Easter At P. J.'s

Several carcasses of the finest beef in the city will be on display at our store for Easter.

We purchased two carcasses from Mr. R. H. Roberts, and one carcass of Steer Beef from Drake Bros., Millville. Other exhibits in our Easter display are well up to the standard of previous years.

In addition to our Easter Beef we also have on hand all the goods to make your Easter feast one of the most enjoyable on record. Let us help make your selection from our well stocked store. Here you will find prices comparable to any in the city and we cordially invite your inspection.

For high class groceries, meats, vegetables, etc., call or phone P. J. MacDonald, corner Prince and Kent Streets, 888 or 889.

hooked a halibut 7 feet, 8 inches long and plenty heavy. But the big surprise came when the fish was dressed. In its stomach was a sealed quart bottle of sherry wine.

Who put the rubber bands around the necks of 9 seals killed in the last three years? They are not made of American rubber. How they got there is a mystery and the seals kept mum.

One of these years someone will solve the mystery locked up in phytosynthesis and then the fear of exhausting the supply of coal and oil will be gone forever. The secret of phytosynthesis would duplicate nature's solar origin—the humble leaf. Scientists inform us that one hour of sunshine falling upon a square yard of leaves results in the manufacture of one gram of carbohydrates. Thus it may be seen that every leaf and every blade of grass holds a secret which the wisest scientists have not been able to solve. Should the sun fail to shine for one whole year the entire world of living things would begin to perish.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

For some of the strange but true facts the writer of this column is indebted to Mr. R. E. Gross, Deputy Minister of the Department of Industry and Commerce, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

At Pin Flon in Northern Manitoba, street lights burn all day long "so that they won't burn out." Engineers found that turning all the lights off in cold weather weakened the filament and constantly turning them off and on burnt them out quickly. Electricity is dirt cheap in Northern Manitoba with its great pre-cambrian shield rivers and so Pin Flon is a city of eternal light, believe it or not.

SKIN GAME For buyers who supply firms throughout the world, the skins of the seal are a hot commodity. The sealers who place their bids in Winnipeg. Before the auction they look the skins over and make a note of the number of the ones they want. During the auction the numbers are read out and bidders communicate by secret signals to the auctioneer's spotter, so that their rivals won't know who's bidding.

The annual celebration of Ice-landia is held each year at Gimli, Manitoba, on the first Monday in August. It is called Islandia, which is quite a word to pronounce.

Three of Manitoba's prize fish—the Arctic grayling, moon-eye and gold-eye—are virtually unknown to visiting anglers. The grayling is a tough baby to take and is most beautiful of our 'Provincials' game fish, and its first cousin, the moon-eye, are known to epicures the world over.

Goldeyes are tricky to catch and anglers usually pass them up for bass, pike and other varieties. While passing the shores of Pitt Island near Swanson's Bay in British Columbia late in September of 1950, the halibut boat "Princess" sighted a black bear. On closer examination they saw beside it a pure white bruin. Since polar bears are never seen south of the Arctic shores, the bear sighted must have been an albino black bear, an extreme rarity. The freak animal was seen by the boat's crew and its skipper, Captain Fritz Mustonen, from a distance of only 200 feet.

A seven-year-old youngster at Hyoburg got more than he bargained for when he dropped his line down into six feet of water off the local float last August. He ZION Y. P. S.—The regular meeting on Tuesday evening opened with a sing-song under the direction of Mr. Frank Johnson. "The Eager Beavers" were declared the winning team for the year thus far and the losers "The Willing Workers" are making plans for a bowling party to be held in the near future with the winning team as the guests. A special missionary program is being planned for our next meeting on April 3rd. The worship service was conducted by Earl Bruce. The scripture reading was taken from Mark 15: 15-39; hymns sung were "There Is a Green Hill Far Away" and "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross." The theme entitled "The Appeal of the Cross" was read by John Trowsdale. A very instructive Bible Quiz was then conducted by Doris Ferguson followed by a few closing remarks by Rev. G. C. Webster and the benediction. The young people then adjourned to the lower hall where games were conducted under the leadership of Margaret MacDougall and Earl Beaton.

BAYVIEW W. I. The March meeting of Bayview W. I. met at the home of Miss Norreen Turner with eight members present. The president, Mrs. Damian Cullen presided. Minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

Correspondence received was read and discussed. A letter was received from the Social Welfare Convener, Miss MacKinnon, emphasizing responsibilities placed on various groups. Unfinished business was attended to but nothing definite was decided due to the few members attending. There was also a letter from Buyers Benefit Club offering yarn to groups at special prices. A pamphlet consisting of Health Facts was passed around.

School committee gave their report. Mrs. Thomas Reid was appointed on programme committee. Three members passed in articles for the Red Cross. Several copies of Institute News were distributed.

Next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Thomas S. Reid. Lunch committee — Mrs. Damian Cullen, Miss Norreen Turner and Miss Alina Reid. Collection amounted to 70.

Meeting closed by singing National Anthem. A delicious lunch was then served by hostess assisted by committee.

Gerald Waring Reporting

OTTAWA—The long range objective of military planners in Ottawa and Washington is not only standardization of the armed forces of the two countries to the same weapons and equipment, but also virtual unification of those forces to strengthen the NATO defence set-up.

That will mean, in time, a common high command for both American and Canadian forces on this continent. It will be composed of American and Canadian naval, ground force and air experts, with one of their number being chosen for the overall command.

He will, in the conceivable future at any rate, be an American.

This is only a military blueprint so far. But as I indicated Tuesday in reference particularly to the Army, the first moves to revamp the Canadian forces along the U.S. pattern are already under way. Thus within a couple of years, it'll be hard to tell a Canadian soldier from his U.S. counterpart.

No More Jets From U. K.

In the Air Force, Canada is already patterning her squadrons on those of the U.S.A.F. rather than the R.A.F., and is abandoning British Vampire Jets for American F-86s.

The Canadian-designed long range jet fighter known both as the Canuck and the CF-100 will be an exception to the trend of standardization to U. S. equipment. Not only will the R.C.A.F. interceptor squadrons be equipped with this speedy all-weather aircraft, but the U.S.A.F. also is expected to adopt it once arrangements have been made to produce it in U. S. aircraft plants.

Defence Minister Claxton admitted some time ago that the R. C.A.F. will leave strategic bombing to our allies in any future war. The development of heavy bomber squadrons is just beyond our productive capacity at the present time.

The Harvard trainer has been standard in both air forces for years. Canadian plants are now producing 1,000 for the R.C.A.F.—equipped, for the first time, with Canadian-made Wasp engines and additional numbers are expected to be manufactured in this country for the U.S.A.F. The Americans are also buying an undisclosed number of Canadian-designed and made Beaver spotter and reconnaissance aircraft.

Navy Will Specialize Changes in the Canadian Navy as a result of the standardization and unification program will be less noticeable than those in the Army and the R.C.A.F.

Our Navy's principal job in the next war, if there is a next war, will be to patrol the North Atlantic lanes and protect shipping from submarine attack. Thus it is concentrating on fast, sleek escort and patrol vessels, and a more powerful Fleet Air Arm.

Thus, while its guns are already being standardized to U. S. types and its British aircraft are being replaced by U. S. planes, it is staying with British submarine detection equipment and methods. The British lead the field in this department, our Navy men believe.

The organization of the R. C. N. already closely parallels that of the U. S. Navy. Canadian naval units have manoeuvred and even fought in company with U. S. naval units with great harmony. So in its expansion and adaptation to form part of the combined Can-Am Fleet, the R. C. N. doesn't require major reorganization.

Probably the main thing worrying the Navy—or at least the man on the lower deck—is that standardization with the U. S. may standardize the traditional daily grog ration out of existence. U. S. ships are dry.

Lenten Meditations

THE DIVINE VINEYARD (The London Times)

A parable is intended to impress one lesson. The point of "the labourers in the vineyard" (Matthew xx, 1-15) is not that the scale of values of earthly gifts, opportunities, and good works is necessarily reversed in the kingdom of heaven. Its meaning is open to misunderstanding only if it is isolated from its context, which, as printed in the Revised Version, should be read from verse 16 in the previous chapter.

Jesus answers Peter's question about those who had left all to follow him by saying that a reward will come to all who have given up anything for his sake; "but many that are last shall be first; and first that are last." Good and self-denying acts may expect reward, but the disciples had not yet learned that good works can never earn the only reward there is—eternal life.

The parable assumes the working conditions of its date and place. The householder is conceived as conferring an advantage upon those whom he employed; he could have hired others. The unusual feature is the same payment made to all, whether they had worked a short or a long time.

The murmuring of those who had worked the longer would no doubt be considered just and logical by modern practice, but the story is totally unconcerned with economic justice or with the quantity or quality of the work done. Its whole point is that man's relation to God is not that which (whether rightly or wrongly) prevails between man and man in everyday life.

The service of God is made possible only by an act of grace, and in it no man can claim reward, because the power and even the will to serve God come from him. When all has been done "we are unprofitable servants" who have done but our duty—nothing more, if as much.

Whether grace or the act of the human will comes first is an unreal puzzle because the creature of God can never be wholly outside his creator's grace. As God has made men persons and not things, his grace never inclines man's will without man's willing consent.

Christian morality is not ashamed of the hope of reward. A man's complacent contemplation of himself is no more ethical than at-
