DAIRY COMMANDMENTS.

As I know many readers are much interested in dairy work, I will give them the French commandments issued to dairy maids in a certain pastoral district. There seems at first glance to be a spice of humor in them.

1-Arise briskly at daybreak. This is a very necessary qualification, as the sooner the cows are attended to the better the quality and quantity of the milk.

2-Wash and clothe yourself properly. The dairy maid is not cleanly, and her dress sweet and free from dust and dirt it is sure to contaminate the milk.

3-Only on Sundays and holidays must you gossip or enjoy the society of the farm boys. Men who are wont to loaf about the stable and farm yard, or amongst sick stock, such as pigs suffering from swine fever, or horses with the glanders, might communicate by contact their clothing clothes and hands the milk. On Sunday and holidays the milk maid would have exchanged her working dress for holiday attire, the men also. No time should be wasted in gossip. These remarks cover the ground for the issuing of our No. 1 and No. 2, but the following:

4-Old and young thou shalt turn out of the dairy. 5-Reserve thy caresses solely for the cows. Cattle diseases might be communicated by the milking or stroking dogs, horses or other animals.

6-Milk with gentleness if you would have abundance of milk. 7-Rough, frolicsome milking tends to irritate the animals. They resent it and hold back the milk. This causes the milking to be of a bad, strong odor. In fact, induces putrefaction, instead of sour fermentation, which is required for butter and cheese making.

8-Without too much haste, and patiently churn the cream. Too rapid manipulation of the churn or intermittent fits of slow and fast working are fatal to butter making.

9-On thy return from market thy purse shall be well filled. Good butter always commands a good price, and is much sought by the market woman must give her attention to selling it well.

10-For the means of these precepts thou shalt enter directly into Paradise. The dairy maid's paradise here is, no doubt, a clean dairy. A foul, motion producing the stearns and death amongst many people. But the dairy maid is reminded that the careful performance of daily duties, however mundane, will eventually bring her the desired reward. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Good milk should be of an opaque white or light cream color. The color varies just as the shells of eggs do; some being white, others a light shade of yellowish brown, and cream color. Jersey and Devon cattle give the dark milk. Ayrshire and some cross breeds the white. Good milk gives off a sweet spirit of essential volatility, the great aroma which is pleasant. When the spirit evaporates the alkaline properties seem to disperse, and sour fermentation sets in.

11-If the cow is sick or lame, she has been over milked, or badly milked, the milk is feverish, has a bad odor, and soon gives out a disagreeable smell. It will spoil milk mixed with it or disfigure it in cream. A specific gravity of 9.80 to 10.20 degrees is a general finding in good dairies, especially during summer feeding. In winter, Wallace, Goddard, in the Housewife.

Putting Up Pumpkins. Pumpkins can be canned or dried. To can, fill the cans with the stewed and sifted pumpkin, cook 20 minutes in a kettle of water and seal. To dry, stew the pumpkins for an hour, then spread on plates, when stirred away from the bottom of the kettle water will not get there. When cool sift and spread on plates, when stirred away from the bottom of the kettle water will not get there.

Madrid, October 9.—Steamers at Calla are being made ready for the transportation of reinforcements for the Spanish army in Cuba. All the fresh troops will be despatched by November 15. It is expected a powerful squadron will be sent to reinforce the fleet in Cuban waters. Popular opinion is beginning to fear a change in the relations between Spain and the United States in consequence of the agitation in the latter country in favor of the Cuban insurgents.
