Editors of other newsletters are welcome to reprint articles from the Island Naturalist (except when copyrighted) but acknowledgment would be appreciated.

THIS MONTHS COVER

The Belted Kingfisher is an unusual overwinter resident of Prince Edward Island. This year several kingfishers were seen during the Montague Christmas Bird Count. The Belted Kingfisher nests in burrows excavated in banks. If you see a kingfisher carrying food into a quarry or bank area during May or June, watch it closely and see if you can confirm nesting. If you do, let Rosemary Curley know so it can be confirmed for that square in the Atlas.
