There's Always A First

LONDON, March 26—(Reuters)—A man who devoted his life to making guns safe for others died from gunshot wounds Tuesday.

Ralph Lawrence, 41-year-old official of the Worshipful Company of Gunmakers, was handling a new gun in the company's East London testing room when it went off, wounding him fatally in the neck.

The business of the firm, an ancient guild, is to test all new guns in Britain. Until it approves, they may not be bought or sold.

Tea Drinkers

TORONTO, March — Canada's national beverage?—Tea, of course. Believe it or not, we even out-rival the tea-drinking British at our two main meals of the day. A beverage habits survey in Britain compared with a similar Canadian survey by large fact-finding organizations reveals that 7 per cent more Canadians drink tea at lunch time (60% compared to 53%) and no less than 16 per cent more take tea with their evening meal (64% compared to 48%)—a revelation that amazed even the tea people. Where the British beats the Canadian, however, is at breakfast and in-between-meal periods. Even before they get out of bed 43% of Britishers have their morning "cuppa". But if the afternoon tea habit continues to regain its popularity in Canada—it already has recovered 30 per cent of the popularity it lost during the war years—then, who knows, maybe some day the Britisher may be looking at the Canadian as the world's most prolific tea drinker. Canadians now are drinking approximately nine billion cups of tea a year.

flying this way and that only a little above the fighters, once more snapping his bill. Mrs. Hooty did the same thing. In the nest high above, the young Owls were crying because they were hungry, because they had been left alone, and perhaps because they couldn't see what was going on down below. No one had eyes for anything but that fight. "Woof, woof! What goes on here?" asked a deep, rumbling, grumbly voice. The fight ended as sud-
