

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

NOVEMBER 23, 1889.

Notes and Comments.

A California wife gave away to a man jewels that were purchased with her husband's money.

New Zealand having renewed the San Francisco mail contract for twelve months pending a decision in favor of the Canadian route.

The Island Guardian acknowledges the correction of THE EXAMINER in respect to Father Damien and says: "The motives of THE EXAMINER may surely be questioned when it rushes in to the defence of a priest away out in Molokai."

It need hardly be said that there is nothing that is right which THE EXAMINER dare not say, though for lack of space, etc., it necessarily leaves many things unsaid which it would like to say.

The Souris correspondent of the Patriot refers enthusiastically to the defalcations in the Lead Office, in evident enjoyment of the whole affair, and ends by remarking: "What a fine thing it is to have an early training in the proper system of keeping accounts correctly without books."

If this lively correspondent were to call at the Lead Office, he would see, first of all, a small car to be wheeled into the vault at night, on which are no less than eighty ledgers. Then he might glance at the large, strongly-bound cash book, containing the names of every man who pays money into the office, the township to which he belongs, the estate on which is his farm, the date on which the payment is made, the folios of the ledger in which it is entered, and other particulars.

Personal.

Chief Justice Sullivan returned from St. Peter's last evening. He had been taking leave of his constituents.

The Prince of Wales is to go to Berlin towards the end of January on a visit to Emperor William.

Mrs. J. S. Carvell, wife of Governor Carvell of P. E. Island, arrived from Charlottetown last evening and registered at the Royal.—St. John Telegraph.

Mr. G. H. Toombs, of this city was registered at the Victoria Hotel, St. John on Thursday.

Archdeacon Jones and Rev. Mr. Steel will take part in the public temperance meeting, on Monday evening. Let there be a grand rally of citizens.

His Lordship Bishop McIntyre returned from Baltimore via Montreal last evening. He was accompanied by Revs. D. J. Gillis and A. J. Macdonald. Rev. S. Phelan also returned from Baltimore last evening. He comes by way of Pictou.

Sister St. Angelina arrived from Montreal last evening to resume charge of St. Joseph's Convent. She was accompanied by Sister St. Mary David, (daughter of David Egan, Esq., Mount Stewart).

Mr. George H. Reddin, of this city, was registered at the Royal Hotel, and now from her retreat in the Joliet Penitentiary she has brought out against the Ancient Order of Foresters the $2,000 death benefit. The Foresters do not concede such a benefit, but Varia.

The Emperor and Empress of Germany have been paying a visit to the Sultan of Turkey. The Sultan was nervously anxious to please the Imperial visitors. Many presents were given by him to his guests, including a necklace to the Empress which is said to be worth about $225,000.

In the singularly able speech just delivered by Mr. Davitt before the Parnell commission, two stories were related by him which are well worth preserving; and as I believe that this is the first time they have been stated publicly, I give them for THE EXAMINER readers. One was that a Mr. Sullivan, a prominent home ruler, left a card of sympathy on Lady Frederick Cavendish, and on the following morning he received a note from Lady Frederick in her own handwriting, thanking him for his sympathy, and assuring him that she did not lay her husband's murder at the door of the Irish nation—that she did not believe that the Irish people sought his life, or would be implicated in the tragedy of his death.

The following will deserve mention as an instance of how a man could be found to carry unreasoning hatred and bigotry into and beyond the grave. It is that of an English gentleman who had from his earliest years been educated in the most violent prejudices against the Irish, and who came, when advanced in life, to inherit a considerable property in the county of Tipperary, but under the express condition that he should reside on the land. To this decree he very reluctantly conformed; but his feelings towards the natives only grew more bitter in consequence. He died on the 17th day of March, 1791, and the following is a correct extract from his will: "I give and bequeath the annual sum of ten pounds, to be paid in perpetuity out of my estate, to the following purpose: It is my will and pleasure that this sum shall be spent in the purchase of a certain quantity of the liquor vulgarly called whiskey, and it shall be publicly given out that a certain number of persons, Irish only, not to exceed twenty, who may choose to assemble in the cemetery in which I shall be interred, on the anniversary of my death, shall have the same distributed to them. Further, it is my desire that each shall receive it by half a pint at a time till the whole is consumed, each being likewise provided with a stout oaken stick and a knife, and that they shall drink it all on the spot. Knowing what I know of the Irish character, my conviction is that, with these materials given, they will not fail to destroy each other; and when in the course of time the race comes to be exterminated, this neighborhood at least may, perhaps, be colonized by civilized and respectable Englishmen."

In reply to "S. C." I would say that I am not aware of anything special connected with the construction of the crown of Queen Victoria. So far as I have been able to find out it would seem to have been constructed out of the fragments of half a dozen bygone diadems which were broken up in 1838, including one worn by Mary Modena, those worn by Queen Caroline, Queen Charlotte, Mary II. and Anne, and others. The largest sapphire, which is partially drilled, was purchased by George IV. In the front of the diadem is a Maltese cross of diamonds; and in the centre of this cross is the famous ruby given to Edward, the Black Prince, by Pedro, King of Castile, after the battle of Navaja, A. D. 1367. This gem is pierced entirely through. It was worn by Henry V., in his helmet at Agincourt. Every other diamond, ruby, emerald, and pearl in the crown may have a history and a legend, but no authentic record of them has been preserved. The cap is of crimson velvet. The crown was first exhibited complete in 1838.

In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them."

Religious Notes.

One of the favorite sayings of Augustine was this: "Every saint in God's temple, and he who carries his temple with him may go to prayer when he pleaseth."

No man was ever so miserable in this world that he had not the most abundant reason to thank God; and this he will see if he will study the mercies that have been scattered along the track of his life.

Every man's character is almost certain to be affected for good or evil by the society with which he habitually mingles, and in which he finds his social pleasures. Hence the vast importance of selecting pure and virtuous companionships in life. This is especially the case with young people whose characters are in the forming stage.

"I desire that books and periodicals be selected with a view to create and sustain a healthy moral and Christian sentiment in the community, and that all nastiness and immorality be excluded. I do not mean by this that there shall not be anything but hymn-books and sermons; but I mean that dirty French novels and all skeptical trash and works of questionable moral tone shall never be found in this library. I want its atmosphere that of Christian refinement, and its aim and object the building up of character."

Whether another library was what Chicago most needed we do not assert; but the spirit and usefulness of the gift raise this bequest high in the annals of the history of beneficence. There is through the whole document a gracious and generous recognition of others, a trust in the wisdom of the future, in this case makes the dead hand not merely light but benedictive.

One of the most remarkable wills ever probated is that of John Crarer, of Chicago. He left an immense fortune acquired by Scotch thrift that had broadened and deepened his character. He provided for relatives and friends beautifully, and then distributes the rest of his estate to the public. Nearly a million dollars are given to various societies and Church benevolences, including $200,000 to his pastor. Then he gives $100,000 to erect a colossal statue of Abraham Lincoln, and directs that the rest of his estate, perhaps three and a half million dollars, be devoted to the erection and maintenance of a public library in a section of the city remote from the Newberry Library. And here comes in his care for his influence. We quote from his will:—

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Sewage Wells.

SIR,—In yesterday's EXAMINER we read with feelings of satisfaction a most explicit and conclusive letter from one well calculated, by reason of native talent, added to conscientious consideration, to give a correct verdict in this vexed question. Relying upon the resources of his own well-cultured mind, Dr. Taylor is not at all likely to be carried away with mere theories, however plausibly presented; and, with entire confidence, the public may accept the assurance which, without any dogmatic assumption, so skilled a scientist now presents. It would be highly injudicious to add to the indebtedness of our comparatively poor city by introducing an elaborate system of sewerage at the suggestion of those whose ideas, gleaned from foreigners, may suit certain conditions, but do not coincide with ours.

Yours, etc., CITIZEN.

Ch'town, Nov. 22, 1889.

SIR,—Dr. Taylor's clear and concise letter is in accordance with my experience. The waste water runs off from my well in a stream, and there is no bad odor from it that I can detect. To guard smells which may proceed from any oily matter that may attach itself to the side of the pipe leading to the subterranean stream, I have an air pipe leading from the well in the cellar to the outside of the house, and I also give the well an occasional flushing with boiling water. Nothing of an excrementitious character is permitted to go into it.
