Nobody Knows but Mother.

BY H. C. DODGE.
Nobody knows of the work it makes
To keep the home together;
Nobody knows of the steps it takes,
Nobody knows but mother.
Nobody listens to childish woes
Which kisses only smother;
Nobody's pained by naughty blows,
Nobody—only mother.
Nobody knows of the sleepless care
Bestowed on baby brother;
Nobody knows of the tender prayer,
Nobody—only mother.
Nobody knows of the lessons taught
Of loving one another;
Nobody knows of the patience sought,
Nobody—only mother.
Nobody knows of the anxious fears
Lest darlings may not weather
The storm of life in after years,
Nobody knows—but mother.
Nobody kneels at the throne above
To thank the Heavenly Father,
For that sweetest gift—a mother's love;
Nobody can—but mother.

The Parnell Letter.

THE IRISH LEADER'S DENUNCIATION OF THE PUBLICATION IN THE LONDON "TIMES."
(By cable to the Boston Sunday Herald.)

The publication of the Parnell letter Monday morning was well-timed to influence wavering members of the house of commons in favor of the Coercion Bill, which came up for a second reading that night. The home rulers naturally ascribe the unexpected dimensions of the majority for the Government to the sensational disclosure. This, however, is denied by the ministerial whips, who claim that every advance of the division, Mr. Balfour, the chief secretary for Ireland, contrived that Mr. Parnell should not get an opportunity to speak until one o'clock, so his speech, which closed the debate on the second reading, could only be briefly summarized in the morning papers. When, at last, the Irish leader had a chance to meet the charge, there was no equivocation or doubt about his utterances. He characterized the letter as a villainous and barefaced forgery, and in strong ringing sentences denounced the attempt to fasten the authorship upon him. It was only in the closing sentences that he displayed any feeling other than indignation. But when he said that he had suffered more than any other man, and the Irish nation more than any other nation, his voice faltered, and his face, which at the beginning of the declaration had turned ashy pale, flushed with suppressed feeling. His manifest emotion had a marked effect upon the house.

The Times, which undoubtedly believes that it has a good case, has reiterated the charge daily, and its example is followed by the conservative papers, as well as by many conservative politicians and not a few liberal unionists. They argue that the burden of disproof rests on Mr. Parnell. Declining to accept his denials, they say that he must bring evidence to support them. Whether he will enter a libel suit, as invited by the Times, is doubtful, for his friends claim that in the present excited condition of public opinion he could not look for a verdict on the evidence from a London jury. It is also uncertain whether an official inquiry will be made on the authority of the house. Speaker Peel has ruled that, under the circumstances, it is competent for Mr. Sexton to elicit facts bearing upon the origin of a printed letter, and his decision makes it possible to deal with the matter as a question of privilege. It is rumored that, if Mr. Parnell takes no steps for an investigation, the government have decided to move for a committee of inquiry into the matter. There is, of course, much curiosity to learn whence the Times obtained the letter. But so far the secret has been well kept. Mr. Labouchere suggests that the document was furnished by some informer to Mr. Forster, after whose death somebody less scrupulous gave it to the press; that it was originally obtained of Richard Pigott, a former nationalist, who has profited by sundry so-called revelations, or that it was bought of some former servant of Mr. Parnell, who pretended to have stolen it. But Mr. Pigott denies the allegation, and Henry Campbell, Parnell's secretary, now a member for Fermanagh, asserts that the servant story is untenable.

The London correspondent of the Freeman's Journal, in to-day's letter, says that the Times articles on "Parnellism and Crime" are the handiwork of J. Wolfe Flanagan. The Times has evidently spared neither pains nor expense in fortifying its position, for the editor of a London paper discovered on applying to the most authoritative experts in handwriting for an opinion on the alleged Parnell signature that the Times had already retained all but one of them, and that this one had been consulted by a news agency on the point. The Times declares positively that it is able to produce undeniable signatures of Mr. Parnell in which every one of the peculiarities of the disputed signatures are found. I hear from a trustworthy source that it has no fewer than twelve other letters, and that these will be published as occasion requires. The unionists claim that these letters affect not only Mr. Parnell, but some of his prominent followers. There is a possibility that the mysterious documents may be produced in the libel suit brought by St. John Brenon against Messrs. Ridgeway, the publishers of a pamphlet called the Black Book, in which Mr. Brenon is named as an emissary and agent between the Irish Fenians and their confederates on the continent. The case has been hanging in the courts for a year, but it is to come up on Monday, and rumor says that the defendants have subpoenaed Mr. Sexton, and that they propose to call Mr. Parnell as a witness and to introduce the documents held by the Tories. In the meantime the Irish leader has gone to Avondale, and it is understood that the purpose of this journey is to follow up a clue to the authorship of the famous letter. He returns on Tuesday to be present when the House of Commons goes into committee on the crimes bill.

FROM Rev. E. S. Eford, tPastor Baptist Church, East Auburn, Me.: "Adamson's Botanic Balsam is truly a specific. My lungs and throat were in an inflamed and almost congested condition from which I have been cured by the use of Adamson's Botanic Balsam." Price 10 cents, 35 cents 75 cents.

Home Rule Agitation.

GLADSTONE CONSIDERS THE "TIMES" LETTER A BASE AND MALICIOUS FORGERY, AND THINKS THAT A LIBEL SUIT WOULD BE USELESS.—LORD ROSEBERY (AND MR. TREVELLYAN ON THE IRISH QUESTION).

It has transpired that Mr. Gladstone in his speech at the dinner given by labor members of Parliament declared his entire disbelief in the accusations made against the Irish leaders. Mr. Gladstone said that in May, 1882, immediately after the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish and under-Secretary Burke, in Phoenix Park, Mr. Parnell wrote him a letter with reference to the crime. The contents of that letter, which had obviously been written under great mental distress, throw considerable light upon the topic of the present hour, and was strong evidence in favor of the contention that the Times' letter was a base and malicious forgery. Mr. Parnell, apparently foreseeing that in the public mind he would be associated with the crime, offered to place himself without reserve in Mr. Gladstone's hands. He wrote that he regarded the murders with the utmost abhorrence, and he offered to resign the leadership of the Irish party and retire altogether from political life. Mr. Gladstone considered such a step inadvisable in the interests of Ireland. Mr. Gladstone said he would refrain from saying what reply he made, adding that it was only a short time since he obtained Mr. Parnell's assent to his mentioning the matter. Alluding to the advice tendered Mr. Parnell from certain quarters that he bring action against the Times, Mr. Gladstone said that many years ago when he was commissioner to the Ionian Islands, the Times bitterly attacked him, accusing him of treason. On returning to England he consulted a famous lawyer with the view of bringing an action, but was dissuaded from taking legal steps, the lawyer expressing the conviction that even if Mr. Gladstone proved the case, no jury in the then state of public mind would be likely to convict the Times. Mr. Gladstone's statement has caused an absorbing sensation in the clubs, but has not yet appeared in the press. The Conservatives talk of challenging the production of the letters.

Lord Rosebery, in a speech at Glasgow said he had an almost unlimited belief in Mr. Gladstone. The Government, he said, by pressing their wanton Coercion bill were raising an agitation that would certainly lead to a general election. With regard to the assertion that if Home Rule were granted to Ireland, that country would fall under the control of the American Irish, he said it was his belief that if Mr. Gladstone's bill had been passed the Irish would now resent interference from New York as much as they had always resented interference from England.

Sir Geo. O. Trevelyan writes: "The passage of the crimes bill as it stands would lay Ireland bound hand and foot to the mercy of the party in ascendancy in Ireland, which has never governed justly and never will, besides postponing quite indefinitely the conciliation and settlement of Ireland. The doctrine that the bill must be supported in order to keep the present government in power is the most unsound and dangerous one ever openly broached since I have been in public life."

Building in Toronto.

Building in Toronto promises to be on an unusual scale, this year. The Ontario Legislature has sanctioned the contract with Lionel York for the "walls" of the new public buildings, at a cost of $752,000. The whole cost cannot be less than a million, and may grow into something more. The new Court House and city Buildings which have been especially authorized by a vote of the rate-payers will cost the bulk of a million. The bank of Commerce is to put up a new building, and so is the Canada Life Assurance Company. In addition, the Victoria College buildings are begun, the list of public edifices will be large. Private buildings are required each year to house an addition of several thousand to the population, and of late years house room has always kept well in advance of actual needs. Unless something should occur to decrease the amount of building now contemplated, the total will be unusually large.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.
