International Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Manufacturers Association as well as many other smaller trade organizations have already arranged to become tenants of the new building.

was easy until the ball crashed, with very little shock, against the bottom, he said. The ball then shot to the top, where he was picked up and came out of the ball to the wild cheers of 150,000 spectators.

He said he was not nervous about going over the falls because he had worked in circuses doing various stunts.

The idea of going over the falls came to him while he was working in a rubber factory. He designed the ball six feet in diameter, composed of 32 compartments constructed around a steel frame and weighted at the bottom. With him harnessed inside the riding compartment, the conveyance weighed 1,037 pounds.

Lussier constructed the ball in a garage in Akron, Ohio, finishing it July 1, 1928. Two days later, he slipped the ball into the city of Niagara Falls and hid it in a garage. He recalls that although it was against the law to go over the falls, several policemen visited him and looked over the ball.

Lussier said he believes the days of daredevils going over the falls may be at an end. Each year he usually receives three or four letters from persons contemplating the stunt. This year, he has received none.

He said he believes the reason is that there is not much money to be made going over the falls now. The glory is no longer as great, because there are three living persons who have considered the falls.

The other two are Nathan Bova, who went over in a rubber ball designed after Lussier's, and Roger Woodward, a boy who was swept over in a lifejacket.

Trip Over Falls Recounted As Being Comparatively Easy

By ROBERT KOSTOFF
Buffalo Courier-Express

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP)—Going over Niagara Falls in a rubber ball isn't as terrifying as it's cracked up to be, says Jean Lussier, 74-year-old conqueror of Horse-shoe Falls.

Now, 38 years later, Lussier recalls the trip as a comparatively mild one and says he wasn't nervous at all. Sitting in his small apartment here, he recalled Sunday details of the trip he took July 4, 1928, over the falls on the Canadian side.

He can recite verbatim a spiel he used when lecturing to accompany a film made of the event. Written by a promotion man, it contained references to the bottom of his ball being caved in by rocks and told about him going over the brink upside down and being trapped behind the thundering falls.

But it's all bunk, Lussier said.

He said he designed his ball so well that it went over upright, just as he had planned. There was an easy descent and when he reached the water at the bottom of the fall he slid easily into it with the cascading water.

Shully's Ltd. Shareholder Is Unhappy

TORONTO (CP)—An unhappy shareholder clashed with the president of Shully's Industries Ltd. at the company's annual meeting Wednesday.

Samuel Wallin, a retired manufacturer of electrical products, told Maurice Shully the company's history seemed to be one of excuses and promises.

"We are not apologizing to anyone, including you," replied Mr. Shully.

Mr. Wallin said he bought debentures in the company four years ago. Since then, they have shrunk in price to $75 from $100.

"Maybe you ought to take your $75 and run," said the Shully president.

Mr. Wallin asked why the company should have to report a decline in its profit-to-sales ratio. In the year ended Jan. 31, 1966, Shully's reported sales of $6,401,000 and profit before taxes of $283,000, while in the eight-month period ended Jan. 31, 1962, profits before taxes were $293,000 on sales of only $2,021,000.

Mr. Shully blamed higher labor and material costs but said profits were hurt most by a decision of Imperial Oil Ltd. in March, 1963, to give its customers free oil burner service.

Shully's sells fuel oil, heating equipment and aluminum and steel products for homes and buildings.
