THE third preliminary race for the gold medal will take place at the Roller Rink to-night. The Band of the 2nd Battalion, with a choice selection of music, will be in attendance. The contestants are Newson, Brecken, Trainer, Large, Taylor, Burns and Jenkins.

INSTEAD of opposing the introduction of a pure water supply into our city, if the energetic ruling power of the Civic Board would seek to remove the various nuisances prejudicial to the health of our people, they would be doing their constituents a benefit, and would themselves receive a good amount of credit.

TEN years ago all our fine manufactured tobacco came from the United States. But with each month and year after year the superior quality of the "Myrtle Navy" is now known in every village in the Dominion, and is as familiar to the smokers upon the Atlantic and Pacific coasts as to those of the city in which it is manufactured.

At a meeting of yachtmen, held in the city of John Coombs, Esq., last evening, it was decided to hold the sweepstakes yacht race on Wednesday, 30th inst. The race will be for boats of twenty feet keel and under, and it is expected that eight or ten boats will take part. The weather will be subject to the approval of Mr. Coombs and Captain Mitchell.

L. O. E.—A most enjoyable time was spent at Oddfellows' Hall last evening, on the occasion of the fraternal visit of Wilsey Lodge to their brethren of St. Lawrence Lodge. A well-prepared programme was very efficiently rendered to a large concourse of the members of the Order. We understand that it is the intention of the several Lodges to continue those interesting reunions during the approaching winter season.

We are sorry to say there seems to be a disposition on the part of our civic rulers to tempt Providence to scourge us with some fearful epidemic. One of our citizens while passing through Queen Square yesterday afternoon became suddenly ill on account of inhaling the poisonous atmosphere at the fish hucksters stand, north side of the market. It is a crying shame that such a sink of pollution is allowed to remain in the very heart of our own town. While neighboring cities are being visited with fatal maladies, carrying off their victims by the hundreds, we on this favored Island and in this beautiful situated city are by our studied neglect of the observances of sanitary regulations actually inviting death to our shores. We earnestly hope that those in authority will immediately see that this abominable disgrace is removed.

A Heavy Suit.

A suit was entered in court at Montreal on the 17th inst., by Mr. Finlay for Mr. McLevy, of Montreal, against the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, claiming damages to the amount of $22,628. He alleges that he had been since 1883 trading along the company's line, furnishing goods to the workmen employed by them, and at the same time carrying on trade with the public and paying the Company large sums of money for freight and passage dues. Last June he was informed that Mr. H. Abbott, the Company's agent, intended to make a monopoly of all the trade on their line with their workmen and other people. He hastened to collect the amounts due to him by doing this, he says, he was forcibly expelled from a Canadian Pacific Railway train, although he possessed a regular passenger ticket. He was allowed upon a second train and again expelled near Kinogami. He was obliged to find shelter, and was abandoned for several days, and subsequently taken up by a passing train.

The English Political Situation.

The New York Tribune's London cable says that Gladstone's manifesto overshadows all other political topics, but the Conservatives make much of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach's address at Cirencester, in which is found the first sketch of the Tory domestic programme. The spiritless disapproval of Mr. Parnell has, however, failed to satisfy the old-fashioned Conservatives and Mr. Plunkett's allusions at Gloucester to the Irish question, increases this uneasiness. The nebulous proposition of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach and the general anxiety of the Conservatives rank and file respecting Ireland, invest Lord Salisbury's deliverance, which may be shortly expected, with increasing importance.

The Sun's London cable says: The desire for victory in the parliamentary campaign has swallowed everything else in both parties. Even Mr. Chamberlain has gone back very considerably on his denunciations of Parnell's proposals, and now advocates a scheme which is tantamount to Home Rule to the germ. For the same reason Sir Michael Hicks-Beach now refers to Ireland in terms of the utmost caution. Gladstone has apparently succeeded in pleasing both sides. All classes of Liberals declare themselves delighted with their new creed, which, according to the more enthusiastic, contains views so broad as to rub off all corners of factional disagreement and assure a perfect cohesion for the future. The Tories, on the other hand, are chuckling with pleasurable feelings of amazement over the manifesto. They make special reference to the absurdity of championing a rising of the nation in the East, after England's departure from Egypt, and declare that this jumping from the frying pan into the fire would certainly embroil the country in war within a year. They say that the raising in Roumelia points to a moral and is a striking comment on Mr. Gladstone's oriental optimism. Everybody now admits that the ex-premier will retire from politics after the elections, whether he succeeds or fails, and that a careful reading between the lines of the manifesto reveals this intention. Lord Salisbury is hard at work preparing a trenchant campaign document in the shape of a letter, which will soon be made public, and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, the Tory Chancellor of the Exchequer, will also fully explain the policy of his party at a Conservative demonstration on Oct. 15. Gladstone's ambiguous reference to the possible disestablishment of the Church stirs churchmen. This the Tories are essaying to augment into a panic, thus hoping to attract both clerical votes and influence.

The Herald's London cable says: Gladstone's vague address, and his plain intimation that he will lead the Liberals only on the battlefield and afterwards disappear from political life, increases the intensity of the silent struggle for the Liberal leadership. Under this incitement Mr. Chamberlain has developed astonishing powers as a public speaker during the past week and he begins to be hailed as a most powerful stump speaker and next to Mr. Gladstone. His journey through Scotland has been in many respects a triumphal progress, marked by some few signs of that hero worship which has been an exclusive attribute of Mr. Gladstone. Small gifts, like a silver-mounted shepherd's crook, which was presented by the inhabitants of Garmore, show the feeling among the people.

The French Elections.

The Herald's Paris cable says: We are on the eve of another general election in France and a very lively election it bids fair to be, as different as possible from the languid warfare waged since the definite triumph of Republicanism. The cleared ground of constitutional question and the death of Gambetta removed one great figure from the political chessboard. The reactionaries of all shades, Bonapartists, Orléanists, Catholic and Left Centre, have buckled on their armour, put their private flags in their pockets, sworn mutual friendship and reformed their ranks to battle together against the two great sections of the Republican party. All well-adversaries have been bullying and belittling each other at crowded meetings. Nor have the Radicals and Opportunists have been more tender in dealing with each other's feelings, than both have been in outraging their common foes. Self-styled Conservatives and Republican dissensions may do something here and there to assure the success of the Conservative ticket, but one need not be a prophet to foresee that the majority of the next chamber will again be Republican. The country is not yet ripe for sweeping changes of principle, though unquestionably it is sick enough of many Republican personages. The Conservatives have neither a greater leader to arouse the popular enthusiasm nor a programme grand enough to turn the masses from the Republic. M. Ferry's fiascos have disgusted the people with the colonial adventures, but as M. Ferry now admits that the colonial trick is played out, while M. M. Brisson and de Freycinet never pretended that they cared a button for the colonies, the enemies of the Republicans have had the most of the wind taken out of their sails. Their champions failed to get a hearing at the circus on Wednesday night, and the announcement that M. Paul de Cassagnac, Baron Houssin and other well-known Bonapartists would stand for Paris, led to a desperate riot in which blood flowed freely and scores of electors had their heads broken. M. Clemenceau has shown that he possesses at least one quality essential in a statesman—coolness. At a stormy electoral meeting at Dole, after he had, not without difficulty, relieved himself of his speech, he was savagely attacked by M. Trouillot, oppositionist candidate. M. Clemenceau's face just then was a study. It had the calm imperturbance of Diaræli and the sneer of Mephistopheles. For a time he made no sign whatever, but the oppositionist only grew more violent, when at last he became insulting. M. Clemenceau crossed his arms and tilted his hat over his forehead. At last, when the speaker began to foam at the mouth, the Radical leader lit a cigar, twirled his moustache, and waved his hand. This was too much for the excitable Opportunist, who resumed his seat amid the jeers and groans of the audience. It jered and groaned just as much at M. Clemenceau, however, the next moment.
