TWO CABLES TO EUROPE

WHEN THESE ARE LAID THERE WILL BE 12 ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

Interesting Description of the Work of Laying Them On the Bed of the Ocean—Something of the History of Ocean Telegraphy.

Two more cables are being laid across the Atlantic. There are at present ten cables connecting the Old with the New World, but so rapidly has the cable business grown that they are inadequate to handle it all. It was on Aug. 16, 1858, that the first message was sent under the Atlantic, but the cable broke down twenty-three days afterwards and communication was not resumed until July, 1866, since which time it has been uninterrupted.

The original charge for a message, while there was only one cable in existence, was $5 per word, but the laying of new cables, with consequent competition, has brought the price down to 25 cents per word, and, as a result, the business has enormously increased. Now one of the cable companies is adding to its equipment by putting down two cables, the shore ends of which are now being laid. No cables had been laid during the previous ten years, but experiment in the meanwhile has shown many improvements, and these have been incorporated in the new lines.

The cables have been made by Siemens Bros. & Co., whose factory at Woolwich, England, has been working night and day to complete the order, so that the cable may be laid during the early spring. Altogether 2,201 nautical miles of cable have been made, and these consumed 495 tons of copper wire, 315 tons of gutta percha, 575 tons of jute yarn, 3,000 tons of steel wire and 1,075 tons of compound and tar, making a total weight of 5,460 tons. The order for the cable was given Nov. 21 of last year, and rapid work was begun at once.

The cable is largely made by machinery, and the twisting of the wire and covering with tar and gutta percha are done by automatic apparatus. The deep-sea portion of the cable, which is the smallest part of it in size but the longest in length, was manufactured at the rate of five nautical miles per day by one machine, and there being ten machines of this kind at work there were fifty-five miles of deep-sea cable turned out every twenty-four hours. The shore ends of the cable, however, required much more time to manufacture. It is necessary that these should be very large and strong. As long as the cable lies along the bed of the ocean it is out of harm's way. No storms, however violent, can reach it. It is not affected by any change of the temperature, and it is too deep to be molested by fish or any kind of marine creature.

It is therefore only necessary in the deep-sea portion of the cable that the little copper wires in the "core," which convey the message, be thoroughly insulated and kept dry. This is accomplished by their being covered with a coating of jute and gutta-percha, over which is a sheathing of small steel wires. This sheathing increases in strength and protective power as the shallow water is approached, and there are seven different sizes in the new cables. The "core" containing the copper wires along which the messages are sent is carried through all sizes unchanged. The heaviest part of the cable is that which is near the shore, where the motion of the waves may wash it to and fro among the rocks and stones, that would otherwise soon cut it. Along the Banks of Newfoundland fishing schooners anchor and occasionally pick up the cable, and that contingency has to be provided for in weight and strength.

From the time the cable is finished until it is paid out over the stern of the cable-laying steamer Faraday, it is never allowed to get dry. It is kept in large tanks of water and transferred to such tanks aboard the Faraday, where it is coiled up. The Faraday started some three weeks ago from England with the shore ends, and will return for the deep-sea portion of the cable, 1,500 miles long, about the middle of June. When the shore end is all paid out it will be buoyed, and the Faraday, coming back some weeks or a month later, will look around for the buoy in order to pick up the cable again.

Thus passengers across the Atlantic this summer may see a buoy away out in the ocean, but mariners will be warned to let it alone, as it marks the end of one of the sections of the new cable. The Faraday can lay the deep-sea portion of the cable at the rate of seven nautical miles per hour, proceeding under almost a full head of steam. The cable is simply paid out from the stern like a rope. Occasionally, however, the steamer will stop and pay out a lot of cable before proceeding. This is done where she comes to a cliff or a sudden fall in the bottom of the ocean, which is not level, as some people imagine, but has all the topographical features of dry land.

The Faraday is provided with maps of the bottom of the ocean as accurate as if made by submarine surveyors. At all points it is sought to have the cable actually resting on the bottom and not stretching from hill to hill. While the Faraday is laying the cable electricians on board are constantly keeping up communication with the shore, so as to see that it is in good running order, and while in the middle of the Atlantic the officers of the ship may learn the latest news. When a buoy is picked up the submerged end of the cable is slowly hauled aboard and carefully spliced to the other section. It is estimated that the Faraday will lay the deep-sea section of the cable in about ten days.

To Whiten the Teeth.

A homely set of teeth will spoil the prettiest mouth ever fashioned after cupid's bowstring. On the other hand, a commonplace face becomes positively attractive when the lips open and disclose two rows of clean, well-kept ivories. They need not be like dentrifice advertisements, and the "pearls" of the old-fashioned heroine are in this practical age but slightly esteemed, but there must be about the well-groomed mouth a wholesome, cleanly look. Precipitated chalk will keep the teeth in fine condition. Have a box of it always on your toilet stand and see what it will do towards freshening up a dingy mouthful of teeth.—New York World.

Small Feet Growing Scarce.

To the unpracticed eye there is little change in shoes for feminine wear, but it is a fact that small feet are growing more scarce every day. Women now find themselves wearing a No. 5 who formerly wore a No. 4. Amply large shapes are just now the thing, made with low broad heel, pointed toe and a straight edge or buttoned lap. In contrast for dressy wear are those with arched instep and Louis Quinze heels. Patent leather Oxford ties for summer will divide favor with russet —Philadelphia Times.

NEWCOMB MILLS, June 18.—Chester Looms, a well known farmer living near here, has for years been afflicted with kidney disease, so badly that he could not sit in a buggy to drive to town. He has not done any farm work for years, but he helped to put in this spring's crops, and anyone who goes to see him to-day will find him betwee the plough-handles instead of laid out on a bed or an easy chair as he used to be.

A member of a volunteer fire brigade did not appear at the scene of the conflagration until the fire was under control. The chief of the fire department reproached him bitterly for his neglect of duty.
