The Electric Light of Paris.

Nothing seems to have delighted the scientific visitors to Paris more than the progress made in electric illumination. Mr. F. L. Pope, in describing his impressions in the Journal of the Telegraph, says: "When in the course of my first evening's stroll along the boulevards of Paris, I came suddenly upon the dazzling spectacle of the electric lamps which encircle the Place de l'Opera and extend for half a mile along the Avenue de l'Opera to the Palais Royal, I was struck with surprise and admiration. The effect was surpassingly beautiful. There are at the present time some 300 electric lamps nightly in successful operation, illuminating the boulevards, gardens and public buildings of Paris, and arrangements for lighting all the principal boulevards and places are now in progress. The magneto-electric apparatus employed is a gramme machine arranged for producing alternate currents. The candle employed is the double carbon construction of Jablochhoff. Owing to the peculiar arrangement of the alternating machine it is possible to divide the currents so as to furnish sufficient electricity to sixteen or more separate candles. That this system, in a scientific and practical view, is literally a brilliant success is sufficiently evident to any one who like myself has carefully watched its operation night after night in the streets and public places of Paris. The quality of the light is pure, soft and white, the general effect being not unlike that of an unusually powerful moonlight, but differs from the latter in the absence of the heavy black shadows. These are avoided partly by placing the candles in globes of opal glass, and partly by placing the lamps at a considerable elevation above the ground, perhaps twenty feet or more. That the system is equally successful in an economical point of view, in some of its applications at least would seem to admit of very little doubt. It is possibly premature to assert that it is destined speedily to supersede the employment of gas for all purposes of public and general illumination on a large scale, yet it must be said that such a result seems to me exceedingly probable." Professor Silliman is equally enthusiastic over the magic effect of the illumination, but differs from Mr. Pope in believing that the electric light will not displace gas for domestic use or for common street lights.

On the arrival of a train at Hamilton, Ontario, last Wednesday a man was found stowed away on the trucks of a sleeping car, in which dangerous position he had rode from London, a distance of 85 miles. He said his name was Lennox, and that he was on his way to Buffalo, N. Y., where a telegram had informed him his wife was lying at the point of death, and being determined to get to her, had adopted this means, not having money to pay his fare. A search of his person showed that he had but six cents. The slightest change of position on his part or the least obstruction on the track would have killed the poor fellow.

For the last few years the hog cholera has raged in Central Illinois incessantly, making a loss to the farmers and others of $200,000. A few days since a peculiar kind of beetle appeared in great numbers in DeWitt county, which the hogs devour with a voracious appetite. Most cholera hogs are getting well from eating them. The people consider them a God-send. What they are and where they came from is a mystery. They are fast spreading over the country. The farmers are in hopes that they will effectually subdue the dreaded disease.

VOYAGE AROUND THE WORLD.—More fortune than the Woodruff project the French scientific and educational expedition has actually sailed in the Juno from Marseilles on an eighteen months tour round the world. The Juno is an English-built steamer of 1,150 tons and 580 horse-power, carries twenty passengers, two passengers, two reporters, a number of professors and the necessary officials, and is admirably fitted up both for pleasure and scientific purposes.

The Seductiveness of Interest.

The seductiveness—one might almost say the fascination—of interest got to be got from money is very remarkable. Ordinarily, people who have not had money at interest care very little about it, indeed, never think of it. But after they have had interest—have familiarized themselves with the fact that money is worth something—they very rarely forget it, or fail to act upon it. Capitalists, whether big or little, almost never allow any amount of money, however small, to lie idle. They invest and reinvest as fast as they get anything, and rich men in business are on this account quite as likely, if not more likely, to be short of cash as men of ordinary means. It is this habit of mind, doubtless, which, among other things, makes men of capital more unwilling to part with any portion of it than men without capital are to let what they may chance to have on hand slip through their fingers. The former mentally calculate the interest of every amount; the latter merely consider the sum itself.

Large capitalists often feel poor, not from any losses they have sustained, but from their inability to invest surplus funds in such stocks or property as they approve. The instance of the wealthy New Yorker who refused to contribute to a worthy charity because he had a quarter of a million of dollars on deposit in diverse banks without interest sounds like satire; but it is illustrative of his class. Up to a certain extent, within what is known as legal rate, interest is of reciprocal advantage to the borrower and the lender, and is a well regulated feature of commercial law. Carried to a high figure, made usurious, interest interest debauches and demoralizes, as hundreds of men, originally just and unextortionate, have found. After getting 10 per cent. for some time they want 15; after getting 15 they want 20, until at last the spirit of the pawnbroker enters into them, they are absorbed and controlled by the passion of avarice.

It is singular, too, how alluring interest is to persons in the humblest circumstances, particularly after they have had the pleasure of receiving it. To have a little money working for him, working when he is asleep or at rest—so he is apt to put it—captures the fancy of the working man, and very naturally because he does not understand it, because it is a mystery, renders the thing more alluring, and increases his satisfaction. He is likely to value two or three dollars which he has gained an interest more than he would twenty or thirty that he has earned by labor. Money earned dignifies him; interest on money puzzles and seduces him.—N. Y. Times.

ISLANDERS ABROAD.—From the Dominion Press, published in Oakland, Cal., we learn that Mr. Jonas J. McKinnon, formerly of Melrose, P. E. I., who, for the past ten years, was in the employ of Messrs. Preston & McKinnon, has purchased a large lumber establishment, and is now carrying on a business in that line. We wish Mr. McKinnon possible success, and hope to be able to chronicle his well doings at some future time. From the same paper we also learn that Mr. Edward Robins, son of John Robins, Esq., of this city, together with Messrs. McKinnon, Douglass and McKenzie, all Islanders, have purchased a sugar plantation in the Sandwich Islands, and from all accounts are likely to have a good crop. We feel pleased to make those announcements, and hope to be able to notice more successes which we sincerely hope they will meet with.—Herald.

"Times are hard, money is scarce, business is dull, retrenchment is a duty—please stop my whiskey!" Oh, no; times are not hard enough for that yet. But there is something that costs me a large amount every year, which I wish to save. Please stop my tobacco, cigars and snuff? No, no, not these; but I must retrench somewhere, and I believe I can see a way to effect quite a saving in another direction. Ah! I have it now. My paper costs 8½ cents a month; $1.00 a year; I must save that. Please stop my paper. That will carry me through this panic easily. I believe in retrenchment and economy, especially in brains."

Of the Maine Legislature the latest accounts say: The House complete shows 65 Republicans; 2 Democrats elected by Republicans; 27 Democrats; 57 Greenbacks. Thirteen out of the 25 Democratic representatives were chosen on the straight Democratic ticket over both the Republican and Greenback candidates, and will hold the balance of power in the House. The other 14 were chosen by Greenback aid.

At Chicago the other day two boys of eleven and nine years of age quarrelled about a girl of eight. The nine-year-old lad shot his rival dead.

Over six hundred bodies have been recovered from the excursion steamer Princess Alice. Eighty-three unrecognized bodies were buried on Monday.
