

Is Now a Healthy Boy

"From a puny, delicate child, my little Johnny has become a strong sturdy boy."

One mother writes: "If you had seen my little Johnny four months ago and you were to see him to-day, you would never believe that he is the same boy. Then he weighed only 49 pounds. To-day he weighs 90 pounds, almost double what he weighed four months ago. His troubles first started with a cold, which we never noticed because he was strong and like all boys of his age occasionally caught cold. After a while we began to notice that his cough, instead of getting better, was getting worse, that he was looking pale and losing weight. He seemed to be tired all the time, had no energy to do anything. Before he caught this cold he had no trouble with his lessons and remained at the head of his class without much study. But we began to notice a change. He didn't seem to care whether he knew his lessons or not and nothing seemed to interest him. He coughed so much and so hard at times that his face would become purple and we thought he would surely burst a blood vessel. Medicines and cough mixtures didn't do him any good. Finally, in desperation and as a last resort, we tried Carnol. In a short time his cough had almost disappeared. His appetite was returning and he was beginning to take an interest in his studies. And, thanks to Carnol, he has become as strong and healthy as he has ever been."

Carnol is sold by your druggist and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle and he will refund your money.

"SAVE THE CHILDREN"

The campaign for the starving children of Russia is now a full swing throughout this province as throughout the rest of Canada. To the credit of our people the response so far has been most encouraging and it is expected that when the campaign is over the amount raised here will be a credit to our province.

Most regretfully, at the beginning of this campaign some doubt was thrown upon the bona fides of this fund. It was stated in certain newspapers in England and reproduced in one or two in Canada that there was booting and graft in connection with the collections and that little of the food forwarded to the famine districts ever reached its destination.

All these charges have been thoroughly investigated and it has been proved to the satisfaction of well known public men, including our own Sir Louis Davies, Chief Justice of Canada, that every dollar of cash and every pound of food reaches its legitimate destination. This should be sufficient to assure us all that any charity extended to those unfortunate is secure.

As to the need of relief in Russia there is no question. It is known that millions are starving to death, that they are dying by the roadsides, that fathers and mothers are perishing while out searching for food for their starving children. It is known that the Russian famine is one of the most colossal catastrophes the world has ever known, and that the relief now slowly trickling in is bringing life and hope to men, women and children who a few months ago were hopelessly staggering under conditions so horrible and so inhuman as to be absolutely inconceivable to us.

What is our duty? Need we ask a Christian community? We who are well fed and well clothed, who have never known hunger, let alone starvation, whose children have never known want, what is our duty to those unfortunate? Our duty is to feed them, to give of our abundance to relieve, temporarily at least, their awful suffering.

What if there is a gang of thieves at the head of the Russian government? What if they have proved false to us? Our donations are well guarded from the thieves and the starving little children had no share in the guilt of the Russian traitors. The children are innocent and they are starving. Let us not stunt our charities. Let us measure as we have been measured unto, let us give as we are able, let us share our good things with those who are in want.

Contributions will be gratefully received and acknowledged by Mr. H. S. Stewart, Honorary Secretary, Charlottetown, and forwarded promptly to the official distributors.

LEGISLATIVE HUMOR

Although much of the work of the recent session was at the time regarded by the people more or less as a joke, the report of the proceedings, as it appears from day to day, carries a streak of unintentional humor which, read in the light of things as they are, reads like a chapter from Balzac. In yesterday's Guardian the report brings us up to the proceedings on April 27th when a section of the Election Act was being read in committee of the whole House. There were many opportunities here not only for a display of wisdom which at times assumed an uncanny prevision as to impending possibilities, but also a

Explanation Wanted

Sir,—I would like to ask through your valuable paper the explanation why tenders were not called for the proposed extension on the two Public Schools. We may add that by accident of the morning the tenders were to be opened we heard that this contract was going ahead, we were not even notified by phone. An explanation is demanded by the undersigned firm, this same firm paying the heaviest taxes of any builders in the city of Charlottetown.

We are, Sir, etc.

ship, one of the other three lawyers, Duffy or Hession or Saunders could be raised to the dignity of Attorney General and the government would be saved. This view of the matter may also explain to the wayfaring man, with the mental capacity aforesaid, why Messrs. Duffy, Hession and Saunders saw many good and substantial reasons why Clause 13 (2) should be relegated to the limbo of discarded and obsolete statutes. Even to Premier Bell there might have been good and substantial reasons besides traditional British usage, for leaving the clause as it always has been. Suppose the crew became mutinous again and desired to throw him overboard. They would have to appoint a successor and the successor would be obliged to run his election. No successor would accept the coveted honour on such terms. Had the clause been amended as the galaxy of Liberal lawyers desired, any one of the members might be raised to the dignity of Premier without a "by your leave" to his constituents. But the clause remains as a rock of defence to Mr. Bell and a serious obstacle to the opening of any of the constituencies either to release a potential judge or to create a new Attorney General.

Notes By The Way

(From the Examiner)

A highly interesting question is: What has become of all the people born in Canada during the 10 years 1911-1921, and all the immigrants that came to Canada during the same period? The question is discussed by Mr. W. B. Gates, B. A., in the latest issue of The Monetary Times.

The population of Canada in 1911 was 7,206,643, and in 1921 it was 8,769,489, an increase of 1,562,846. Now, during those ten years 1,892,746 immigrants came into Canada and there was an excess of births over deaths amounting to at least 1,000,000. Had we retained this natural increase and the immigrants who came to this country during the ten years the population of the Dominion in 1921 should have been 10,100,000 and not less than 8 1/2 millions as it was in 1921.

The natural increase of population in Canada is about 1.42 per cent. in 10 years, or, say, 1.42 per cent. per annum. By natural increase alone had we retained it since 1867 and without immigration at all, Canada should now have a population almost equal to that reported by the last census. But during the past 54 years the Dominion has received millions of immigrants.

The inevitable conclusion from the above facts must be that we have lost millions of people by their exodus to other lands, chiefly to the United States. And experience has proved that the exodus has been largest during those periods when immigration was largest. Unfortunately a very large proportion of the immigrants who come to Canada do not remain in this country.

It has been generally supposed that most of the immigrants coming to this country go to one or other of the Prairie Provinces or to British Columbia. Mr. Gates shows that this is not the fact. Of those who came to Canada during the past decade, Ontario received 652,007, and Quebec 296,071, or one-half the whole, while the Prairie Provinces and British Columbia received together $18,340, and the Maritime Provinces 96,318. We cannot believe that half this number remained in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, although that is officially set down as their destination.

New Brunswick and Nova Scotia together increased their population during the past ten years by 37,449, while the immigration to those two provinces is set down at 96,318. The loss of immigrants, or of natives, or of both together must have been 58,869, besides the natural increase which would be at least 100,000 more. Ontario's increase of population during the decade was 405,780 while the immigration to that province was set down at 652,007. If the immigrants stayed in Ontario the province must have lost in some way all its natural increase of over 400,000 and 316,227 more.

An important fact is demonstrated by the latest census and by previous censuses back as far as 1891 and it is this, that a large volume of immigration increases the exodus from among those previously living in the country. An immigrant per chance buys a farm of a previous settler, who migrates across the boundary. The same thing occurs among laborers, artisans, and in mercantile and professional life. Canada is by no means thickly populated, and yet a full volume of immigration always seems to crowd out a portion of the population that were in the country before. Chinese and Japanese immigration, although limited by law and head money has its share in producing this effect.

All of which goes to show how difficult and perplexing this problem of immigration is. It is said with a fair show of truth that we do not want immigrants to crowd our cities more than they are already crowded, but we do want more of them to settle on the land and become producers. But while we have abundant lands still vacant in the Northwest it will be hard to induce settlers to go there while times are so hard as they are at present. Thousands of prairie farmers, with good farms and well equipped with machinery have been making a yearly loss on their operations because of the low price of grains, high cost of labor and high freight rates.

The problem is, therefore, a very grave one, and although it will doubtless right itself in time, the end of the difficulty can only come by hard work and close economy on the part of individual workers, and of federal and provincial governments. Unfortunately while
