

Irish Elections Held Yesterday

Some Confusion Prevails With Respect to Proportional Representation Vote and Divergent Views of Respective Leaders.

(Special to The Guardian)
DUBLIN, June 16.—Irishmen today are voting, very much befuddled as a result of the inexplicable attitude of the various leaders, also because of the fact that "independent" candidates representing four groups of citizens all want something different in the new government and the fact that for the first time they are faced with the perplexities of the proportional representation ballot.

The whole thing has become so complicated that a goodly percentage of the people have refused to be bothered about it. Reports in Dublin show the electioneering committee's greatest difficulty has been to stir up any interest. This apathy has led to one good result at least that the cases of intimidation expected will be less prevalent than feared a fortnight ago. There may be surprises as usual in Irish politics, but leaders in Dublin fear trouble in only one district, Wicklow, where Erskine Childers is the panel candidate for re-election. It is remembered that Childers is mostly of English blood and that his extreme views have been severely attacked in Ireland and England. It is reported that extremists in Wicklow intend to see him returned no matter how the voters themselves feel about it, which of course means force, either by means of threats or actual gunplay. If there is trouble in other sections it will come unexpectedly.

Premier Poincare Visiting in London

Object of Visit is to Consult Regarding Reconstruction of Verdun Also to Confer With Premier Lloyd George on Reparations.

(Special to The Guardian)
LONDON, June 16.—Premier Poincare arrived in London tonight and was met at the station by a most distinguished company of representatives of British men including Lord D'Almeida and Lord Cavan. Marshal Pétain who reached London yesterday was also present to greet the chief executive. The ostensible purpose of Poincare's visit is to urge upon Londoners the adoption of a scheme that has been carefully prepared by Poincare will take the opportunity of meeting Lloyd George on Monday at a private conference when reparations will be discussed and the whole question of the economic restoration of Russia will be canvassed. After the conference the two premiers will lunch together according to present arrangements. The visit of the French premier coming as it does at the very beginning of the Hague Conference is regarded as extremely significant by observers. Premier Poincare will not have an audience with the King but it is extremely likely that he will meet the Duke of York and Prince Henry as he has expressed his intention of being present at the Anglo-French tournament tomorrow where the two British princes will also attend. After the games the trophy will be presented to the winners by Madame Poincare.

Grave Menace Facing Christianity in East

Urgent Need of Stronger Support of Foreign Mission Enterprise Stressed by Mr. M. Jessop at Y.M.C.A. Last Night.

The grave danger threatening Christian influence in the East from Bolshevist propaganda among the Moslem nations was emphasized by Mr. W. Jessop, Canadian national secretary for foreign work of the Y.M.C.A., at a well attended meeting in the Y.M.C.A. rooms last night. His Worship Mayor Jenkins, as chairman of the foreign work committee, presided and introduced the speaker who has a wide and varied experience in eastern countries.

One of the underlying reasons for the present state of unrest in India is the Bolshevist propaganda, carried out in China as well, where Soviet ideas are gaining influence. This was plainly evident at the National Work Federation convention held last May at Pekin, where a counter-attack, taken up by non-Christian sects, showed unmistakable traces of it. The union of Mahometan and Soviet forces would be a very serious blow to Christianity throughout the eastern hemisphere.

Messages from Mars Are Not Satisfactory

Marconi in Best Equipped Radio Room in the World Awaits Messages from Mars.

(Special to The Guardian)
HUDSON RIVER, June 16.—Mysterious sounds came from out the ether to the powerful but delicate receiving sets in Senator William Marconi's private cabin during his fortnight's vigil on the Atlantic waiting messages from Mars.

But the visiting planet closer now than for nine years, failed to communicate definitely with the earth, the inventor said upon arrival of New York today. "I listened practically all the time, day and night for two weeks," Marconi said in an exclusive interview with the United Press. "I had my own instruments ready so they would receive from anybody, no matter where or who might send." "Several times, I heard mysterious sounds. I could not understand or explain. I do not think they were from Mars, in fact, I am not certain if Martians are trying to communicate, but I was there to do everything possible to record messages if any were sent. I shall continue to try to receive communications from Mars, however slight the chances of success. Sunday, when the planet comes closest to us, I shall be on the job, as you say, all day, and shall pay every attention to pick up possible messages from the Martians."
