Refreshment committee for next month: Mrs. O'Brien, Mrs. Rodd, Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Seaman. The program convened by Mrs. Aubrey Found was a Radio Play entitled "Especially for You", which was entertaining, and enjoyed by all. Meeting closed with the National Anthem.

MARY HAWORTH

Wife Likes Attention

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is it infantile for a wife to want her husband to invite her out for a companionable evening occasionally? My husband thinks it is, and insists I haven't grown up, because I'd like a wee bit of sweetheart attention once in a while.

We have two children whom I love dearly, and when they were small I never would leave them with a baby-sitter. However, now that they are older and sleep well, I feel it would be safe to leave them with a reliable person. But my husband never asks me out to dinner, or to a movie, or to any kind of social event—unless his boss insists that wives attend some special gathering. Then we go and enjoy the evening immensely.

Don (I'll call him) is very attractive, quite brilliant, a good provider, has no temper; and I know he loves me. But he is anti-social; never wants company and dislikes visiting. Once when we had dinner guests, he had to get up and leave the house for a walk. He seems to have an escapist attitude in many ways.

LITTLE LOVED IN CHILDHOOD

He lies to go his own way and be left alone; and I've tried to help him by letting him go. He likes to vacation by himself and have his own friends. I just can't figure him out.

He was an orphan, reared by a grandmother, without too much affection given him. I, on the other hand, was deeply loved by my warm-hearted family, and I do love him with all my heart—but this situation makes me terribly depressed at times. If only I could make him understand how I feel—but all I do is cry when I try to talk to him about it.

He loves the children, but not to the point of taking them on picnics and holidays; I do these things all by myself. He claims he can't change his emotions, but I feel he should at least try. I feel our lives would be so much happier if only he would give a little. Just how would you tackle this problem? P.Y.

RUINOUS BRAND OF SELFISHNESS

DEAR P.Y.: Your husband's attitude as described is rigidly selfish and also on the emotionally sick side. He is ruthlessly selfish, insofar as close relationships go, in his overriding insistence that your hunger for social camaraderie, on a two-some basis in marriage, is infantile, unwarranted, "wrong" etc.—and that his rejection of when he says he can't change your woful appeal for understanding his emotions, he lies. As long as there is life, there is the potential of spiritual health, available to the human being who concentrates on embodying it.

Anyone can change, from the deadness of pure selfishness to the liveliness of compassionate regard for others' feelings. If he wills to change. If he stays unchanged—with a stone in his bosom, in place of a tender heart—that is his choice. And it is not to be whitewashed as fate—as a misfortune wished on him by circumstances outside his control.

CHANGE INHERENT IN HUMAN NATURE

The formula for emotional change is, simply, actual change. Emotion follows action, psychology teaches. And it works both ways, may I remind your husband. The less he considers your feelings, the less sympathy he can produce. As Shakespeare said, adopt a virtue if you have it not, and eventually it will be truly part of your character.

As a matter of fact, one of the absolute differences between mankind and the animal kingdom, and other forms of life on earth, is man's equipment—of consciousness, self-awareness, powers of discrimination, decision, etc.—for engineering, as it were, desirable changes and improvements in his own behavior, within the span of his little lifetime. In a sense, it was for this he was born—to carry the evolutionary push, on its highest level (namely, man) a little further ahead.

HIS ATTITUDE IS NIGGARDLY

Your husband married you because he was drawn to your warmth, as to a necessity of life, of course. But he recoils from your comparable need, in both a begrudging and a niggardly way. He feels he hasn't got warmth to give, and besides, he'd rather not be bothered. Echoing his guardian grandmother's example, he's unaccustomed to making the effort to be fully human. Thus he has become emotionally shriveled, and "inhumaneness" in him that reduces you to tears, when you try to communicate with his

TO VISIT CHARLOTTETOWN

Dr. Hirschmanova, executive director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, is visiting Charlottetown, during her brief tour of the Maritimes. Her latest world tour included USC sponsored projects in fourteen different countries.

Dr. Hirschmanova will arrive in Charlottetown on Saturday, September 21st, in the early evening, and will leave again on Tuesday afternoon. She will be staying at the Hotel Charlottetown.

Dr. Hirschmanova will preach at the evening service in Trinity United Church on Sunday, the 22nd. After the service she will show her latest film on India and Korea.

The Business and Professional Women's Club are sponsoring an open meeting which Dr. Hirschmanova will address on Monday evening at the Prince of Wales College Auditorium.

deaf-mute soul. How tackle the problem? Well, you might give Don the benefit of this impartial estimate of the situation. And turn self-reliantly to society, in search of suitable satisfying companionship with other adults if he continues to disoblige.

M.H. Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write to her in care of Charlottetown Guardian.

HAPPENINGS

Ellen writes in her diary this week in regard to prominent visitors at Algiers: "His wife? How we women like to hear something of the Island's lady-visitors . . . the fair strangers within our gates" Ellen proceeds then to describe this lady and it makes for delightful reading.

Mrs. John G. Diefenbaker, wife of the Prime Minister of Canada, is another lady whom we "like to hear something about." A visit from such an illustrious personage as a prime minister is made even more interesting when his wife accompanied him.

So on Tuesday evening the ladies—and the gentlemen—were all eyes to see the lovely looking PM's wife.

Mrs. Diefenbaker was wearing an early autumn ensemble. Her dress was a touse colored, sheath with medium size matching feather hat and squirrel stole. She seemed along with her husband to enjoy meeting everyone and there was a very large audience on hand to enjoy meeting the Diefenbakers.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Bower of Winnipeg, Manitoba, have been recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McLaren, Mt. Edward Road and Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Shaw, Southport. On their return to Winnipeg they will be accompanied by Mrs. Bower's mother, Mrs. R. Agar of 7 School Street.

Mrs. Allan Smith has left to spend the winter with her daughter Mrs. Donald Barrick and Mr. Barrick, Scarborough.

Messrs. George and William Doyle recently motored back to New York City after spending their annual two week's holiday on P.E.I. "The Doyle twins" as they are familiarly known, are both employed with the Moore and McCormack steamship lines. While in Charlottetown they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Blanchard, Highland Ave.

Misses Martha and Enid MacFarlane and Ella Gay, Fitzroy St., Summerside, recently returned from an enjoyable holiday trip to Boston and other points in the U.S.

COURAGE PAYS OFF

Stripes And "Plaid-itudes" Rule The Campus Crowd

This fall, stripes and plaids promise to rule the campus and win student hurrahs for good looks, ease-of-care and handsome styling in clothes. Stripes and plaids made with Acrilan, the man-made fiber which combines with wools or worsteds, will receive afloat "A's" for packability, washability, wrinkle-resistance and versatility.

Recent surveys have shown colleges will be enrolling more and more students than ever before this Fall. Authorities claim the reason is a growing awareness in the younger generation of the need to set and achieve higher standards of education and living. This year's college set will be applying this same new awareness to their dress habits, too, choosing for their campus wardrobes practical, smartly styled and easy-to-care for clothes for every occasion.

Co-eds will be "rushing" bright and matching them with a variety of outfits from shorts to sheaths. . . double duty reversible plaid skirts with sharp and neat pleats that will last and last; "jump-suits" in happy plaids to serve equally well as study and lounge pajamas or entertainment garb for sorority get-togethers and casual

"coke" dates. College "BMOC" will vote for striped shirts for classes and campus living; neat looking slacks which laugh at wrinkles and are washable (by machine or hand); plaid bathrobes which make a "book-worm" look like a football hero (and hold up through all four college years). So if you're college bound, get in the swing, for a brilliant stripe and plaid happy Fall semester.

THE E. B. EDDY COMPANY

HOSTESS HINTS

by DORIS LOVE
well-known Canadian Colour Consultant

A gracious hostess is something every woman likes to be! Next to the art of homemaking itself the pleasure of entertaining is one thoroughly enjoyed by almost everyone.

And when you stop to think . . . it's the small details, the clever niceties, the "extra" touch that marks you as a charming hostess. To-day with coloured fixtures, wall tile, floor surfaces and decorative accents there is no reason why the bathroom shouldn't be a harmony of colour. Take, for instance, the new, SOFTLY COLOURED, White Swan tissue—carefully selected to blend or contrast with popular colour demands. It's extras like this that are long remembered by your guests.

Rainbow selection . . . is yours to choose from in coloured tissue to harmonize with tile, fixtures and wall treatments. For instance, with light, warm colours such as yellow, peach and pink in either tile or paint colours, the cool contrast of blue or green accessories is excellent. See Spray Green and Azure Blue are equally pleasant with white or even cream tiling. It's a good decorative feature to match coloured fixtures and tissue.

Summer colours . . . Marigold Yellow and Dawn Pink are clear and light-hearted combinations with turquoise, wedgewood blue, jade green or sandstone—the fixture and tile colours which appear so frequently in modern decoration.

And for a colour dare . . . there are innumerable decorative ideas. Dawn Pink is considered a dainty colour—which gains drama when combined with Black. But have you considered it combined with sandalwood, rich chocolate, plum or peacock?

Again . . . Sea Spray Green is a renowned favourite. You can give even popular green an added filip in a decorative treatment of melon and black or coral and cocoa.

Parlour entertaining . . . is a lark with easy-to-serve refreshments and no-trouble White Swan embossed serviettes of fine quality and weight. Lovely 3 ply White Swan Serviettes are right at home in the most formal gathering. Their generous size, exquisite design and lustrous appearance duplicate the feeling of the finest linens. And for everyday use or Sunday Dinners at home, you can't go wrong with White Swan single ply and 2 ply serviettes. They're wonderfully economical, yet so delicate and dainty. And for parties or picnics gay, cheerful White Swan Coloured Serviettes are a natural. Their bright colours are right in the spirit of any happy get-together.

Change kitchen drudgery . . . to entertaining pleasure with the help of absorbent White Swan towels—perfect for drying lettuce and salad fixings . . . cleaning off plates and drying frying pans . . . wonderful for cleaning youngsters' muddy shoes, too! White Swan Towels are a must in every home.
