A PHANTOM LOVE.
He was a maker of musical instruments, and his eyes twinkled as he looked around at this friends who had been relating their own experiences of their own or their acquaintances. Then he began this remarkable story of a man who was decoyed into chasing a phantom sweetheart from this city to Europe, and over a large part of the land on the other side of the water, only to learn that the whole thing was a practical joke, planned to secure revenge for an exhibition of ill temper which had deeply grieved and mortified a young woman.
"It was in a fashionable boarding house," said the instrument man, "in an uptown street, that four young individuals lived. With youth their combined good looks, cheerful dispositions and the woman's proverbial prudence for a desire for the admiration of the fellow sex. But all their blandishments were lost on a handsome young fellow who boarded in the house, and who, while not exactly a cynic or a misanthrope, seemed to frown down any exhibition of youthful frivolity.
He frequently chatted with the girls after dinner, and when, one evening, the conversation turned upon flirting, he expressed himself very forcibly on the subject, saying no lady could descend to such an action, while a man of true honor would only despise her if she did. This, of course, coming from a young, good-looking fellow, was a surprise to the girls, who at first thought he was joking, but he repeated his views on several other occasions, and as his conduct, which was carefully looked into, seemed to justify his views, they came to the belief he was in earnest. Thereafter he was known as "the prude."
"He surprised the girls one summer afternoon by inviting the most modest looking of their number to accompany him to Manhattan Beach.
She accepted and they left. Not to go minutely into details, they had a nice dinner and were listening to the music when a young man passed. One of them looked rather intently at the girl and smiled. She was somewhat near-sighted, and, telling of the matter afterward, she said she thought the young man was a friend, whereupon she smiled and bowed. The prude saw it all, and taking her by the arm he led her to the young man, and addressing him who had bowed to the girl, he said:
"I don't know your name, sir, but this lady seems to desire your company." "The prude" then said to the young man more than she does mine. She is Miss Blank, of No. — West — street, and I will save her in your hands, hoping you will see her safely to her home."
"Before he had concluded the astonished girl had discovered that the young man to whom she had bowed was a stranger, but she had not time to make any explanation to the prude, for as he finished he strode rapidly away. She dismissed the strangers, bought a railroad ticket and returned home, where she recited the mortifying story to her friends. And it was then and there, after putting their heads together, they hatched the scheme which sent the prude to Europe on a wild goose chase."
"The conspirators," the narrator continued, "had a friend who was the postmistress in a small, near-by town, and they enlisted her aid, she left only upon the explanation to the prude, and the circumstances. Soon the prude received a nicely scented letter, in a woman's hand, and the girls had the pleasure of seeing it on his plate at the breakfast table, and of noticing the pleased expression as he read it. They knew that the letter purported to be from a lady who had seen him, but had never met him, but was extremely desirous of knowing him—so much so that she suggested to make an appointment to meet her. She signed herself 'Blanche Willoughby,' and said she lived in Brooklyn, and requested him to send his reply to the Brooklyn post office, where she would get it by calling for it.
"Whether he felt flattered, or what it was that actuated him, he did not know, but he answered the letter, and the detested flirting, he answered the letter, which, by prearrangement, was forwarded from the Brooklyn post office to the out-of-town postmistress, and from her hand it went direct to the girl plotters, who had at the time of fun with it. Then ensued an animated correspondence between "the prude" and Blanche, and it tickled the girls immensely to note his flush of pleasure when on going to the breakfast table he would find the daintiest notes from his supposed fair innamorata.
Never did he read them at the table,

"Of course the young women thought this would end the whole matter, for they were becoming tired of the joke.
But what was their amazement when another letter was received by Blanche in which the smitten young man said he would follow her to Europe, and informing him where he had secured a supply of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic. It is sold by all druggists and dealers at 50 cents per bottle or six bottles for $2.50, and is manufactured by the Hawker Medicine Co. (Ld.), St. John, N. B., and

MARK IT WELL.
A Development Peculiar to the Present Generation Dangerous and Often Fatal.
As each generation comes and goes it is marked by changes, developments and discoveries unknown to its predecessors. From a physical standpoint one of the most to be dreaded conditions and peculiar for its rapid increase during the present generation, is when the mind labors under the delusion of persecution, continual restlessness, pain in the back and head, twitching of the muscles of the face and hands, furred tongue, breath foul and heavy, nausea and further indications of stomach trouble. There may be delirium, convulsions or sinking spells. Medical authorities apply different names to the conditions that are amenable to the average reader. The actual fact is the demoralized and dangerous state of the system is due to the accumulation of "Body Poisons" in the blood that should and would be thrown off by the kidneys if in a healthy condition. In order to restore health, strike at the root of the disease with Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, the only medicine known that will control the changes going on in the kidneys, enabling them to furnish for the whole system blood free from disease-breeding poison, building up the shattered condition of nerves, and relieving mental depression.
Price 25c. sold by all dealers. Edman-son, Bates & Co., Toronto.

NUTRITION AND THE NERVES.
Nervous exhaustion results especially from defective assimilation of food.
Anything that affects the general nutrition of the body will injuriously affect the nervous system.
So long as the digestive organs are not in a healthy condition, the process of building up of tissue and removing from the wasted tissues cannot go on as it should to ensure health.
Whoever, therefore, is suffering from nervous debility must first of all do something that will restore the digestive organs to their normal condition. The great merit of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic is that it brings about this important change, and restores healthy action to the digestive organs. It cleanses, stimulates, and strengthens. Its effect upon the nervous system is very marked. The person taking a course of this remedy according to directions and with due regard to regular habits will regain lost appetite, food will be digested without distress, restful sleep will be enjoyed, the nerves invigorated, and health fully restored. These are not idle words. The happy experience of thousands is behind them. Be advised, therefore, and if your system is out of order secure a
alers at 50 cents per bottle or six bottles for $2.50, and is manufactured by the Hawker
New York City.
