

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

In the folk lore of Prince Edward Island we read about the loup-garou: one that kills and eats children, and another that, like the feux-follets, seeks the destruction of souls.

A pioneer who lived near Cape Wolfe had said his prayers, and was about to turn in for the night, when he heard a shout outside, and going to the door, saw a bearded fellow bound for a shanty near by where a man lay at the point of death.

The thing looked like a wolf, but its cry was human, and its eyes were like the eyes of the dreaded feux-follet.

Did you know that Mid-Lent Sunday used to be known as Rose Sunday? On this day the pope blessed a garden rose, which was first carried in procession, and then presented to the principal person then in the Eternal City.

Most everybody knows who the "printer's devil" is, but there are comparatively few who know how he came by the name.

Printing used to be called the "Black Art" and the boys who assisted the pressmen were called the imps.

There's no harm in being respected in this world, as I have found out, and if you don't push a little for yourself, depend upon it there is no person of your acquaintance who will tell the world of your merits, and take the trouble off your hands.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. DOUGALD C. MACDONALD

Mrs. Dougald C. MacDonald died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Naddy, on December 14, 1953, aged 77.

Her health failed gradually and for the last year she lived with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Naddy, Owerd Camp Hill hospital, Halifax.

Solemn Requiem Mass was offered by her pastor, Reverend U. Gillis, at St. Joachim's Church, Vernon River, on December 17th.

Mrs. MacDonald's mortal remains were laid to rest in St. Joachim's cemetery beside those of her husband who died twenty-four years ago.

He came by the name. Printing used to be called the "Black Art" and the boys who assisted the pressmen were called the imps.

There's no harm in being respected in this world, as I have found out, and if you don't push a little for yourself, depend upon it there is no person of your acquaintance who will tell the world of your merits, and take the trouble off your hands.
