Holstein Breeders Told Of Sales Organization

The need of a satisfactory sales organization in the Maritime Provinces for Holstein breeders here could share in the profitable export market was stressed by John Powell Bradford, chief of Elmer MacDonald's Holstein farm on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Powell, who spoke in his capacity as director of extension for the National Holstein Association, said the black and white cow is a winner with three out of four of all the Canadian dairy cows being Holsteins. World figures are just as convincing and prove the black and white is "the world's most popular dairy cow," he said.

There is a great demand for cattle in the export market but the buyers will not spend the time to visit individual breeders to get the 40 or 50 head they need. The major part of the selection must be done through a sales selection organization similar to the Hays Brothers in Ontario, he insisted.

Mr. Powell told his paper later that it would mean an average price of $350 for every animal sold which, he suggested, would run considerably higher than prices received in the domestic market for some 1,800 Maritime breeders, who would sell an estimated average of 10 head apiece.

Breeders could notify such an organization when they have animals to sell, said Mr. Powell, who explained how such sales organizations work effectively in other provinces.

Mr. Powell suggested that in a small area like this, possibly it might be well to have the sales organization handle some of the other cattle breeds as well.

CONTINUING DEMAND

There is a continuing demand for Canadian Holsteins which are shipped to 20 countries of the world because of the fine reputation for type and quality that Canadian breeders have built up, he emphasized.

S. B. Williams, director, general production and marketing, Canada department of agriculture, Ottawa spoke on the changing trends in agriculture and the steps farmers must take to keep pace with changing requirements.

He emphasized the value, for example, of cutting production costs and suggested one good way is to produce more "yests" over a 30-year period at one experimental farm, he said, had shown that it cost $1.69 a bushel of oats for a 35-bushel crop but only 75 cents per bushel for a 67-bushel per acre crop.

Mr. Powell was introduced by Grant Floyd, S.N.B. director of the national Holstein executive, Mr. Williams was introduced by Stewart Randles, senior livestock fieldman, Canada department of agriculture, Charlottetown, who goes to Ottawa shortly to take charge of R.O.P. work with swine. They were thanked by Rudy Steves, N.B. department of agriculture.

MODELS PRESENTED

Mr. Powell presented models of the desirable Holstein cow 40 a number of 4-H Club members who had won distinction in the All-Canadian judging competition.

Host Elmer MacDonald is one of the finest dairy farmers in the province and a credit to P.E.I., said Agriculture Minister Andrew MacRae, who extended a welcome on behalf of the province.
